Multi-Million Industry Is Looking for Home

By DONALD M. SOUTTER

The Town of Trenton would feel the pinch if Central Bridge were to close its doors.

It would be a major economic disaster for the entire Quinte area if any one of these moves were to take place.

This points up the impact industry has on our way of life.

An "industry" which has a 50-50 chance of locating somewhere in the Quinte district is the College of Applied Arts and Technology which is scheduled to open its doors to 700 students next September.

The college will be housed in temporary quarters and at the moment the chief possibilities seem to rest with the Trenton-Belleville district or Peterborough.

Ontario's Council of Regents, the governing body which will control the 16 colleges to be established over the next five years, says the primary factor is to get the colleges started — its permanent site can be determined later.

However, most people would agree landing the temporary school might be just the edge needed to swing the permanent buildings when construction is to start.

How do you translate 700 students, staff and buildings into dollar impact on the community?

In Kingston, Queen's University with an enrolment of 4,000 estimated its annual dollar impact as $12,000,000 in 1964.

This included salaries for academic and non-academic staff, that portion of spending for new buildings which stayed in Kingston, expenditures for supplies, repairs, fuel, savings, salaries for research staff and student spending.

In the Quinte district, many of the students could commute from their homes. Yet even at $500 for an initial class of 700, it would mean $350,000 a year, which would be lost to the Quinte area if the college were to be located elsewhere.

If eventual enrolment were to climb to the 3,000 figure and most of the students to come from outside the immediate area, it would mean the student annual spending would blossom to somewhere in the neighborhood of $3,000,000.

At Queen's University the ratio of staff to students is approximately one staff member, academic or non-academic, to three students.

If a figure of $4,000 were taken as an average salary it would bring the payroll for an institution of 1,000 students to $1,200,000.

The probability is that the annual expenditure of money in the area by the students, by the college itself — in salaries and operating expenses — would total about $3,000,000 for an institution with a student body of 1,000.

Next: Bonuses that go with colleges.

Lake Huron Gale Sinks Freighter

Arctic Air Flows In

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Cold arctic air spread over most of Canada today and the lowest temperatures of the season are expected in some regions.

A storm centred over Hudson Bay is forcing arctic air over the Prairies, Ontario and parts of Quebec.

The cold front follows a Tuesday storm that sank a freighter on Lake Huron, dumped several inches of snow on Northern Ontario communities and brought high winds and snow squalls to southern points.

Temperatures plunged in Northern Ontario after the storm, and Wednesday night Sudbury reported a 10-degree drop in less than four hours.

Sixth Worst Disaster

HARBOR BEACH, Mich. AP) — The sinking of the freighter Daniel J. Morrell in Lake Huron Tuesday, with the possible loss of 28 lives, is the sixth worst ship disaster since 1900.

The worst was the capsizing of the passenger ship Eastland in the Chicago River in 1915 when 812 were drowned.

On Nov. 11, 1913, 19 ships were lost in a hurricane, including two freighters in Lake Huron, and 254 were lost.

A total of 119 were killed when the passenger ship Noronic burned at a Toronto dock Sept. 17, 1949.

Lone Man Survives Out of Crew of 29

HARBOR BEACH, Mich. (AP) — Rescue forces are searching the storm-lashed area of Lake Huron where the lake ship Daniel J. Morrell sank Tuesday with a feared loss of 28 lives and only one survivor.

It was the worst Great Lakes disaster in eight years.

Eleven bodies were recovered Wednesday. The U.S. Coast Guard spotted a 12th body next to an empty life raft but said gale-force winds and huge waves prevented recovery.

More than two days of snow squalls and sub-freezing temperatures cut hopes that the bulk carrier's other 16 crew members survived by launching lifeboats and riding out the gale.

It's fate concealed by the storm for 24 hours, the 603-foot Morrell snapped in two Tuesday morning and sank in 145 feet of water 20 miles northeast of Harbor Beach, about 75 miles north of Port Huron.

Twenty - nine men were aboard, said Capt. Cameron Beale, legal representative of Bethehem Steel Co. which had leased the 50-year-old ship.

SAW TWO BOATS

"I saw two life boats launched before the ship sank," said Robert Wellenkamp Jr., Hale, the survivor. Plucked from a life raft by a helicopter, Hale was clad in undershorts, pyjamas and a jacket when found lying beneath the bodies of three crewmen who died from exposure.

An empty life raft bobbed on the waves near the shore and a life ring and debris from the Morrell washed up on the snow-covered shore at the northern tip of the Thumb district. The wreckage was found by a 100-man search party that scoured the shoreline during heavy snowfall.

Blinding snow hampered the search by three coast guard cutters over a 60-square-mile area of Lake Huron. The crews grounded coast guard aircraft during most of the hunt.

Hale, 26, of Ashtabula, Ohio, was reported in good condition in hospital.

"The weird thing" about the 12,500-ton Morrell, said a coast guard spokesman, was that "there was no distress signal."

Winds up to 60 miles an hour and waves 20 feet high lashed the Morrell and she apparently sank without radioing an S O S.

Not since the carrier Carl D. Bradley sank Nov. 18, 1958, have so many men of a freighter died on the Great Lakes. The Bradley lost 33 of its 35 crew when it plunged to the bottom of Lake Michigan during a similar storm.

Two men of the limestone carrier Cedarville died in May, 1965, when the vessel sank during a storm in the Straits of Mackinac.

The last radio signal reported received from the Morrell was at 12:12 a.m. Tuesday when she transmitted a routine message giving her position as 25 miles north of Harbor Beach. The Morrell was bound north for Yacoute Harbor, Minn., from Cleveland, Ohio, with ony ballast in her holds.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Cold arctic air streaming southward across the Great Lakes is causing snowflurries and local snow squalls in a swath area of southwestern Ontario and in parts of the Algoma region near Lake Superior. Sections of southern Ontario further away from Lake Huron and Georgian Bay should also see occasional snowflurries. This weather pattern is expected to persist today and much of Friday.

RAF Is Flying Smith To Parley With Wilson

LONDON (Reuters) — British today announced that Prime Minister Wilson and Rhodesian leader Ian Smith will meet in a dramatic bid to settle the year-long struggle over Rhodesian independence.

The announcement came after Smith took off from Salisbury in a secrecy - shrouded flight aboard an RAF Comet jet, the same plane that took British envoy Sir Morrice James to Rhodesia two days ago for last minute soundings, before a stepped-up drive for world economic sanctions against the breakaway colony.

Wilson was set to leave London later today.

Before leaving, Wilson told the House of Commons that there remains "a considerable gap to bridge."

He said: "I must make it clear to the House that the fact that this meeting is taking place should not be allowed to disguise the fact that despite the signs of movement we have had in the last week there is still, so far as I can at this moment judge, a considerable gap to bridge."

The prime minister said the British government was insisting that there could be no question of a settlement which did not honor the six principles established by Britain.

He said: "The House will agree that a decision one way or the other cannot be delayed any longer. If no settlement on the terms which we are prepared to commend to this House is possible, then it is right that this fact should be known and known quickly."

Officials offered no clue to where the meeting will be, but reliable reports here said it probably will be Gibraltar.

The British cruiser Tiger cut short a goodwill visit to Casablanca, Morocco, Wednesday and there was speculation the rendezvous might be aboard the 10,000-ton ship.

The Associated Press said the meeting probably would be aboard the Tiger off or near the Mediterranean island of Malta, more than 500 miles northeast of Casablanca.

A surprise pre - dawn statement from Wilson's official residence at 10 Downing Street said Commonwealth Secretary Herbert Bowden and Attorney-General Sir Elwyn Jones will 'go with the prime minister to meet Smith and Rhodesian governor Sir Humphrey Gibbs.

Troops Fire On Jordanians

DAMASCUS (Reuters) — Syrian official sources said today Jordanian troops opened fire on a number of Jordanian citizens who fled across the border into Syria.

Railway Mediator Reports

MONTREAL (CP)—H. Carl Goldenberg, federally - appointed mediator in a contract dispute between the railways and nearly 120,000 of their employees, said today he has submitted a report on the negotiations to Labor Minister Nicholson.

Mr. Goldenberg said talks continued until 2 a.m. and that he expects to receive the report to Mr. Nicholson at 9 a.m. He said the minister plans to release details of the report to Parliament later today.

Mr. Goldenberg was given until midnight Wednesday to submit a report on the discussions, which arise from settlements in Canada's railway and shipping strike Sept. 1.

Asked whether talks with railway and union negotiators continued past the midnight deadline, Mr. Goldenberg replied: "Some of the talks have continued."

He said other details would have to come from Mr. Nicholson in Ottawa.

Kosygin Arrives in Paris For Parley With de Gaulle

PARIS (Reuters) — Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin arrived here today for a nine-day visit during which he and President Charles de Gaulle will seek to strengthen the new cordial relations between the two countries.

The Russian leader said in a speech at his arrival that ties in Europe and outside showed this improvement was beneficial and fruitful and exercised a great positive influence on international relations.

Kosygin is the first Soviet premier to visit France since Nikita Khrushchev was here in 1960.

With Kosygin were Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko; the minister of civil aviation, Air Force Gen. Yevgeny Loginov and Deputy Premier Vladimir Kirillin, head of the Soviet government's committee on science and technology.

Also in the party was Kosygin's daughter, Ludmila Gvishiani.

Kosygin was greeted at Orly Airport by an unprecedented 101-gun salute and a personal welcome by President de Gaulle.

The salute was to symbolize the exceptional importance de Gaulle attaches to the Russian leader's trip.

De Gaulle hailed Kosygin's visit as marking France-Soviet co-operation for world progress and peace. He said:

"Your presence here marks . . . the co-operation being organized between our two states for the welfare of our two peoples and at the same time for the balance, progress and peace of the world."

Kosygin in reply called for an "ever more cordial understanding between France and the Soviet Union and ever more solid friendship and co-operation extending into ever newer fields."

European security and Viet Nam will be major topics when the two leaders get down to talks at the Elysee Palace later today.

In terms of practical results, however, bilateral co-operation was expected to be the most fruitful topic.

In the scientific field, current projects included the launching of French satellites by Soviet rockets.

The first two days of Kosygin's visit will be dominated by his talks with de Gaulle, after which the prime minister will tour France, seeing some of its major industrial centres.

He will return to Paris for final meetings and a communique before flying home Dec. 9.

UN Security Council Will Ask Thant to Stay

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The UN Security Council planned to ask U Thant of Burma today to take another term as secretary-general and many of its members expected he would agree to stay on for another five years.

An appeal that he continue in office was being prepared at successive informal meetings of a five-man drafting committee and the 15 members of the council.

Some Council members expressed belief they could send the communication to Thant this afternoon. They were hopeful he would accept immediately. They said if he did, the council would recommend him for another term Friday morning and the General Assembly would elect him Friday afternoon.

Thant announced Sept. 1 that he had decided not to offer himself for a second term. But before his first five-year term ran out Nov. 3, he agreed to extend his service to Dec. 30, the end of the assembly session.

Many foreign ministers speaking in the assembly's general debate urged him to serve another term. The Security Council did likewise Sept. 29.

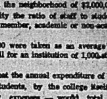
Council sources said the idea of a new appeal had been under discussion since U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg, as council president for November, gave a luncheon Monday for Thant and the other council members.

The council members met informally Tuesday and sent a delegation to ask Thant to postpone the announcement of his final decision, originally set for Wednesday. He postponed it to Friday at the latest.

One council source said Goldberg remarked at the informal meeting he had the impression Thant would take another term but could not guarantee it. Some UN officials speculated that Thant would stay for another two years. But elsewhere a position to know believed he would stay for five.

The council met informally again Wednesday and began drawing up the appeal but adjourned overnight without finishing it.

One source said the council's problem was to produce something strong enough that Thant would seem to be bowing to world opinion but not so strong that the council would seem to be begging him to stay.



Informed sources said that to encourage Thant to stay, the Soviet Union, France, the United States and East European countries were taking about making simultaneous voluntary contributions toward the removal of the UN peacekeeping deficit, estimated roughly at between $30,000,000 and $50,000,000.

Tory MPs Oust Foes Of Diefe

OTTAWA (CP)—The principle of proper provincial representation by Progressive Conservative MPs on the party's national executive was called into question Wednesday night by a Prince Edward Island MP whose candidacy was upset by a caucus vote.

David MacDonald, freshman Conservative MP for Egmont who was the P. E. I. members' candidate for the national executive post, was defeated by a secret ballot at Wednesday's caucus meeting.

He said later he was not personally disappointed, but regretted that the caucus had established a new principle—that a majority of MPs from other provinces can elect a member to the party's national executive who may not have majority support of the provincial representatives.

Under the party's constitution, the Conservative MPs in caucus have power to elect 20 members to the 140-member national executive. The elections are made on the basis of one member for each provinces and one for each of the northern territories.

SWEEP OUT REBELS

In the caucus elections Wednesday, a group of MPs who did not sign a pledge of loyalty to Opposition Leader Diefenbaker were swept from party office.

They included Heath Macquarrie, Queens, P.E.I.; Tom Bell Saint John-Albert, N.B.; Heward Grafftey, Brome-Missisquoi, Que.; Gordon Aiken, Parry Sound - Muskoka, Ont., Mrs. Jean Wadds, Grenville-Dundas, Ont.; and S. J. Enns, Portage-Neepawa, Man.

Gordon Churchill, MP for Winnipeg South Centre and staunch Diefenbaker supporter, said the caucus usually approves the nomination of provincial executive selections for the national executive posts.

This did not occur, however, in the case of Mr. MacDonald.

Film Being Shot Designed To Show What City Can Offer

Belleville may be in the movies. Not the Hollywood variety, but a film short designed to depict what this city has to offer in the way of facilities and activities.

Producer, director, and even cameraman for the project will be freelance film photographer, Stu Meeks, better known as the owner and operator of LaSalle Ambulance here in the city.

Stu conceived the idea about two years ago after seeing travel slides shown by a guest speaker at a local service club meeting. "The theme," he says, "deals with the elaborate preparations involved before a company commits itself to setting up a plant in a new district."

Stu hopes to sell the finished product to the city, and in particular, to the Industrial Commission, since the film plot touches directly on the duties of that municipal body.

MANY USES

The story focuses on the observations made of Belleville by a consulting engineer of a large U.S. firm who lives in the city for a year with the express purpose of determining the potential as a site for a firm subsidiary.

While the film's use need not be restricted to the purposes of the Industrial Commission. "As of now, Belleville has neither film or slides to show outsiders what we have in our city," says Stu. "If any local service club, or what have you, visited another city and showed such a film, it would be great advertising for Belleville."

The intention is to avoid a documentary style production of the project by giving the film a story line. For this reason, actors from Quinte Players are to cast for four leading roles in the picture. The principle parts casted for by Stu Guild will be those of the engineer, the industrial commissioner, and their wives.

Stu is reluctant, however, to make the framework of the film too definite at this early stage. "We want to maintain flexibility in every aspect."

HALF HOUR FILM

"For instance, we originally thought the film would run for about one minutes, then it got up as high as 45 minutes. But for this type of project, I hope to get it down to a decent somewhere in the neighborhood of half an hour.

The time commitment has been made from any quarter to buy the film, but, Stu says "Be-

Swindle Cost 75-year-old $4,500

TRENTON — Because a 75-year-old man changed his mind about a police escort he lost $4,500 — and the law missed a million-in-one chance of a prime criminal arrest.

The story came to light late yesterday when the man turned up at police headquarters and said he had been swindled by a phoney bank inspector.

Police so far have decided to keep the victim anonymous.

Wednesday the elderly man had a caller who introduced himself as a bank inspector seeking to lay a trap for a teller suspected of thievery.

The "inspector" asked that the man withdraw the cash from his account at the Bank of Montreal and take it home.

He agreed.

"On the way, he thought of coming around here and pick up an escort from the bank to his home," said Chief Rutherford. "But he thought differently of it.

"Had he not changed his mind," said the chief, police would have twigged the reality of the situation — now a long-established confidence racket widespread through Ontario.

He withdrew the cash as instructed and returned home. Shortly after, the fake investigator called again, requested the money for fingerprinting and disappeared.

He had promised to return the cash immediately. His victim waited all Wednesday and most of Thursday.

Then at 4.30 p.m. yesterday he walked into headquarters and revealed the whole incident to police.

Chief Rutherford said similar incidents had recently been successfully perpetrated on older people in Peterborough and Toronto.

"These con-men go all over the province and it seems different people against their operations. We even have the banks posted with signs here."

Transit Commission Head Against Free Bus Service

Jack Ireland, Chairman of the Belleville Transit Commission, doesn't quite go along with a Toronto real estate man who this week in Cleveland urged that urban public transit should be free and taken out of general government funds.

H. Warren Heenan, a past-president of the Toronto Real Estate Board, told Cleveland realtors that urban public transit should be financed by general federal, provincial and municipal tax funds in the same manner as education and roads are financed.

"I have never heard of it," said the local transit commission head.

Mr. Ireland said it would be wonderful to have the cost of city buses completely paid for out of tax funds, but at the same time felt there should be some fare paid "to keep control" over the number of riders.

Mr. Heenan said the Toronto transit system now collects close to 200,000,000 fares or about $20,000,000.

"We would have to give up only three or four miles of expressway to subsidize this amount," he said.

In Belleville the city subsidizes buses to the extent of approximately $50,000 per year but this is less per capita than in some other centres.

News In Brief

TRENTON — The Trenton Police Association will hold a Christmas turkey shoot Saturday, starting at 1 p.m., at the shooting range behind the Quinte Machine and Repair plant on the Frankford Road.

Proceeds are used to help the police with their Christmas baskets for the needy.

NEW EXECUTIVE

The Trenton Community Association executive met this week to elect a new executive. Mrs. Louis Knack is the new president; Mrs. Joan Anderson, secretary and Mrs. A. Struyk, treasurer.

The association will contact church groups for assistance in providing a hot meal for welfare families, shut-ins and elderly persons, Christmas Day. There are 35 names on the list.

COULD NOT SAVE DINNER

Trenton firemen answered a call to 36 Crown Street yesterday where an oil burner had flared up. Minor smoke damage to the dwelling was reported.

Firemen weren't in time to save a dinner from burning up on a stove at 11 Heber Down address yesterday. The occupants ate downtown.

Christmas Tree Will Grace DowntownArea

TRENTON — Hydro workmen have been busy this week checking and replacing the overhead downtown Christmas lights and putting up Centennial "medulars."

Wiring has been done at the old post office site where a 20-foot Christmas tree will grace the downtown area.

And Alitor's workmen started yesterday to put up 1 temporary headquarters for Santa Claus, between the old post office and the Bank of Commerce. Santa has been invited by the Chamber of Commerce to spend the two weeks preceding Christmas in Trenton. He will be in his apartment to take lists from the boys and girls and his helpers will give out candy to the kiddies.

The lights will be turned on Dec. 12, and Santa will "move in" on that date.

From then until Christmas, choirs and bands will hold almost daily performances around Santa's shop, so it looks like a really exciting Christmas this year for young and old.

Want Four Excavations Filled In

TRENTON — The Trenton Board of Health, meeting yesterday, passed a resolution to insist that the public works department fill in four excavations on Dufferin Street, dug out for house basements by a contractor and abandoned. The holes have filled with water and are a potential danger to children in the area, board members say.

The board will also write the town to tile and cover over a ditch running along the rear of the town shop at the corner of Meyers and Ontario Streets.

Arctic Air

POWER BRIEFLY OUT

Power and telephone lines were knocked out in many Northern Ontario communities Tuesday. Elliot Lake, about 80 miles east of Sault Ste. Marie, was without electricity for two day. Service had been restored to most areas by Wednesday night.

The tail - end of the storm brought high winds and snowflurries to southern Ontario points Wednesday. Freezing temperatures and snow squalls would continue today.

Montreal, with record high temperatures at the beginning of the week, braced for the cold front Wednesday night. Snowflurries and gusting winds were forecast for today.

Cold air also headed into the Maritimes today. Rain showers Wednesday were expected to give away to snowflurries today.

The cold snap had a firm grip on the Prairies where the low Wednesday in Winnipeg was 25 below.

Fort, McMurray in northern Alberta had a record 46 below. Temperatures of 25 below were common in Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Snow fell Wednesday in the British Columbia interior and it rained along the coast.

Work Strength On Railways Down Sharply

OTTAWA (CP) — Employee strength in both of Canada's major railways declined sharply between 1956 and 1965, the Commons was told in a government return Wednesday.

The return broke down CNR and CPR employees into five categories. The totals were down in all categories except the professional and technical group, which rose sharply.

On the publicly-owned CNR, the strength of this group more than doubled to 3,003 in 1965 from 1,480 in 1956. The same group almost tripled on the CPR, going to 1,264 from 452.

Managerial and supervisory staff declined only slightly on the CNR — went to 4,764 from 4,957 on the CNR and e 3,017 from 3,464 on the CPR.

CPR TOTAL FIGURES

The total CNR decline was to 1965 from 118,324. The CPR totals were 38,458 and 44,264.

Employees who man the trains fell to 13,358 from 18,788 on the CNR and to 8,790 from 14,467 on the CPR. Non-operating employees fell to 39,458 from 57,424 on the CNR. On the CPR it was 40,283 from 57,835.

Must Produce Quality Cheese To Expect Premium Prices On Market Cheese Makers Told

Canada will have to look to her laurels as a producer of quality cheese if she expects premium prices for cheddar cheese on the British market.

Mr. R.H. Gillan, Chief, Grading and Inspection Services, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, told Central Ontario cheese makers here Wednesday that English buyers were disappointed that Canadian cheese did not win the top prizes at the Royal Dairy Show in London this fall.

Speaking to the 39th annual cheese makers convention here, Mr. Gillan said that a New Zealand maker had won top prize in the show and English importers, who try to command a premium for Canadian cheese, were asking questions.

Mr. Gillan said last year a Napanee maker, Grant Hughes had won two top prizes at the London show.

"This year Canadians did not do so well," he said.

MUST SHOW BEST CHEESE

"If Canadian cheese is to sell at a premium on the English market care must be taken that only the best quality cheese possible is shown at the Royal Dairy Show," he said.

Mr. Gillan said a shortage of wood veneer to make the traditional wooden cheese boxes, and the growing popularity of the tinless 4 qu. box were causing other problems for English buyers.

Conventional cylindrical cheese for the export trade are stamped with the word "Canada" but this is not the case with ringless square blocks and English buyers are complaining that Canadian produce has lost its identity.

To overcome this Mr. Gillan said a special wrapper bearing the words "Canada Cheddar" and also bearing a red Maple Leaf has been approved.

After January 1, 1967, all square cheese for the export market must be put up in these wrappers.

NEW BOXES APPROVED

Also new paper non-veneer boxes for cylindrical cheese had been approved for the export trade.

Mr. Don Eakle, culture director, from Milwaukee, Wisconsin, talked on the subject of bacteriophage which last summer cost Quinte district farmers an estimated $500,000.

Mr. Eakle said the resulting publicity was unfortunate, but said the problem was world wide.

He stressed, however, that bacteriophage had no effect on humans, and that it was neither disease producing or a health hazard.

He said that a program of proper sanitation in the factories controlled one part of the trouble but another phase still had the experts stumped.

DON'T KNOW COURSE

"If we know what triggered the bacteriophage action we would have the trouble licked," he said.

Special cultures had been tried but these did not prove the complete answer.

Special heat treatment would kill the phage but unfortunately this method also killed the cultures.

Mr. Eakle wondered if bacteriophage had been the real culprit in the trouble experienced in the Quinte district last summer — and suggested that specially developed cheese cultures might be effective.

Also, many factories did not have the proper equipment for maintenance of uniform cultural temperatures.

More highly trained personnel was needed and these trained persons should be used properly — in the factories.

RECALLS EARLY DAYS

Mr. J. F. Robinson, chief cheese instructor for Eastern Ontario, recalled early days in the cheese industry, noting that when he first worked as a cheese maker's helper back in 1915 cultures didn't even exist.

Milk kept from the day previous and allowed to sour was used as a starter.

"We think we have troubles today in the industry but they don't compare with those of 50 years ago" he said.

He said that today's cheese was superior in finish, quality and appearance.

Mr. Robinson noted how centralization had cut the number of factories. Back in the 1920's there were 327 factories in Eastern Ontario. Today there were only 57. The same trend existed in Central Ontario with the number dropping from 100 to 35 factories.

Despite the reduction in the number of factories, cheese production had remained almost constant and last year in Ontario at 90,000,000 lbs. was only about six million pounds less than 40 years ago.

Mr. Robinson said that the cheese factory improvement act of 1929 had been responsible, more than any other factor, in improving cheese factories and factory conditions.

Through this act millions of dollars had been paid out by the government in assisting to bring about centralization of factories and in the purchase of factory equipment.

DELEGATES WELCOMED

Also during the afternoon session J. G. MacMillan, Grader in charge at Belleville, talked on the year's graduating results.

Hastings county warden Clayton Hall, and Alderman Donald Williams, representing Belleville Mayor J. R. Ellis, welcomed delegates to the day.

Warden Hall noted that this was the 20th annual cheese makers' convention and said that he had almost become a cheese maker back in the mid-twenties.

"I used to help out at the factory on Saturday nights, but unfortunately I was not impressed because the next year I bought a farm and started growing corn," he said.

Alderman Williams said he appreciated the importance of the cheese industry to the Bay of Quinte district but wondered if the general public realized the importance.

ONTARIO DAIRY PRINCESS — Miss Dolly Ann Edmunds is checked closely by champion cheese maker Ted Foley as she weighs up cheese at British Empire Dairy Show.

Ontario Dairy Princess Faces Busy Schedule

Miss Dolly Ann Edmunds, Ontario Dairy Princess, is in Belleville this week where in the course of her official duties she is promoting the Ontario Dairy Industry.

Arriving in the city on the noon train, Miss Edmunds has already visited the Ontario Milk Marketing cheese exchange, and also has toured the Black Diamond Cheese Company plant, and the Fuzbore Cheese Factory.

Today she visited the British Empire Dairy Show on Front Street and this afternoon and evening is a guest at the Central Ontario Cheese Makers at their annual convention and evening banquet at the Club Canara.

NATIVE OF RENFREW

A native of Cobden, Renfrew county, Miss Edmunds was raised on a farm and prior to being named Ontario Dairy Princess was working as private secretary at Atomic Energy in Deep River in the Ottawa Valley.

Her father runs a 375-acre farm where Hereford cattle are raised. However the family is keeping Miss Holstein for greater milk production.

Since being named Dairy Princess, Miss Edmunds has been on a three-week trip to the British Isles, where she visited England, Scotland and Ireland.

She says the high point of her visit was to the Royal Dairy Show in London where she was introduced to the Queen Mother.

Winter Brushes Quinte District With Snowfall

The mercury put on skates today and began heading down the thermometer as the first sustained snowflakes of winter brushed the Quinte district.

Colder air was moving up this morning and temperatures began dropping from a high of 28.8 degrees registered at Trenton Airport Metro Base, Environment weather bureau.

The duty forecaster said predictions were calling for a low of 15 tonight in the area.

Brief snow flurries were expected throughout the day as skies remained cloudy and winds were expected to increase up to 35 mph.

White Oak for Expo

Two Perfect Specimens Cut in Oak Hills

By HARRY MULHALL

A couple of king - size chips were knocked off a shoulder of the Oak Hills yesterday — but no one is looking back in anger.

Instead, Quinte district foresters can now look forward to having deeper roots than most at Expo '67, hailing Canada's centennial next year.

Today rolling toward Montreal and the Expo site are two top - notch white oak logs which will be part of the pure Canadiana exhibits at the big exposition.

The logs — among a prime handful let's be candid of what was once a rich, natural resource — were hewn at federal government request and ended a long search by forestry officials.

The story goes back to last summer when federal authorities enlisted the aid of the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests in seeking out samples of white oak for the Expo national display.

White oak, indigenous to eastern North America, was long sought after abroad for its famed hardiness. Meeting the demand, however, resulted in wholesale plundering which denuded the trees from the national landscape.

Ottawa specified that the Expo logs had to be flawless and match up visually to the lovely reputation of the oak itself.

The project was relayed through Lands and Forests district Tweed offices to forester Ed Edson at Napanee.

In turn, foresters began combing Eastern Ontario — particularly in the Kingston region — for samples.

Then, they recalled the timber was once plentiful in the Quinte district — in fact, the 'Oak Hills' north of Stirling had been named because of its plenitude.

Foresters approached Harold Dellor, whose family history in the area goes back over 100 years and was closely associated with timber cutting and growing.

Mr. Dellor found what Ottawa wanted — on a lot in the hills near Hallowsy were a few scattered white oaks, rather lonely remnants of a plentiful past.

Because of his experience Mr. Dellor was chosen by the Department to organize the felling operation. Yesterday, it was completed.

"It was a very delicate job as the oaks have to be delivered to Expo faultless — perfect white oak logs 12 and 16 feet long and two feet in diameter.

These were cautiously wrapped in the sacking, placed on a cutter, hauled by tractor to the nearest concession road and hoisted aboard the Montreal-bound trailer.

Had there been a slip, the search might well have had to start over again, although two white oaks of lesser quality were found nearby.

"There are very few of that quality remaining now," said forester Edson.

"Those trees are about 200 years old and we'll never see timber like that any more."

He explained under ideal conditions it takes a white oak 150 to 175 years to mature.

Today, with new plantings "it's not economical to wait that long and risk the deterioration," said the forester.

The loss of the majestic oak islands can be dated from the early 19th century — when Britain's own home-grown variety was exhausted.

With the Napoleonic blockade sealing off European supplies, Britain turned to the Canadian stouten its historic "hearts of oak" — its imperial navy.

"The culmination of forest operations in these parts was probably the 1800s and 70s," said forester Edson.

At that time, timber-cutting reached its high mark, headed by the Rathbun Lumber Company which was then operating "the biggest saw mill on the American continent in the town of Trenton."

"These two logs going to Montreal haven't a single blemish or knot" and we were fortunate in finding them," he added.

"Had Mr. Dellor not known where they were we could have looked for a long time."

The forester also paid tribute to the owners of the lot — Miss Mary and Miss Nelly Prest, of Hallowsy. Their names, along with that of Mr. Dellor, were tabbed on a plaque accompanying the logs to Expo.

"They co - operated in every way — they wanted to contribute to the success of the exposition," said the forester.

DOG'S BEST FRIEND — Bill Bittle and Doug Mumford, of the Tweed District Lands and Forests office, transferred these lost hunting dogs to Belleville yesterday for placing by local members of the Humane Society.

Sportsmen's Group Sets Up 'Receiving Homes' for Dogs

With the annual foray of an estimated 25,000 deer hunters into North Quinte district bush over for another year, many foresters are replenished with venison.

Unfortunately, once the dogs used by hunters to chase deer into their rifle sights have accomplished their tasks, many of them become separated from their masters, either by accident, or design.

The East-Central Association of Sportsmen's Clubs, comprised of area fish and game club members, has attempted to cope with this problem by setting up temporary dog-holding stations, to accommodate stray hunting dogs at Kaladar, Millbridge, Delior and Gunter.

Operating with full support and co-operation of the Tweed District office of the Department of Lands and Forests, the kennels handled more than 200 dogs during this year's hunt.

Since the official close of the hunting season 10 days ago, about 10 per cent of the animals have been claimed, and the Association found homes for most of the remainder. As of Tuesday, all but 9 of the dogs had been placed.

Then yesterday, a Lands and Forests truck transported these nine to the William Street residence of Harold Crowe who, along with other Quinte Humane Society members, will attempt to place the canine hunters.

Were it not for the combined efforts of the three bodies interested in the welfare of man's best friend, there might, in the foreseeable future, be more dogs than deer at large in the Quinte hunting grounds.

Boycotts Could Hurt Farmers

VINELAND, Ont. (CP)—Food price boycotts by housewives could hurt farmers, delegates to the annual meeting of the Niagara Peninsula Fruit and Vegetable Growers Association were told Wednesday.

B. G. Wilson, secretary of the Ontario Fruit and Vegetable Growers Association, said the boycotts are pressuring their buyers to get produce at lower prices.

"You as growers will be on the bottom rung of the ladder," Mr. Wilson said.

Dief's Judgment of the 'Party' Has Turned Full Circle

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—John Diefenbaker, in his quiet moments, must be remembering a judgment he passed on his party 18 years ago.

It was on a sun-splashed morning in 1942—but the gloom in his office was enveloping.

He had lost his second bid for the Conservative leadership, this time to Ontario Premier George Drew.

Some five or six years before, he had run second to Manitoba Premier John Bracken.

On this morning after the convention in 1942, there he was, still black-haired and as blazingly explosive as ever in a red rage of frustration.

He had lost and he was suffering.

Painfully.

He was almost in physical agony, perspiration standing out on his brow, as he strode up and down his little Centre Block office on Parliament Hill.

For a moment, putting the story on a personal basis, this reporter, even then an old Dief friend, was there.

And saw him agonize, and laughed—not in ridicule but in some sort of sympathy — at the then astonishing spectacle. Why, he asked, stopping suddenly and standing there bafflied, was his "friend from the press," as he phrased it, laughing?

Because, he was told, it was all so unnecessary, this self-tortured suffering.

The odds were stacked against it just that high.

The party's pan jandrums in Toronto, then and perhaps still in real power base, simply would not accept him.

Then or ever.

(Nor did they, really, even nine years later, when, in what was a groundswell of grass roots support, he surprised himself by winning the leadership in a three-way race with Kamloops' Davie Fulton and Toronto's Donald Fleming, the candidate the party's power elite vastly preferred.)

There were other reasons, he was told that agonized morning, 18 years ago.

Reasons including that of his name: Diefenbaker.

If it had been Baker, then perhaps.

Even if it had been Dief, a strange and different name, it would have been better than Diefenbaker.

The 11-letter name was too easy of mispronunciation, and important, too, far too long for newspaper heads.

At least that turned out to be correct, for he shortened it, with the grateful assistance of the newspaper headwriters, to Dief, which did fit, and really could not be mispronounced.

Hearing those things, he stood transfixed in a pillar of morning sunshine streaming through the dormer window of his office.

There he was, fists clenched over his best-hack head, rigid.

"There is nothing in this party but ciphers and SOB's."

But he used the full roundsounding phrase, for the abbreviated "SOB" had not yet come into popular accepted use — which would not happen until President Harry Truman introduced it into the current political language.

Wondering phrase, cried his "friend from the press" in delight. Had a real ring to it.

It was pretty good, he grinned, quickly adding that of course he had not really meant it.

There was an echo 14 years later.

It was the 1962 campaign, in which he was going with 208 seats won in '58.

Hadn't things changed, he asked as he plopped down into an uncomplied aisle seat in his chartered Viscount on a campaign flight between Timmins and Sudbury?

Astounding the change. His "friend from the press" agreed.

"Remember," he reviewed, "how you said I'd never make it?"

And remember, he was asked in return, what you said back then about there being "nothing in the party but ciphers and SOB's?"

As if he needed to.

Long gone, Dief leaped to his feet in the aisle, index finger accusingly pointed, and cried in mock surprise:

"Misquote, misquote, I never said it, and you know I didn't!"

But he knew he had, and now he must be wondering whether he will ever finally close to being right the first time.

American Role

What does United States' power mean in the world today? Broadly speaking it is responsible for the protection of the entire western world in the face of communist expansion.

Without the United States' presence in Europe, in Viet Nam, and in other Asian countries it is obvious that the vacuum represented by poverty, illiteracy, hunger and political unrest would be filled swiftly and surely by the forces of communism directed by Moscow and Peking.

The United States in former days was an isolationist. It minded its own business, while in Europe the spectre of Nazi conquest evolved in the years between the wars. Then it was Britain that was the conscience and shield of the free world, but the United States remained largely aloof. Came the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, a day which President Roosevelt said "will live in infamy," and the course of history was changed overnight.

The Nazis were defeated and the Japanese capitulated. Afterwards the world settled down to an uneasy period of accommodating to the new order — to such factors as the atom bomb which in a stroke had ended the war with Japan, to a divided Germany and communism's menace in Berlin. There was the airlift which kept West Berlin supplied when the Reds shut off road links.

In the other direction — toward the free world — came thousands of refugees, from Hungary and from East Berlin. Why did they come? Well ask anyone who has visited the communist world and they will tell you that freedom as we know it just does not exist there. The state controls and directs virtually every facet of the individual's life. And as if that were not enough the frontiers of the communist world are sealed by barbed wire, booby traps, guards with automatic weapons and dogs — and in Berlin by the infamous wall that for all practical purposes has rendered escape to the west impossible.

In Europe then, while the threat of armed conflict has receded, east and west face each other under conditions of uneasy precarity.

A continent away from the grim realities of Berlin and a divided Germany, is Asia. And dominating this vast region is China with its 700 million people, a huge standing army, communist in the initial sense of the government in Peking whose grand designs of conquest extend all the way to Australia and New Zealand.

It may be argued that thus far China has not lifted a finger against any other nation in that region, against none that is save Tibet, South Korea and India — and those skirmishes were proof enough of China's power and ultimate intentions. China, moreover, is tested as an atom bomb and it is believed ultimately will have inter-continental missiles and the means of delivering them.

Meanwhile, the United States' watches over the Pacific, and in the process helps guard Australia, New Zealand, now more than ever integral parts of the Asiatic world with its teeming populations, awesome social and economic problems, and Peking-inspired potential for spilling into neighboring countries.

In Australia the government of Harold Holt has been returned to power, thus affirming the country's continued participation in the war in Viet Nam. This drew a congratulatory message to Canberra from President Johnson which in turn provoked angry words from defeated Opposition leader Arthur Calwell. He accused the President of "arrogance, interference and patronage" toward Australia.

Well President Johnson could have been more tactful, but he doubtless meant well. And Mr. Calwell and other dissident Australians might give a thought to the great empty spaces in their island continent and realize their vulnerability. The same goes for this continent. Canada contributes what it can from its relatively limited resources, but is largely American technology and air power which are preserving our overall territorial integrity.

When civilian disaster strikes anywhere in the world — famine or earthquake — it is usually the Americans who are first on the spot with relief supplies. Perhaps those who talk of American imperialism would care to imagine what would happen if Washington were to withdraw again into isolationism. Yes it would be a different — and suddenly more frightening — world, wouldn't it?

New Plates

Ontario's 1967 car plates, available as from today, feature a Centennial motif. They carry the lettering 19 Ontario 67 on the top and 18 Confederation 67 on the bottom. Indeed, the fact of 1967 being such a big year for Canada may result in an early run on the new plates. This would be in contrast to former years when people tended to leave the chore to the very last minute.

Purchasing Power Down

Edmonton Journal

In the 10 years between 1950 and 1960, the purchasing power of the Canadian dollar, taking 1949 as equalling 100 cents, declined from 84.7 to 72.2 cents.

Total labor income rose from $14,890,000,000 to $26,033,000,000. Total non-farm income was $28,172,000,000 in 1960, 220, 987,000,000 in 1956. Net farm income increased from $1,430,000,000 to $1,588,000,000.

Corporation profits, after taxes, rose from $1,932,000,000 in 1958 to $3,033,000,000 in 1965.

Taking 1949 standards as 100, productivity per man-hour in manufacturing industries rose from 133 1956 to 188 in 1965; from 130 to 162 in non-manufacturing industries, from 189 to 283 in commercial industries.

Medical Profession's Problems Are Changed

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

It seems to me that Dr. Lester J. Evans said a splendid mouthful in an address he made at the opening of a new school for medical students at Michigan State University.

"I simply want to contrast," he said, "the prevailing health problems when I began my medical school, and those as you enter medical school. This will give us some perspective as we look ahead.

"Then the problem was: One, the high mortality from conditions such as infection, childbirth and nutritional disorders; now the problem is to create an effective life for those who escape such hazards.

"Two, then the way was opened for the study of the biological factors of organic disease; now the way is opening for the study of social, cultural and psychological factors for health and illness in terms of the continuum of the human life process.

"Three, then medicine was focused on the struggle of the individual for survival now it is concerned with healthful living for those achieving longevity in an evolving urban society.

"Four, then medicine became firmly based on the natural sciences as they were developing in the university; now it must be equally based on the social and behavioral sciences as they are evolving in the university.

"Then the job was to get on top of these obvious diseases which were killing people prematurely. This continues to be a primary job of medicine; but now that we have developed a considerable know-how of the way in which the attack on such diseases can be continued — we can now turn own attention to the people who have a better chance of living out their life span".

He does not say, you will notice, that we know as much as we need to know about making life more comfortable and more successful, but we are beginning to learn, and we are making some headway.

I think this is bound to have its effect on patients, too; They are going to change their attitude somewhat. In fact, they are doing so now.

A great many letters still come to me asking whether this or that condition will cause cancer, or is dangerous, or will cause heart attacks. These of course, are perfectly valid questions.

But sometimes I also get letters saying, "I don't like to bother my busy doctor with my problems unless it is dangerous".

This is the attitude which should and, I think will, fade. We always have to be on watch for the life-endangering conditions, but we can afford to devote more time to matters which, while not deadly, sacrifice some of the pleasure in life, and rob us of some of our efficiency — whether chronic headaches, arthritis, pain of other kinds, lameness, failing eyesight, baby digestion, fussy kidneys, breathing difficulties.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have been told that a person taking I.N.H. pills becomes sterile. Is that is so I would rather not keep taking the drug. — A.M.

I.N.H. (isonicotinic acid hydrazide) is extremely useful in treating tuberculosis, so I assume that is why you are taking it.

It decidely does not cause sterility, and even if it did, I could not in good conscience suggest that you stop taking it until the tuberculosis is fully under control.

Dr. Molner welcomes all reader mail, but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his colum whenever possible.

Industries and Pollution

Toronto Star

Some Ontario industries seem to think that the province's water resource is for their own exclusive use. Having dumped all their garbage and wastes in it, they couldn't be less about the water's condition when someone else wishes to use it.

David S. Caverly, Chief Water Manager of the Ontario Water Resources Commission, was right when he told the Toronto Real Estate Board that industry has the same responsibility to control pollution that the municipalities have. But it's a responsibility many industries have ignored.

Of the 977 municipalities in the province, only 26 continue to dump their raw sewage into watercourses, and of these, 16 are drawing up plans for treatment facilities. In the past five years municipalities have installed more than $1. billion worth of pollution control plants.

But as of last spring there were 300 major companies still dumping their untreated wastes into Ontario's waters. In the past year the O.W.R.C. has written to 470 private firms outlining what the commission considers are necessary pollution controls. Of those, 180 firms have met Government standards. The rest haven't, intending about to meet the water mills which are prime pollution offenders.

Having struck the right attitude, the O.W.R.C. should now transform this into action. It has the legislative powers at its disposal. The act setting up the commission prescribes a maximum $1,000 fine or a year's imprisonment for the president of a company which pollutes water resources.

Water is not an inexhaustible commodity. It is time the offending companies were reminded of it.

The British African colony of Natal annexed Zululand 63 years ago today—in 1897 —thus depriving the Boer republics of the last stretch of unclaimed coastline. The British had annexed the best port in the area 13 years before, when the Boers tried to take it over. Natal had originally been a Boer colony but they were defeated by the British four years after they conquered the Zulus and trekked inland because British law forbade a color bar. In time, the British settlers adopted discriminatory laws against Indian immigrants.

Strictly Personal

Princes and Princesses

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Little girls want to be princesses, but little boys don't want to be princes — and from those two different startling points come all the confusions, contradictions and cross-purposes of courtship and marriage.

A "civilized" person is one who thinks it was horribly barbarous to burn people at the stake, but finds it acceptable if electricity is used.

We can justify anything by turning it in a different light; after all, the sadist can point out that he is really being kind to the masochist, by providing what he wants and needs.

Logic is stronger than language, as the fourth-grader demonstrated when asked by her teacher to give the sentence of the verb "to marry"; she thought a moment and replies, "to divorce."

Men rarely understand how women buy such expensive underthings, for with a man, if it doesn't show it doesn't count — and many a man has tried on a pair of ties on them with toes sticking through the holes of his $1 socks.

A philosopher is generally a man who takes his own temperament as a model for the world, and creates a system of thought that is more a projection of his temperament than it is a product of his intellect.

Those who pin their hopes on scientific achievements would do well to recall the cool words of Gustave Le Bon many years ago: "Science has promised us happiness . . . it has never promised us either peace or happiness."

Our age reiterates the main of action above the man of thought; but I would venture a considerable sum that a poet could learn to be an adequate admiral much faster than an admiral could become an adequate poet.

Nobody brags about being seldom-poor, or losing jobs, or buying bad cars — then why are so many people perversely proud of getting poor early at college or poker, and absolutely convinced that the law of averages has been repealed for them?

Husbands want novelty, and wives want security; but wives, when they are bored with security, look for novelty; and husbands, when they are bored with novelty, return to security.

One of the most revealing errors of a sloppy writer is the use of "cohort" to mean "companion"; there is no such thing as "a cohort" in the singular, for it always means a large group of confederates or supporters.

Mining Delegates Optimistic After Talks

OTTAWA (CP)—A delegation from gold mining communities had an "optimistic feeling" after four hours of talks with cabinet ministers Wednesday, where they discussed extensions and modifications to the federal gold assistance program.

"We had a very good reception and got some of our main ideas across," said Frank Bradford, reeve of Teck Township, which includes Kirkland Lake.

About 130 delegates, mainly from mining centres in Ontario and Quebec but also from Manitoba, British Columbia and the Northwest Territories, had two meetings with a cabinet group.

Energy Minister Pepin, Finance Minister Sharp and Labor Minister Nicholson attended a two-hour morning session, while Mr. Pepin and Mr. Sharp returned for an evening session.

The delegation's main concern was to obtain a four-year extension of the present Emergency Gold Mining Assistance Act and to modify the terms of the act to provide more assistance in operating mines.

At present, the federal subsidy covers up to two-thirds of the production cost of gold of a mine that is sold to the mint. The mining areas want this increased to 100 per cent to keep pace with rising costs that have hit the industry.

"We have regional differences, but we all have the same goal," Mr. Rainford told a reporter after the meeting.

"In Kirkland Lake, the most important step would be for exploration assistance, while in Timmins the accent is on help for producing mines."

A separate brief was submitted to Mr. Pepin by the United Steelworkers of America, dealing with pension needs for miners at present employed in the gold industry.

The union brief, presented separately from that of the mining communities, urged that company pension plans for older employees be made a condition for extension of the subsidy.

"The average age and service of gold mine employees is high," the brief said.

"Many of those soon forced to retire because of layoff, shutdown or old age will not be able to sustain themselves in the community and will become charges either on public welfare or private charity."

Delegates said later they did not expect an overnight cure for the ills of the gold industry. But with the present assistance act due to expire at the end of 1967, they wanted to ensure the subsidies—worth an estimated $18,900,000 this year—will be continued and improved.

They estimated the cost of their proposal for 100-per-cent subsidies at an extra $8,000,000 a year.

The brief pointed out that the cost of mining has increased steadily, while the price of gold has been set at $35 an ounce in U.S. currency since 1934. The last increase in the subsidy came in 1963.

Prudential Finance Deficit Goes Higher

TORONTO (CP) — Financial officials said Wednesday night the deficit position of Prudential Finance Corp. Ltd. may well be substantially more than the $3,500,000 at first suggested.

J. L. Biddell, president of Clarkson Co., trustees for Prudential Finance, and T. Garnet Ripley, executive vice-president of Metropolitan Trust Co., agents for Prudential Finance bond and note holders, made the announcement in a press release.

"The investigation being conducted into the affairs of Prudential Finance ... has so far indicated that the value at which the assets of Prudential have been carried in its accounts is greatly in excess of the amounts likely to be realized from them," the release said.

"Under the circumstances, it seems quite apparent that substantial losses will be incurred by the company's noteholders and creditors."

The estimated deficit of Prudential Finance when it was placed in the trusteeship of Clarkson Co., was $3,500,000. The finance company's books showed assets of about $23,500,000 and liabilities of about $27,000,000.

The announcement says the investigation is continuing and that a detailed financial report will be available for forwarding to noteholders and creditors early next week."

A meeting of noteholders and creditors is expected to be held about the middle of December.

Th announcement says:

"A large part of the assets of Prudential consist of its investments in subsidiary companies. The affairs of these companies have been reviewed and it has been found necessary to place one of them, Fifton Steel Ltd. (Oakville), in liquidation.

"The apartment building being constructed by Fifton Steel in Windsor, Ont., will be carried through to completion. Certain other relatively inactive subsidiaries as well may also prove to be insolvent and may have to be liquidated.

"The investigation has indicated that most of the main subsidiary companies of Prudential are in good financial condition and will continue in operation without interruption."

Bennett's Overtime Ban Of Concern to Industry

VICTORIA (CP) — British Columbia's contractors are concerned about Premier Bennett's ban on overtime work as a means of reducing inflationary pressures.

Many believe the idea is fine but won't work. How will inspectors look at the ban? Overtime rates, though expensive, can be less expensive than delays in a project, says George H. Wheaton of Victoria, vice-president of the 600-member Amalgamated Construction Associations.

George Wilkinson, vice-president of Maxwell Construction Co., said the premier's proposal will kill exploration and developments of the province.

He told the association's convention Tuesday that it would not be economical to add more men to remote construction camps where operational costs are high.

Putting a 40-hour work week into effect in camps would mean the construction industry is a "gone goose as far as camp work is concerned," Mr. Wilkinson said.

He said a 40-hour week in the populous centres means employees moonlight Saturdays on housebuilding jobs.

R. G. Saunders of Smith Brothers and Wilson, said contractors have a duty to adhere to the hours of work specified in collective agreements. It would be good for the industry

Surcharge Removed

LONDON (Reuters) — Britain's controversial import surcharge was lifted at midnight Wednesday night, opening the way to a rush of delayed imports and fears of a big trade deficit for December.

The surcharge, designed to cut imports and help balance Britain's trading accounts, was imposed by the Labor government a few days after its election in October, 1964.

Susanna's Family Fair

Removing the Unremovable.

Hello Susanna: As a general practitioner's wife may I say that one of the trials of my married life has been trying to remove dried blood stains from my husband's white jackets and shirts. So often when the blood was set, it was there to stay, and no amount of soaking in cold water would touch it.

Just recently however, I was soaking a garment for several hours, as usual, trying to diminish the marks as much as possible before washing it but there was one difference. I had added a small handful of ad soda to the basin of cold water.

To my astonishment, the marks completely disappeared.

I must say this is the only truly gentle method I have ever found for removing those almost unremovable sit-tight blood stains.

Doctor's wife.

Dear Sue: For frugal readers who surveyed hand knit garments and wish torn-use the wool, here is my contribution.

Wind the wool around a wire cake rack and dip the whole thing in water. When thoroughly dry, the wool, minus all the kinks, can easily be wound into a fresh ball.

Thank you for your most enjoyable column.

Mrs. Charles Dolman.

SUSANNA.

Kiesinger Haunted By Nazi Past

BONN (AP) — Kurt Georg Kiesinger, the skilled politician who has succeeded Ludwig Erhard as chancellor of West Germany, says that in his youth he wanted to be a poet.

So he sent a poem to a newspaper. As he tells it, a local lawyer read the poetry and advised him to take up law. He did.

That led him into politics and to join the Nazi party in 1933, a fact that has risen to haunt him.

Eight years ago, Konrad Adenauer, West Germany's first chancellor, considered making the energetic Kiesinger his foreign minister. But he decided against it because of Kiesinger's Nazi past.

PICKED 3 WEEKS AGO

Since then, the 62 - year - old Kiesinger has held the top office in the Baden-Wuerttemberg government, a job roughly equivalent to that of a provincial premier in Canada. Three weeks ago the Christian Democratic party picked him to succeed Erhard, the second chancellor.

Kiesinger has said that one of the first tasks of his government will be to set right West Germany's relations with France, which have become strained during Erhard's three-year tenure. Kiesinger said he would try to do this without damaging West Germany's ties with the United States.

Kiesinger's Nazi past came to the forefront again when he became a candidate for chancellor. Protests about it came from home and abroad. Kiesinger replied:

"I have clean hands. I know what I did and what I did not do."

Kiesinger joined the Nazi party when he was a 29-year-old lawyer. He says he turned against the party the following year, but he never left it.

In the Second World War he worked in the radio propaganda section of the Nazi foreign ministry. He says he was drafted into the job. The East German Communists have claimed he was a deputy section head and had 150 persons under him.

They also alleged that he attended high-level policy conferences at which Nazi Propaganda Chief Josef Goebbels was present.

After the war, Kiesinger spent 16 months in an American internment camp. A West German court fined him 50 marks (12.50) as an ex-Nazi. The fine was remitted when the court later ruled that he had risked his life to get a student out of a Nazi prison.

Kiesinger was born in Ebingen, Wuerttemberg, near the French border, son of an employee of a business firm. He studied philosophy, history and law and was active in a Roman Catholic student movement.

Kiesinger, a Roman Catholic, is married, and has two children.

Cable Television Started With 11 Homes Now 2,000,000 Clients Enjoy Fare

Cable television offering a multi channel choice of viewing, evolved as a brain child of an Astoria, Oregon television engineer in 1948, who used booster equipment to pick up Seattle, Washington.

This first system was built to serve 11 homes, and was the start of an industry — the CATV industry.

ROY TAYLOR
Cablevue Salesmanager

The next year in 1950 the first commercial CATV system (still operating) was installed in Lansford, Pennsylvania. More than 2,000,000 North American homes are now being served by the industry, with more than 35,000 homes being added each month. This involves more than 6,000,000 people with an additional 100,000 per month being added.

Some 2,000 CATV systems are in operation with 15 to 20 being added every month. They operate in virtually every province of Canada, every state of the United States and in dozens of countries overseas.

From small 70 subscriber systems serving remote villages in British Columbia to giant systems in Montreal and Vancouver with between 25,000 and 30,000 subscribers, CATV is big business.

It is an unusual business combining features of electronic craftsmanship, public service, broadcasting, door to door sales and politics. The estimated gross income from the industry is $135,000,000 and this is growing at the rate of $18,000,000 annually.

Originally the cable industry began as a master antenna industry with all the emphasis in the early days of 1950 on the antenna and its location for TV reception. Later more emphasis was placed on the cable and the unused channels on the cable. Thus today the master antenna is considered nothing more than part of the package concept.

Currently only one type of new system is being built, the all wave 12 channel system. In the early days (due to the equipment available) only low band (chanels 2 to 6) were built.

The signal loss in the early days, coaxial cable and unstable equipment made high band channels (7 to 13) impossible. Early amplifiers were tube type with high power drain. These tube type amplifiers were encased in four foot square by two foot deep boxes. Today's transistorized amplifiers are small in size and able to carry channels from 2-13 inclusive.

The early system generally carried only channels 2,4 and 6 because adjacent channel operation was impossible. The channels were separated with each having its own strip type amplifier. Each channel was treated separately. Tube life was short with several dozen tubes being replaced in the system every month. Many of these low band systems are still in operation.

MRS. RUTH HOUNSLOW
Office Accountant

Most early systems used coaxial cable but some used twin lead and open wire line. Radiation from this type of wire was often sufficient that a new subscriber had only to point his antenna at the passing line and receive as good or better reception than his neighbor connected to the system.

By the early 1960's it became apparent to most everyone that the CATV industry was here to stay. The concept of adding a high band output amplifier to existing low band systems was first introduced commercially in 1961. This was only moderately successful because at this time all band tube-type amplifiers were introduced and usually the system operator replaced his equipment with the new all band amplifiers.

At this time there was also talk of transistor equipment.

In 1962 Ameco displayed the first line of transistor amplifiers. The new transistor equipment was small and operated well under severe weather conditions with very little power drain. Some of the early transistors were subject to trouble and it was not until 1965 that this equipment became functional and reliable. Refinements since then have been many. Many operators of systems four years ago could not imagine all the improvements of equipment of today.

The same wild eyed dreamers who five years ago promoted all band transistor systems are today talking of 20 channel and even all spectrum system (UHF and VHF). These are the equipment improvements of the future of CATV.

For many years up to 1964 now CATV systems were being planned and franchises awarded at an orderly rate. Then in 1965 the top blew off the CATV scene with a flood of new franchise applications such as the industry had never seen. This has put a tremendous strain on experienced personnel for all cable systems.

CBC Operates Six Services; CBLT Flag Ship Station

Thirty years ago this month the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation came into existance under the terms of the Canadian Broadcasting Act.

The network when originally formed was made up of eight publicly owned and 18 privately owned radio stations. Today the CBC's radio and television networks comprise more than 480 outlets, carrying service to 96 per cent of the Candian population.

The CBC operates six major domestic services — English language radio and television networks, French language radio and television networks, a separate Frequency Modulation radio network, and a shortwave radio service to the Canadian North including programs in English, French and Eskimo dialects. The CBC International Service broadcasts daily in short wave in a dozen languages.

CBLT is the CBC-TV network's flagship station, but it also has to provide a service complementing the network, says CBLT manager Bill Weston, "That's what we hope to do this season, give our audience good coverage of local activities in all fields, plus an exciting lineup of straight entertainment."

Among the most important of the new CBLT shows will be a lively and topical magazine show, to be televised Monday to Friday at 7 p.m. Ross McLean, executive producer of the as yet untitled show, says "we will present a complete spectrum of local events, reported through film portraits, videotaped documentaries, studio interviews and discussions. I plan to employ a strong team of broadcasting journalists as an editorial board."

TV sports supervisor Len Casey is developing a prime time weekly sports program to be seen Monday night at 10:30. A late Tuesday night drama, comedy and variety series is scheduled for January. And in addition to these new local productions, the CBLT schedule highlights a group of nine adventure and comedy film shows, all of them in color.

Shows returning or continuing this fall include Luncheon Date with Elwood Glover; Metro News, with its up to the minute coverage of local events; Coronation Street; MZTA School; Cousin Bill, Extension, Gilligan's Island, and the Sunday morning block of French language programs. A new program Concert Populaire at 11 a.m. will alternate with church services.

Feature length films will also be continued for the late night viewing under general title of Cinema 4. Double bill features will remain on Friday and Saturday nights. The Western, with host Bill Beasey, shifts to Tuesday nights at 11:45.

CTV Has Ambitious 43-Hour Color Plans

CTV is planning 43 hours of color per week, but it will rise as high as 70 hours. One notable color highlight will be CTV national news with anchormen Ab Douglas and Harvey Kirck. The nightly newscast has been lengthened to 20 minutes, and CTV newsmen say that many of the film clips as well as Douglas and Kirck will be in color. You will be seeing a lot more fires, predicted one broadcaster.

The biggest show of course will be Hockey Night in Canada. Seasoned viewers report that hockey is a beautiful game to watch in color, some say it is easier to follow the puck.

Color TV does not flatter blondes unless their hair is beige or almost white. Dyed blondes with a yellowish tint tend to turn green, which is urgent for Juliette. She'll be seen in color on some of the CBC Show of the Week Specials. She has spent years evolving exactly the right hair tint for black and white TV. Now she may have to switch tints again or use a wig.

Singer Tommy Hunter, who had a make-up problem in black and white, came out of the CBC lab with flying flattering colors. The special color TV makeup which is lighter than the black and white variety, gave him a clear smooth complexion and seemed to take 10 years off his age.

Color is a wonderful medium to work in, said Hunter, beaming after comparing the two selves on the side by side color and black and white monitors in the studio. The same make-up does wonders for freckles and wrinkles but it won't hide a heavy jaw line, a too ruddy complexion or a tan.

200-Foot Towers Key to System

The tower for Cablevue's system is located on the 4th concession of Sydney, South West of Wallbridge. The tower or towers are referred to as H towers. The two towers are 200 feet high and 40 feet apart and are connected by 4 cat walks. Forty - one antennas are placed between these catwalks to receive the nine channels and five FM stations of Cablevue's system.

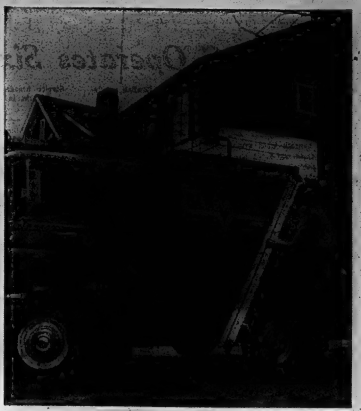
Sixteen of these 41 antennas are necessary to receive Channel 9—CFTO — Toronto, eight are necessary for Channel 6 — CBLT - Toronto, while the U.S. channels require four each. The head end equipment necessary to the system is housed in a cement block building at the base of the towers.

The trunk line from the towers follow the Wallbridge Road to the second Concession of Sidney, to West Moira Street, along Coleman to the Dower bridge crossing the river into the downtown area. The downtown area is the first area to open.

The cable along the trunk line is ¾" aluminum cable. The aluminum shields inner signal wire from outside interference such as appliances, cars, motors and signal lights.

In Cablevue's system the Bell Telephone Company is stringing the distribution cable on existing Bell poles. Cablevue's own installers tap off from this distribution cable to make the drops to the subscribers in the system.

The tap off points are predetermined before the installation of the distribution cable and installed at the same time as the cable. Most systems go back afterwards and install the taps as subscribers sign. There will be about 1,500 multi taps in the Belleville system. Four drops to subscribers can be made from each tap. The drop to the home is similar in appearance to a telephone drop and is installed to the back of the TV by a small transformer. If a second set is to be hooked up to the system a splitter is used and both sets are connected with small transformers. Once the connection is made the need of a house antenna and rotor is ended.



The equipment being used in Belleville is transistorized and the most up-to-date available.

Along the system as the signals travel, the signal gradually gets weaker. In order to boost or strengthen this signal, transistorized amplifiers are used. The amplifiers have automatic adjusting controls so that signal variations are corrected and the result is a constantly strong signal at every set. These amplifiers are usually about 2,000 feet apart. The Belleville system is made up of 82 miles of cable.

Belleville is divided into seven construction areas. As each is completed, services can be made available to the subscriber in the completed area. A completion of cable construction in Belleville will be in the spring of next year.

The office of Cablevue is located at 160 Front Street across from the City Hall and inquiries will be most welcome.

ANOTHER INSTALLATION — Technical assistant Oscar Schaltegger and installer Lorne Bailey prepare for another Cablevue house installation. Black plastic covered wire about the size of a pencil leads from street into house for connection on television.

Cablevue Means All-Network Color

It has taken several years of political debate, the retooling of an entire industry, the investment of countless millions and one of the costliest promotion campaigns in Canadian history.

But now the waiting period is over and the investment is starting to pay dividends. On Sept. 1 Canada became the third country in the world (after the United States and Japan) to transmit color television.

Only about 60,000 Canadians own color TV sets. They will tune in to such color shows as Batman and Jackie Gleason on CTV (Channel 9) instead of on a U.S. channel. Later on this season, they will be able to view old black and white shows, such as Front Page Challenge in color on the CBC.

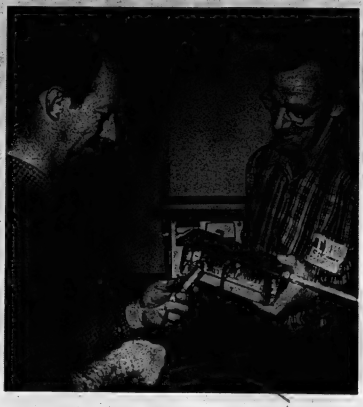
But the real change will come gradually as color TV becomes less of a novelty for most Canadians. The change may be less gradual than you think. By 1970, according to the Electronic Industries Association of Canada, Canadians will have invested between $700 and $2,000 each in what the Fowler Report on broadcasting referred to as "this new toy of the electronics industry".

Why will so many Canadians switch to the new toy so soon? The main reason is that color TV is much more than tinted black and white. It is practically a whole new environment.

Researchers at McLean advertising industry have found that Canadian color viewers spend much more time in front of their sets than black and white viewers.

It seems to involve them far more deeply than black and white. One color viewer, MacLaren's president George Sinclair, found this involvement almost uncanny in its intensity. "I seemed to be seeing all beauties of nature, I had the sense that I was seeing life as it really is, or perhaps as I would like it to look."

Part of the involvement stems from the fact with color TV the viewer has to be a participant. Tuning a color set can be a tricky business and it can become a matter of urgent family debate. The silver hive of Lorne Green's hair may look just right to the man who paid for the set but it may appear washed out to his wife and too blue for his daughter.



When NBC technicians first broadcast Bonanza in color, they discovered a whole new range of exotic problems. When they adjusted their cameras to bring out the full bronzed beauty of the Cartwright family, the trees in the background came out blue. So NBC dyed them yellow. They then looked just fine.

The TV revolution won't affect merely the color of the programs you will be seeing, it is also going to affect the kind of shows that get produced. Because it is easier to shoot color shows in studios, where color and lighting can be precisely controlled, there is bound to be an increase in panel shows, variety programs and productions that specialize in the cozy little interviews across a coffee table.

One such show is called Bright and Early, which CTV (Channel 9) is broadcasting from 7:30 to 8:30 Monday to Friday. CTV's Let's Sing Out, a hootenanny show that used to be shot on various campuses, will move to the CBC network. Its CTV (Channel 9) replacements, two folk variety shows called A Single and Brand new Scene, will be firmly anchored inside a color studio.

Both CBC and CTV are offering color shows every day of the week, which will be available to all affiliated stations. This means that 71 stations reaching 5.3 million households will be programming network color.

The CBC present color schedule, and it is still being juggled, offers about 25 hours of color programming each week. Most of it will be U.S. network series such as The Beverly Hillbillies, Hogan's Heroes and the Ed Sullivan show. Later this season you will see such Canadian shows as Flashback, Front Page Challenge, Festival and Show of the Week in color most weeks. One new series is called A World of Music starring folksingers Malka and Joso.

Could End Illusions

Britain in Euromart Means Big Changes

LONDON (AP) — If Britain joins the European Common Market, as it has expressed interest in doing, the changes in this island's life will be deep and subtle.

Food costs will increase but the consumers' income should also go up. There must be a change in farm and immigration policies and the method of paying for some social security costs.

It could spell an end to what some regard as national illusions about Britain's influence in the world and this could come as a shock for some.

Common Market farmers are guaranteed higher prices than Britain's state-subsidized farmers and the cost is passed directly to the consumer. Beef, butter and most livestock probably will cost more.

The government estimates this may increase the cost of food by between 10 and 14 per cent, although the rise will be spread over several transitional years. The Farmers' Union warns the cost will be about $3 a week extra, or almost twice the government's estimate. Price of imported fruits and vegetables will come down.

The entire British economic pie is expected to grow, and the breadwinner's share should be larger. Greater industrial opportunities is a huge six-country market, with 180,000,000 consumers now fenced off by a 20-per-cent tariff, represent the major argument for going into the economic community.

The big unknown is whether British firms can compete. Increasing British sales in Europe already indicate they can. Of the 10 largest companies in Europe, four are British.

Britain would have to make a host of adjustments in tax and immigration policies. The Common Market's founding treaty provides for free movement of workers on equal terms. For women, that means equal pay, long a sore point in Britain.

The average British worker will discover that he is not necessarily the best paid or best cared for in Europe. Fringe benefits — vacations, unemployment compensation, sick leave and pensions—are often better under other European governments.

Common Market countries spend between 14 and 18 per cent of their gross national product on social security, Britain 12 per cent.

The British finance welfare benefits largely out of taxes. The Common Market underwrites social security largely through employers' contributions and businessmen hesitate to carry surplus workers. In Britain this would mean less job security but a resulting tax savings might allow lower income taxes, long a brake on British personal incentive.

The market partners may demand that the British pound and its role as a world currency. Devaluation could be one price of British entry. It is more certain than other Common Market countries will be protected from the fiscal shocks Britain absorbs as a price for playing banker to half the world.

Britain's foreign investment and banking have helped underwrite its world influence for more than a century. The dividend for the average Englishman has been a pride in his country's international role in trade, politics and colonization.

Entry into the market would spell an end—and a healthy end, some say — to what are now often seen as only national illusions.

Bonanno Deported Four Others Jailed

MONTREAL (CP) — Salvatore Bonanno, the son of a big-shot member of the American Mafia, was ordered deported Wednesday night after four buddies were sentenced to two days in jail for illegally lugging around loaded revolvers.

Bonanno, 24, of New York City is to be kicked out of Canada today because a federal immigration department hearing found him to be "an undesirable visitor" who has a criminal record in the United States.

Bonanno and friends were among seven men arrested Tuesday when police moved in on a parked car which had aroused suspicions of residents in Montreal's north end. Six Americans and a Canadian were picked up.

Carlo Simari, 47, of New Brunswick, N.J., Peter Joseph Maggadino, 30, of Brooklyn, and Peter Notaro, 31, and Patrick DePilippo, 27, of the Bronx all pleaded guilty Wednesday to three charges of possession of dangerous weapons.

They were sentenced to two days in jail when court was told this was the minimum time required by immigration officials to cut through the red tape necessary to deport them.

PLEAD NOT GUILTY

Salvatore Bonanno pleaded not guilty earlier in the day to a charge of possessing an automobile without having a proper registration permit. He was ordered to stand trial Dec. 7, posted $100 bail and was turned over to the immigration department.

He is described by police as the son of Joseph (Joe Bananas) Bonanno, described by a federal grand jury in New York in 1963 as papa of a family of more than 40 alleged racketeer members of the Mafia.

Salvatore's dad himself was deported from Canada to Chicago in July, 1964, after entering Canada two months earlier when he told immigration officials he had intentions of going into business in Montreal.

Vito DePilippo, 54, father of Patrick, is to appear before a special immigration hearing facing deportation today. He was arrested with the others but was not charged.

A Montrealer who apparently was entertaining the visitors as his guests was picked up by police in the arrests, questioned Wednesday and freed.

Simari, Maggadino, Notaro and Patrick DePilippo were all in one car when police moved in, finding three loaded revolvers during a search of the vehicle.

Police noticed another car with three occupants had cruised by a couple of times during an investigation of four men who had been spotted in a brand new car. They followed the car and picked up the trio in a restaurant as the men were ordering a meal.

Won't Answer Draft Claims Templeton

PORT COLBORNE, Ont. (CP) Carlea Templeton reiterated again Wednesday night that he no longer has aspirations for the vacant Ontario Liberal party leadership.

In an interview before speaking to 300 delegates to the annual zone rally of Niagara District Lions Clubs, Mr. Templeton said his talks in Ottawa with a number of federal cabinet ministers Tuesday had done nothing to change his already stated position on the leadership.

Asked if there was anything that could conceivably convince him to answer a draft, he said: "I have already answered that question and have nothing more to say on the matter."

In a non-political speech, he said people should not criticize governments unless they are prepared themselves to take an active part in governing.

He said that only a minority of those in any government were ever open to charges that they were improperty using public funds.

Mr. Templeton suggested that much of the criticism heard today is caused by confusion in the minds of people unable to keep up with the swift pace of change taking place in the world.

May Lay Charges

OTTAWA (CP)—The city is seriously considering laying charges following an inquest into the Heron Road bridge collapse, city solicitor Donald Hambling said Wednesday.

The inquest Tuesday found the O. J. Gaffney Co. of Stratford and M. M. Dillon consulting engineers firm of London, Ont., responsible for the fall of falsework Aug. 10 which caused the death of nine workers and injured 50 others.

This is a closeup photograph of the crater Copernicus, a prominent feature on the face of the moon. It was taken Nov. 23 by the Lunar Orbiter II satellite and released in Washington by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. The view looks due north. Mountains rising from the crater's floor are 1,000 feet high with slopes up to 30 degrees. The 3,000 foot mountain on the horizon, left, is the Gal-Lussac Promontory in the Carpathian Mountains. Lunar Orbiter was 28.4 miles above the moon and about 150 miles due south of Copernicus when the picture was recorded.

Canada's Auto Makers Unite To Rebuff Commons Committee

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Competitors in the marketplace they may be, but before a governmental probe on auto safety, spokesmen for the Big Four automobile manufacturers are showing a united front.

In a three - hour exchange Wednesday night, an 18-man Commons committee on justice and legal affairs saw a number of its suggestions politely discouraged, a pattern anticipated to be repeated at the conclusion of two-days of hearings here this afternoon.

The auto manufacturers, represented by safety experts from Canada and the United States, advised the committee it would not welcome the placement of standards-checking federal inspectors at auto plants, that the possibility of the companies working in safety-seeking alliances was unlikely and that cars were not the slaves of style rather than safety.

The hearings at the University of Windsor resulted in a firm recommendation that Canadian auto manufacturers produce their total auto recall figures for the last five years for the committee's scrutiny and that the firms' parent companies in the U.S. consider revealing their own figures for the last three years.

The committee, acting on the recommendation of Russell C. Honey, Liberal member of Parliament for Durham, said it sought such figures to check on the effect of recent U.S. legislation calling for such publication.

John Addison, Liberal member for North York, suggested that auto companies combine their research projects into auto safety and "establish a non-partisan organization." He said a "crash program on auto safety" was needed.

William Scott, director of auto safety for the Ford Motor Co. in the U.S., said the auto companies' personnel "are trained to be competitive and it's difficult to consider alliances with competitors."

"In many cases, such an amalgamation of effort would duplicate much of what is already being researched."

He said the companies produced such different products that a united research program would not answer everyone's needs.

George Lacy, chief engineer and director of products for Chrysler Canada Ltd., agreed with Mr. Scott, as did K. B. Raham, chief production engineer for American Motors Canada Ltd.

Together with Ken A. Stoner, General Motors Corp. executive engineer, they agreed also that the design of cars was not a factor that overruled safety considerations.

But Roy Haesaler, chief engineer of auto safety for Chrysler Corp. in the U.S., admitted to the committee that "if safety was the only consideration, the vehicle would look different."

Asked if auto companies had investigated whether the names of cars induced drivers with a different driving attitude, Mr. Haesaler said there was no indication that it resulted in a less responsible use of a vehicle, but "we can't prove it one way or another."

Mr. Lacy told the committee that Chrysler Canada Ltd. was to begin today a series of "Arctic-type" tests on a fleet of its cars at White River, Ont. He said the tests would be in conjunction with the company's "hot, - weather" tests in the Arizona desert and would continue throughout the winter.

The four auto company spokesmen said their views were overpowered to the detriment of safety.

The public was asking for safety and the manufacturers subscribed to that view.

The committee continues its tour of U.S. auto safety research facilities in Michigan before resuming hearings here today. The legislators have viewed films and watched demonstrations of safety research in their two days here.

Fight Montreal Isle Air Pollution

MONTREAL (CP) — John Lynch-Staunton, a city council member, Wednesday called on the province to set up a metropolitan agency to deal with air pollution problems on the Montreal Island.

He told the Quebec branch of the Institute of Combustion and Fuel Technology of Canada that no single body can work independently and that all municipalities should band together to solve the problem.

"The province must establish an agency made up of men from government and industry and it must have strong regulations with which to work. The agency must have adequate personnel and money to enforce legislation."

An air pollution expert, George Gantcheff, said Quebec's Public Health Act is concerned chiefly with different aspects of industrial hygiene and health rather than dealing specifically with air pollution.

The city's efforts to control pollution were hampered by the fact that most of the Island's municipalities have no air-pollution regulations and the few that have them cannot enforce them due to lack of personnel.

Falcon Futura

This year's Fords are quieter because they're stronger, stronger because they're better built. The '67 Fords are even quieter than the '66's—and '66's proved quieter than one of the world's most expensive cars. This is the result of quality. And it's this quality that makes a Ford-built sedan better value than other cars. So when you buy one, you know you're getting a car that's worth more. One that's built stronger and lasts longer.

Ford sedans are the Quiet Ones, with the famous quiet ride. The quietness is the first thing you notice when you drive one and it's wonderful! These sedans have the solid worth that makes all the other features meaningful: the stylish appearance, the luxury touches, the roomy comfort—and no one big Ford advantage you'll notice right in the showroom: the trunk has one of the lowest lift-over heights of any car. Falcon sedans are the middleweight champions. They're big, they're roomy. And they're performance packed! You'll find them easy to handle and a joy to park.

Falcon sedans are the limousines of the compacts. They're easy to buy, economical to operate. And you'll be amazed at their performance. Falcon has two V-8 options this year.

Woman Invades Man's World But Fellows Don't Mind It

VANCOUVER (CP) — Christina Paton has intruded into the male domain, but the boys don't seem to mind it a bit.

Christina, a 25 - year - old beauty, is a female production assistant with the CBC's Vancouver-based 7 O'Clock television show.

"The fellows have been very nice about it," she said. "I think they like having a woman in the studio."

They made a special headset for her.

"It has flowers across the top of it and they painted the switch box I wear a beautiful baby blue."

But Christina is quick to add that just because the men give her flowers, it does not mean there is no competition with them.

"I'm very definitely in competition with them. But I don't feel like a pushy female. It's important to maintain your femininity and not to try to be like a man in a man's world.

"Being a woman is a benefit —you can cry if you want. Yes! When all else fails, break into tears."

She has found that maintaining femininity is no small job in a television studio.

"I have to crouch down in front of cameras, bend, jump and leap around, and some of the positions I have to assume keep me out of the way of the cameras are pretty ridiculous."

Her answer to the problem is skeins.

"Then I don't have to worry about slips and knees showing."

A sweater or blouse and a pair of soft-soled shoes that don't make a noise round out her working wardrobe.

"I have to holler, shout and yell sometimes and it's not the most feminine thing in the world, but no one seems to mind."

Adapting her wardrobe to the studio has been just as painless as her acceptance in the studio, because the men are used to seeing her there.

She was the producer's script assistant, or "good right hand" for the same show last year. The move to production assistant, or studio director, was a natural one even though she is a woman.

Her job requires her to be liaison between the producer in the control room and the performers on the studio floor, to be in charge of what goes on in the studio, to direct moves and to cue.

Christina also plays "den mother."

"The studio is a natural place for a woman. For instance, when you have a guest who's never been on TV before and he's nervous, it's much more a woman's place to say 'relax' and to get him a cup of coffee and play den mother. That's part of the job."

Originally from Edmonton, Miss Paton began her career as a graphic artist. She applied for a job with an advertising firm after she finished art school but found herself writing copy instead.

She went on to writing commercial copy for CFRN-TV in Edmonton and then looked west.

She first thought the logical stepping stones to success in TV were from Edmonton-to-Vancouver-to-Toronto.

"Now I'm here, I'm in love with the city and don't want to leave."

For a single woman, the working hours are awkward, but she is still convinced she is in the right business.

Sometimes she starts work at 7 a.m., has part of the day free, then finished up editing videotape or films until 11 p.m.

"I can't plan any social life because I just don't know when I'm working, but it's worth it."

More and More Women Are Becoming Secretaries

NEW YORK (AP) — Every little girl yearns at some time to become a ballet dancer, a nurse or a schoolteacher.

But the fact is that more and more little girls are growing up to become business secretaries.

Woman's place today is in the office as well as the kitchen. One of the results of the continuing industrial revolution has been to put American womanhood in a new seat of power—behind a typewriter.

Less than 100 years ago women were almost as scarce in business offices as pearls in restaurant oysters.

"According to the 1870 census, there were just seven female office workers," says Earl Tiffany Jr., president of the Royal Typewriter Co. "Today there are approximately 3,000,000 secretaries, stenographers and typists — and 98 per cent of them are women."

Another source, M. Merle Law, president of the National Secretaries' Association, agrees with Tiffany's figure of 3,000,000 but estimates the total number of U.S. women office workers in all jobs at 7,000,000.

How did women come to this giant step? Some historians trace it back to the year 1881 when the YWCA started the first typing courses for women.

Men disdained the clumsy, erratic machines of that era. But the girls, wearing leg-of-mutton sleeve blouses and high-button shoes, seized upon the typewriter as a key to economic freedom.

OPPORTUNITY GOOD

Here are some statistics which may explain why so many little girls today are turning to secretarial work rather than becoming ballerinas, nurses or schoolteachers:

"Between 1955 and 1964, those earning $100 or more weekly increased from five per cent to more than 28 per cent," says Tiffany. "Top secretaries command salaries of $10,000."

"Salaries vary in different parts of the country, but secretaries to middle - management men average $97 per week and secretaries to top-level management average $112 per week," Miss Law says. "But they range up to $17,400 a year and in one case, considering extra cash benefit, to $22,400."

Says Tiffany: "This is one field in which age presents a minimum drawback to the older woman. More than half of the Miss Typewriters' of this country are married, and almost half are more than 40 years old."

Says Miss Law, with considerable pride: "A survey of our members showed that 32.8 per cent owned their own homes, a car and some stock shares."

Both Tiffany and Miss Law believe the spread of automation offers no threat to the future employment of skilled women office employees.

Brother Tosses Water On Girl When Asleep

DEAR DORIS: I'm just about going crazy! You see, I have an 18-year-old brother (I'm 16) who is very, very immature. I guess this is because my mother (a widow) spoils him.

Anyway every day while I'm asleep he'll enter my bedroom and throw a cupfull of cold water smack in my face. He also locks me out of the house, sneaks around whenever he feels like it, and teases me until I'm blue in the face. His embarrassment me something terrible in front of my boy friends. Doris, I know it might be hard to believe, but he does these things just for 'kicks.'

My mother and older sister and brother just laugh. Well sometimes I cry for hours.— ON MY NERVES.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR NERVES: From where I sit, cold water and locked are going too far. Has it occurred to you that the 'kicks' come when you react with anger or embarrassment? Next time treat him the way he deserves: ignore him as much as possible.

Get your mother on your side by talking with her privately. Unless he is trained to be less sadistic, his parents will have something to answer for when he dishes out like treatment to a wife.

* * *

DEAR DORIS: About the problem of facial hair: Although electrolysis is somewhat painful and can be lengthy, great advancement has taken place in this field in the past years. Once under control it may not be necessary for more than a few infrequent appointments a year.

To me, the change both in appearance and mental relief, was worth every penny it cost. — ONE WHO KNOWS.

* * *

DEAR ONE: Glad to hear from you. I'd just like to add that nobody should put her faith in the hands of anyone but an expert, when it comes to electrolysis.

* * *

DEAR DORIS: I am a tired mother. Please help. — P.C.

* * *

DEAR MRS. P.C.: Fatigue can be like an illness. And it can make everything you do uphill work.

If your doctor says there is no organic thing wrong, you'll have to take a look at your routines with a critical eye. What are you doing that could be done more simply; what part of your life wearies you?

Boredom, not enough change, can do it; and just having too blessed much to do every day can do it too. If it's a large family and you find you work evenings, it's time Poppy took a hand and sent you off for an evening with the girls.

You can change things. You can reorganize your work, involve the kiddies in simple baking chores, get a rest after lunch, if you will only believe you can. And you can go to bed early every night you are home for the next two weeks.

For the sake of the ones who count on you, preserve yourself!

* * *

Confidential to SKIMPING: I gather you can't convince your husband that his allowance for food won't stretch over five hungry mouths. But it won't! Try putting him on an austerity diet.

Be sure you and the children have enough; but allow only minimum calories for him, considering his type of work and body build. He is not facing facts.

* * *

Confidential to VERY UNHAPPY WIFE: Trying to hold some home together is like sitting on a keg of dynamite. You never know when it will blow up. If the rumblings are too full of hate, children suffer more than gain by being there.

Another talk with that psychiatrist might guide you in deciding which category your particular explosive belongs to.

* * *

Confidential to CHURCHGOER: There comes a time in the life of every boy and girl when he has to decide things for himself. Nancy is eager for life and is irked by tight controls. Would you want her as a leaner forever?

No one can dictate a person's religion to them. Teach Nancy good principles to live by, then have some faith in her. It will be a great relief to her if she finds you still love her, at this point. Tolerance is the word.

* * *

DEAR DORIS: I'd like your advice on how to speak to a member in the family who has decided not to speak to me. We never meet because she won't come where I'm at so it is rather hard on her husband (my son.)

This happened over an estate settlement as lots is involved, but life is too short to be unfriendly, especially in your own family. Do you think I should try to contact her first? I do not like being on the outs. — PAW-IN-LAW.

* * *

DEAR PAW-IN-LAW: Is the cold shoulder because she came out on the short end of things? And if so, is it in your power to make it up to her a little?

Sure, you make the first move. Don't let the rift befild up if you can help it. We need our families, as she'll find out herself some day.

variegated cake decorating sprinkles

Cream together the butter and sugar until light. Beat in eggs. Sift in the unsifted flour, cream of tartar and baking powder, and mix well. Pick up dough in your hands and shape into a smooth ball between your palms. Place on floured large double sheet of wax paper, fold one-half of wax paper over dough, press down dough to flatten it to 1" thickness and chill for ¼ hour in refrigerator. Remove half of dough and roll it out thinly on well-floured board with floured rolling pin to ¼" thickness. You should work rather quickly to prevent dough warming up. This is beautiful dough to handle. Cut out with 2" fluted cutter and place on buttered cookie sheet about ½" apart. These cookies do not spread. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for about 8 or 10 min. Do not brown these cookies at all. Remove from oven the minute they are baked.

Repeat rolling and cutting out with second half of chilled dough but cut these out with 2½" cutter (for variety's sake) and bake as above. Cool on cake racks. Make sandwich cookies by putting them together in pairs with red currant or raspberry jelly or jam between. Place exactly ½ tsp. over half of the 2" cookies and press remaining 2" cookies gently over to spread jelly or jam to edges. Use exactly ½ level tsp. red jam or jelly between the 2½" cookies.

WHITE SATIN FROSTING:

In a bowl mix together 2½ cups unsifted icing sugar, 1½ tsps. salad oil, 3 tbsps. warm water, shake of salt, ¼ tsp. almond flavoring. As soon as you have it smooth, thick, sprinkle tops of some with red sugar crystals. Sprinkle some with green sugar crystals. Sprinkle some with vari-colored cake decorations (non-pareils and trundles). Or, with three or four "silvers" each. Let set on cake racks.

This makes a colorful array of some of the daintiest, tastiest cookies you can create and will be a sensation at your Christmas tea parties. Make up a pretty plateful, cover with saran and carry it yourself to a new neighbor or an old friend.

Ancients Believed Zircon Could Cure Sleeplessness

Written for The Canadian Press
By MARGARET NESS

If you suffer from insomnia and are born in December, you have a handsome remedy. Wear a zircon in some form of jewelry. The ancients believed this stone could cure sleeplessness. The other, more popular, birthstone for December is the turquoise.

Both stones were supposed to protect their wearers from evil and also to bring prosperity. The good luck surrounding turquoises goes back to an ancient Persian king. He discovered a turquoise mine one day and won a battle the next.

Good luck in fame came to two December-born women, the late Helena Rubinstein of the cosmetic empire and the English novelist Jane Austen. Others, such as Mary Queen of Scots and Henry VIII's Catherine of Aragon, were not so fortunate. Canadian Jody Laird Marsh and Marlene Dietrich also qualify for turquoises or sircona.

Turquoises have been popular from ancient times. In 1900, archeologists opened the tomb of an Egyptian princess. One arm were four bracelets of cast-gold and turquoises. The stones were as fresh as if they had been some 5,000 years before when they were buried with her.

POPULAR FOR CHILDREN

Oddly, in Victorian England, turquoises were for a time used mostly in children's jewelry. They were set in lockets and worked as birthstone gems in rings. But they soon returned to adult favor when Sarah Bernhardt, performing as Cleopatra in 1890, wore a number of turquoise ornaments. Then, as now, stars could start a fad. So French and English women clamored for jewelry with an Egyptian motif, studded with turquoises.

The finest turquoises came from Persia where the Shah had royal rights to the mines. One of the largest is four inches long.

In the Middle East the turquoise is regarded as the most powerful protection against the evil eye. Even today in Turkey, donkeys and horses wear at least one blue bead on their harness, to simulate a turquoise, to ward off the evil eye. In the famous huge covered bazaar in Istanbul you can buy blue beads, even eyes for the same purpose.

Persian turquoises were a wedding gift to Elizabeth the Queen Mother from King George V. The set included a large necklace, ear-rings and corsage brooch. An earlier English queen also owned turquoises. The court jeweller to James I listed several turquoise ornaments he created for James's consort, Queen Anne. Napoleon's first gift to Josephine was a gold ring with six small turquoise stones.

FLUMES MAKE COMEBACK

Fashions in jewelry are revived from time to time.

The Victorians were fond of plume and leaf designs. One brooch for 1837 evening wear was a bracket of pearls on a branch of turquoises. At the Paris exhibition of 1867, a butterfly brooch glittered with a gold and turquoise body and wings of diamonds and emeralds.

This fall, Napier of New York featured stylized plume and leaf brooches and ear-rings, set with imitation precious stones, in turquoises. There are also huge leaves, pendants and lockets in the Victorian style from Trifari, with pearloid jewels. Monet likes exquisite florals in colored fake jewels.

While the best turquoises came from Persia, others were found in Central America by the Spanish conquerors and were used in early eastern jewelry by Spanish rulers. Turquoises are also found in the western United States. The rarest turquoise, however, is colbalt. The gem was first brought to Europe via Turkey and so was called the Turkish stone.

Turquoise is usually blue but may also have a touch of green. It is a soft stone and jewellers advise removing a turquoise ring before washing your hands. The soap and water can penetrate the stone and change its color.

The zircon has brilliance and fire. But in its natural state it is often a sort of uninteresting brown. It wasn't until a 30th century Soviet scientist was used that the lovely blue color was produced. The chief sources of zircons are Ceylon and Indo-China.

Bride Wants to See Hubby Without Plate

DEAR ANN LANDERS: We are newlyweds who have reached an impasse and have agreed to abide by your decision.

My husband has a partial plate. I knew this when I married him but it made no difference. The problem is that my husband refuses to allow me in the bathroom when he is brushing his plate. It hurts me to be shut out.

I feel a married couple should be completely open with each other in every way. I have never refused my husband anything he has asked of me. Last night I begged him to let me see him without his partial but he said, "No." Please settle this disagreement in my favor because it means a lot to me. — ALMOST PARADISE.

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ALMOST: I believe married couples should be completely open, too, but what you are after is not openness. It is, instead, a violation of your husband's privacy.

Too much togetherness can suffocate a marriage. People need to be alone. If the man is self-conscious about being seen without his partial plate, for heaven's sake respect his feelings. And please read the next letter. It may help you view the situation differently.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Three months ago, my husband had dentures made. I was happy when he finally agreed to put his mouth in shape because he has been needing it for a long time.

The problem is he will not keep his teeth in. He looks about 20 years older without his dentures and I hate to look at him. He also spoils my appetite when he takes his teeth out and gums his food.

I have asked him repeatedly why he keeps removing his dentures and he claims it takes a while to get used to them. He says nobody who has his own teeth knows how it feels to have plates.

Please, Ann, please print my letter and your advice because I see other men going around toothless and I just can't understand it. — BAFFLED BELLE.

DEAR BELLE: Your husband's dentures are probably uncomfortable. He should go back to the dentist and get them adjusted. Tooth cement help your husband eat better or look better if they are in a glass. Urge him to make an appointment at once.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My wife doesn't think we have a problem. I disagree.

Our youngest son is in the fifth grade. Ever since he started to talk he has told the most fantastic stories. I admit I used to think it was funny, but now I feel it's time he stopped the story-telling and stuck to the truth.

My wife says his imagination is wonderful. She enjoys repeating his wild stories to anyone who will listen. Often she does this in the boy's presence. When I tell her I think our son needs help she laughs and says he will outgrow it. What do you think? — PERPLEXED PAPA.

DEAR PAPA: A fifth grader (even though he has a vivid imagination) should be able to separate fact from fantasy. You too have encouraged your son's story-telling and now you must put a stop to it or he will turn into one of the world's biggest liars.

Make it clear that every time the boy tells a story he must label it as a story. Show your appreciation for his fantasies, but show even more appreciation for the truth.

Home and School Association News

QUEEN MARY

The November meeting of the Queen Mary Home and School Association was divided into three parts: a bake sale supervised by Mrs. D. Williams, a talk on the unit system by Miss Phyllis Beatty, and another on the unit system by Mr. R. Horwood.

According to Miss Beatty, supervisor of the city's elementary schools, the unit system divides the work originally covered in grades one through four into 12 units. Some children start unit one in Kindergarten, most do units one, two and three in Grade I. By dividing the workload into these smaller segments education reaches out to each individual child and encourages him to reach out to the world.

Prof. Marshall McClintock of Toronto University claims "Children live in a total environment." The unit system is one of the methods being used to update what he feels is a 19th century school system. It is the latest stage of a development in "the biggest service industry in the world." Education started with the one - roomed school - house. Then came compulsory education. Now, in effect, is the abolition of the grade system during the early years.

Inspector Horwood showed how education had developed through the years, stressing that the report card was not to be taken out of context. It is primarily a way of telling parents whether or not their child is progressing satisfactorily. They are to be taken in conjunction with a child's unit placement and overall attitude. "Education in the future must become child - centred with larger and better services, enabling the child to reach his full potential." Instead of being taught, a child of the 20th century is having to be taught how to learn.

Grade 13 teacher, Mrs. G. Anderson introduced Miss Beatty. PTA executive member D. R. Robertson introduced Mr. Horwood.

Mrs. Williams was aided at the bake sale by social convenors Mrs. O'Connor and Mrs. Lancaster. Mr. R. Boulsteel thanked the speakers.

Continuing the "Parent Information Year Theme" the next meeting, in February, will be a question and answer panel. Principal Bernard Wright asked for queries and suggestions for this meeting.

Brinkmanship Threatens Middle East

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Intensified brinkmanship in the Middle East threatens to tip the area into a war that none of the local rulers wants.

But the heightened danger may well act as a warning to leaders such as Egypt's Gamal Abdel Nasser to draw back. The crisis could result in power shifts that serve to reduce tension—providing war-shy leaders can keep control.

Israel's punitive attack on Jordan Nov. 13, which provoked the present crisis, was widely seen by Western experts and even some Israelis as a political and military mistake.

The Hebron raid incurred the censure of the Security Council last Friday and has caused anti-Hussein rioting in Jordan that threatens to remove one of the few moderate Arab voices on Israel's frontier.

Eastern Ontario Farms Trail Rest of Ontario

OTTAWA (CP) — Agriculture Minister Greene says farming in eastern Ontario occupies an inferior position when compared with the rest of the province.

Farms in eastern Ontario averaged gross sales of $3,787 compared with the province-wide average of $6,278, the 1961 census had showed.

Mr. Greene spoke Wednesday night before annual conference of the Eastern Ontario Development Council (EODC) here.

The EODC is a self-help organization made up of business and municipal representatives from 36 municipalities in Eastern Ontario's "golden triangle". It promotes industrial development.

Mr. Greene cited three main reasons for the unfavorable position of eastern Ontario agriculture—poor soil, unprofitable small farms and inadequate drainage in those areas which do have good soil.

Out of a potential 3,000,000 acres of productive land, more than 1,500,000 acres had restricted uses because of inadequate drainage.

Mr. Greene said the federal government has made a start on this problem with the South Nation River drainage, dam, reservoir and channel projects, expected to cost more than $1,500,000.

In the case of farms located on poor soil with small acreage, he suggested consolidating several small uneconomic units. Small farms now struggled on with little mechanization.

Golden Triangle

Development Officers Proposed

OTTAWA (CP)—John Spence of Ottawa, president of the Eastern Ontario Development Council, proposed Wednesday the hiring of development officers to keep municipalities abreast of government development schemes.

The Spence proposal would place development officers in each of the council's five zones to encourage local industry and keep it informed on available government assistance programs.

Mayor Donald Irvine of Prescott said "the idea is not sufficiently developed to hire one man, let alone five."

Mr. Spence said the development officer scheme would be a $75,000-plus operation.

Russell Kimball of Cornwall said the scheme is "premature by a year, but a move in the right direction."

Alderman Douglas Warner, also of Cornwall, said only one such officer should be hired initially.

Councillor Alphonse Redmond of Pembroke said the council should "stick to its original purpose, industrial promotion."

Dr. D. M. Ray of Spartan Air Services, Ottawa, a guest panelist, said eastern Ontario has not done as well economically as southwestern Ontario although the latter has no higher potential.

He illustrated this by saying southwestern Ontario business is linked to 454 U.S. head offices compared with 52 for eastern Ontario.

E. R. O'Kelly, a manufacturing executive from Brockville, said that there is a shortage of skilled people in industry in his area.

"Before we can expand in this area we have to provide the facilities to educate people," he said. "This is one of the major problems—where are we going to get skilled people?"

Kiesinger Is Chancellor

BONN (AP)—Christian Democrat Kurt Georg Kiesinger was elected West Germany's new chancellor today, leading the 21-year-old nation's first Christian Democratic-socialist coalition.

Kiesinger's election by the Bundestag, Parliament's lower house, was assured during the night when the Bundestag members of the two major parties agreed to support a coalition cabinet headed by him to end the 34-day government crisis.

In the final balloting today, the Bundestag elected Kiesinger by a vote of 340 to 109 with 23 abstentions. The result was announced by speaker Eugen Gerstenmaier.

The two parties have been rivals since the republic's birth in 1949. Their union was generally considered a temporary expedient until the general elections in 1969, if it holds together that long.

Kiesinger succeeds Ludwig Erhard, whose coalition with West Germany's third party, the Free Democrats, fell apart Oct. 27 in a budget dispute over raising taxes to pay for U.S. arms. Both Kiesinger and Erhard are Christian Democrats.

As junior partners in the precedent-breaking "grand coalition," the socialists (Social Democrats) were given nine of the 19 cabinet posts to be announced later today.

CLEARED HURDLES

Kiesinger cleared his last hurdle to the top job early today when the Social Democratic Bundestag members piled 128 to 33-to support him.

A statement issued after the 6th-man socialist meeting said the declaration of support for Kiesinger "does not weaken what the socialists have said up to now about the policies and personalities of the Christian Democrats."

Kiesinger, 62, for the last eight years minister-president of his native state of Baden-Wuerttemberg, announced earlier that his own 245-member party Bundestag faction had overwhelmingly approved his cabinet.

A veteran politician who resigned his Bundestag seat to take the governor's job, Kiesinger has been widely criticized for his Nazi past. Former Chancellor Konrad Adenauer decided not to make him foreign minister eight years ago because of it.

Kiesinger joined the Nazi party in 1933 when he was a 29-year-old lawyer. He says he quit against the party the following year but did not leave it.

DEFENDS CHIEF

In a television interview Wednesday night, Brandt defended his new chief but noted that Kiesinger had been nominated by the Christian Democrats, not his party.

Erhard, who resigned Wednesday and told reporters he was glad the crisis was over, touched on another aspect of the Nazi issue. He said in a televi-sion speech the election of liberal-nationalist National Democratic party members to the Bavarian and Hesse state legislatures was a symptom of dissatisfaction and peevishness which "have nothing to do with the rebirth of Nazism."

Medicare and TV Keep Commons Busy

OTTAWA (CP)—With thoughts being given to televising Commons debates, the House performed its own version of a medical show again Wednesday.

The dry procedural wrangling on the government's medical care insurance bill wasn't likely to find a sponsor as it droned on for the third straight day.

House Committee Chairman Herman M. Batten knocked down the seventh opposition attempt to broaden the meaning of the term "medical practitioner," but needed a ruling by Speaker Lucien Lamoureux to make his own stand.

The bill, already approved in principle when the present debate began Monday, provides that the federal government will pay 50 per cent of the provincial cost of approved provincial medical care plans.

During the question period, Opposition Leader Diefenbaker renewed his suggestion for experimental telecasts of the daily Commons quiz. Prime Minister Pearson said he would be glad to consider the proposal.

Mr. Diefenbaker proposed a vote free of party lines on the subject. He noted the British Parliament turned down the idea by only one vote last week.

It was the second time television was turned on in the Commons Wednesday. In the hottest exchange of the day, MPs criticized the CBC public affairs program Sunday for its use of a film clip last weekend that discussed sex in blunt terms.

Wednesday's main debate never got past a decision by Mr. Batten on a amendment proposed Tuesday by Dr. P. B. Rynard (PC—Simcoe East).

Dr. Rynard wanted the term "medical practitioner" to include those engaged in any aspect of the "healing arts" that is recognized by a province or by an organization that is recognized by a legislature.

Mr. Batten ruled that the government resolution preceding the bill did not allow this broad interpretation of medical practitioner; Dr. Rynard challenged the chairman's ruling.

Mr. Speaker Lamoureux supported Mr. Batten's ruling, marking the seventh time opposition attempts to insert para-medical services in the bill have failed. There is no appeal of the Speaker's ruling.

Unhappy with the ruling, Mr. Fulton said Health Minister MacEachen now had been driven to his "absurdity in proposing to remove from insured services what is in effect a medical service."

He referred to the minister's statement Tuesday night that the government would allow provinces to withdraw coverage of eye examinations provided eye doctors to avoid any discrimination against optometrists, not covered under government plans.

Mr. MacEachen said he was not proposing to disallow a service. His proposal is "to provide the provinces with an opportunity, if they so wish, to remove eye refractions from insured services."

In the Senate, Chief Justice Robert Taschereau of Canada, acting as deputy to the Governor-General, gave royal assent to a bill covering some $1,500,000,000 in government expenses up to March 31, 1967.

Provinces May Ask Medicare Restrictions

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal government plans to change its definition of comprehensive medical care, a key condition attached to its offer last year to pay half the cost of provincial medical care insurance plans.

As a result, individuals may have to pay the full cost themselves of one kind of eye examination.

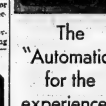
And Health Minister Mrs. Eachen said in an interview Wednesday the federal government will consider any provincial request that further medical procedures be excluded from insurance coverage.

However, he does not contemplate placing further medical service exclusions before the Commons, now debating legislation to implement the federal medical care proposals.

Mr. MacEachen announced Tuesday night that provincial plans may exclude eye refractions—tests to determine abnormal vision—from insured medical services and still qualify to receive federal financial support for their plans.

The decision has apparently been in the works, unannounced and unpublicized, since last fall, only a few weeks after Prime Minister Pearson made the federal offer to the provinces.

In the original offer, Mr Pearson defined medicare as including "all services provided by physicians, both general practitioners and specialists."



The only exclusions mentioned were those services now covered by hospital insurance or workmen's compensation and "certain limited types of service . . . for example, cosmetic surgery, unless it is required as a medical necessity."

Despite numerous efforts by the provinces and by the medical and associated professions to water down the federal conditions, Mr. MacEachen stood firm on them in public.

But the federal government had already agreed, in effect, to add eye refractions to the medical services that could be excluded.

SPORTS SLICES

By Geo. H. Carver
Sports Editor

One of the better links that has bound the administration, operation and performance of sports and other municipal activities of the city the past four years is learning for greener and more lucrative pastures this week.

Norm Carter, the quiet-spoken unassuming assistant director of recreation here has accepted a position in Oakville — and leaves tomorrow for the new job.

NORM CARTER

And it's my hunch it couldn't have happened to a nicer, more efficient guy than Norman. The new job carries an imposing name — director of facilities — which embraces athletic, social and other activities. There will be a staff of 16 people under his supervision.

If his manner, personality and efficiency can be judged a criterion, Norm should have no trouble in his new sphere of activities.

Oakville's ambitious program of expansion stretched over a period of five years, called for the creation of the position of director of facilities. Carter's experience and record filled the bill.

As Carter points out, the position is a "very challenging one but with the facilities and staff placed at my disposal I'm sure I will make a success of it."

The town of Oakville recently annexed the entire township of Trafalgar, some 129 square miles. This will increase the town's population to some 53,000 people.

It already has built a new city hall, new board of education, public utilities and parks board buildings some three miles from the present downtown area. Within 10-15 years, Norm says, this area will be the heart of the new Oakville.

Norm was born in Ole Lennox Town and has been athletics-minded since his birth. Soccer was his first love and he played with Carabalin Athletics, a farm club of the famous Toronto Hotspurs.

Later he became interested in track and field and played in the British national games, in broad-jumping and the sprints. He dabbled a bit in cricket, too, and later became associated with adult gymnastics.

He came to Canada in 1952 and soon associated with his father Bob Carter in the interior decorating business. Then the call of athletics sounded and he went to Lenox, Ontario as recreation director and arena manager after taking a course in recreational training at the University of Western Ontario.

He came to Belleville in 1961 as assistant director of recreation and his work during his brief tenure here has been outstanding.

Soon after he arrived here the old urge to play soccer returned and he joined the only city soccer club in his way we more specifically, it was the former Northern Electric club that was more or less invincible the season Carter was with them. He played the outside right position.

The N.E.'s that year won the Bay of Quinte and Eastern Ontario leagues titles; the Trenton Challenge Cup and the Belleville Charity Cup. It swept the soccer plate clean.

His activities here were numerous. He took part in administrational and operational programs from minor sports to young people's activities, senior citizens, arts and crafts and was supervisor of training of playgrounds leaders.

He was appointed the chairman of the Society of Directors of Municipal Recreation of Ontario and was chairman of the committee for junior track and field development for Ontario.

Norman is married and has two married daughters, Mrs. Brenda Brown of Belleville and Mrs. Valerie Neil of London and one son Bob now in his final year at Quinte Secondary School.

"They say I have been successful here," Norman said, "but a big factor in that was the wholehearted co-operation I received from all with whom I came in contact. I have made many friends here and I want to thank all of them."

This column joins the sportsmen and others of the city and district in extending all wishes for success for Norm in his new environment. He was extremely well-liked in the many spheres in which he moved. Oakville has gained a fine new citizen, one who I am sure, will be a distinct credit to the town and who will discharge his new duties in the same manner that marked his efforts in this city.

Crush Guelph 19-0

Blues Run Goal-Wild

GUELPH (CP) — University of Toronto Blues went on a scoring rampage Wednesday night to crush University of Guelph Redmen 19-0 in a penalty-studded Ontario - Quebec Athletic Association senior intercollegiate hockey game.

It was the third win in as many starts for the Blues and the fourth loss for the winless Redmen who have tied one of five games.

Toronto's Hank Monteith picked up seven points to run his league-leading total to 12 points. His linemates, Paul Laurent and Steve Monteith, garnered five points apiece.

Referee Hughie McLean cleared the ice in the second period when a brawl broke out, involving everyone but Toronto goalie John Wrigley.

A total of 29 penalties—including seven majors and four misconducts — were assessed during the game.

Blues Blank Hawks; Leafs Nip Habs

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

If it takes shutouts for a goalie to stick in the National Hockey League, Ed Giacomin of New York Rangers is making a determined bid to end his long stay in the minors.

Giacomin recorded his second shutout in a row and his third of the season as the Rangers blanked Chicago Black Hawks 5-0 Wednesday night. Toronto Canadiens 3-2 in the other game.

With Giacomin making 32 stops, Reg Fleming scored two goals to lead the New York attackers and assisted on one by Bernie Geoffrion. Orland Kurtenbach and Don Marshall also scored.

The win was the ninth for the Rangers in 10 games and their second in a row over the Hawks, keeping them in a tie for second place with the Leafs, one point behind the Black Hawks.

Giacomin, with a goals-against average now less than 2.50, was obtained by New York from Providence of the American League in 1965 for four players. After allowing 128 goals in 35 NHL games, he was demoted to Baltimore Clippers of the AHL. But this season, he's taking a good shot at ending his six-year stint in the junior leagues.

BLANKED TORONTO

He had a 5-0 shutout Sunday night against Toronto, also the victim of a 1-0 blanking Oct. 22.

Kurtenbach and Geoffrion shot the Rangers into a 2-0 first-period lead and Marshall upped the score to 3-0 before the one-minute mark of the third. Fleming, the NHL's bad boy with 67 minutes in penalties, killed whatever hopes the Hawks had for a rally when he scored his two goals at 2:13 and 15:23 of the third.

In the other game, Brian Conacher connected for his sixth goal of the season with nine minutes remaining in the game to snap a 2-2 tie and give the Maple Leafs a 3-2 win over the Canadiens. Tim Horton and John Brenneman scored the other Toronto goals. Claude Provost and Henri Richard replied for Montreal.

Conacher, in his rookie season, beat Gump Worsley with a hard 20-foot drive. Horton and Brenneman gave the Leafs a 2-0 lead before the game was five minutes old. Provost and Richard tied the score in the second period, setting the stage for the deciding marker.

The Leafs have three wins and a tie against the Canadiens this year. They fired 26 shots at Worsley and the Canadiens had 36 shots at Terry Sawchuk.

One game is scheduled tonight—Boston Bruins, tied for fourth spot with Montreal, meet last-place Detroit Red Wings in Detroit.

ABEL KEEPS PROMISE

Sid Abel, coach and general manager, promised last week that some changes would be made before the club's next home game and he kept his word.

He sent Andy Bathgate and two other players to Pittsburgh Hornets of the AHL and recalled Ray Cullen in an effort to bring his club out of a six-game losing streak.

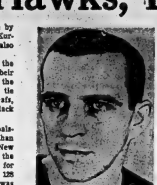
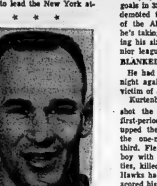
Bathgate has been in a slump this season, scoring three goals and assisting on three others.



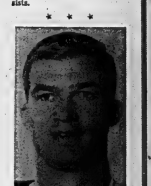
In 1961-62 with New York, he tied with Chicago's Bobby Hull for the scoring championship. He was traded to Toronto Feb. 22, 1964, and then to Detroit May 29, 1965.

Cullen, who played eight games for the Rangers last season, getting one goal and three assists, is the leading scorer on the Pittsburgh team.



Bobby Orr, Boston's rookie sensation who suffered a twisted knee against the Red Wings last week, is expected to be back with the Bruins for tonight's game.

Orr missed last Sunday's game against the Hawks because rookie coach Harry Sinden said the club didn't want to take any chances of further injury.



Orr, an 18-year-old defenceman, has six goals and six assists.

"Tiny" Herman Killed In Plane Crash

METCALFE, Ont. (CP) — C. B. (Tiny) Herman, 60, a Halifax-born former Montreal Canadiens player, was killed when his single - engine plane crashed Wednesday in a muddy field near here, eight miles from Ottawa's Uplands airport.

The two business associates were returning to Ottawa after flying to Cornwall to make plans for the 1967 Canadian curling championships, to be held in Ottawa next March. Mr. Herman, a top-notch curler, was chief organizer for the event.

The tower at Uplands airport heard radio distress calls from Tiny seconds before the accident. "We're forced land," he said, "Mayday, mayday, mayday."

Ray Baker, a farmer who lives near the scene of the crash, said the nose of the Beech Bonanza was badly damaged but the tail was intact.

"It looked as though they tried to land on a field making it too sharp an angle and just ploughed into the mud," he said.

The transport department began an investigation, checking reports that the plane's engine failed.

Mr. Yoxon was taken to Uplands by helicopter.

Charles Blainarck Herman was a successful Ottawa insurance agent and a popular sportsman. "A six-foot-three giant of 280 pounds, he loved to curl, ski, swim and golf. He took up flying only a year ago.

His sports career began in Halifax, where he played Explayed Rugby and was a member of the Maritime champion Halifax Wanderers.

In 1932 he was a triple gold medallist at the Canadian Athletics Championships, winning the hammer, shot and discus events.

After being transferred to the RCMP's fingerprint laboratories in Ottawa in 1933, Tiny joined the Rough Riders to play Canadian football. By 1936 he was an all-Canadian inside wing and in 1937 won the league's scoring title. He starred in the 1936, 1938 and 1940 Vanier Cup games.

During the Second World War Tiny joined the lieutenant-commander in the navy, commanding escort vessels in the north Atlantic.

SPORTS SLICES

By Geo. H. Carver
Sports Editor

One of the better links that has bound the administration, operation and performance of sports and other municipal activities of the city the past four years is leaving for greener and more lucrative pastures this week.

Norm Carter, the quiet-spoken unassuming assistant director of recreation here has accepted a position in Oakville — and leaves tomorrow for the new job.

NORM CARTER

And in my book it couldn't have happened to a nicer, more efficient guy than Norman. The new job carries an imposing name — director of facilities — which embraces athletic, social and other activities. There will have a staff of 16 people under his supervision.

If his manner, personality and efficiency can be judged a criterion, Norm should have no trouble in his new sphere of activities.

Oakville's ambitious program of expansion stretched over a period of five years, called for the creation of the position of director of facilities. Carter's experience and record filled the bill.

As Carter points out, the position is a "very challenging one but with the facilities and staff placed at my disposal I'm sure I will make a success of it."

The town of Oakville recently annexed the entire township of Trafalgar, some 129 square miles. This will increase the town's population to some 23,000 people.

It already has built a new city hall, new board of education, public utilities and parks board buildings some three miles from the present downtown area. Within 10-15 years, Norm says, this area will be the heart of the new Oakville.

Norm was born in Ole Lennox Town and has been athletics-minded since his birth. Soccer was his first love and he played with Carshallin Athletics, a farm club of the famous Tottenham Hotspurs.

Later he became interested in track and field and played in the British national games, in broad-jumping and the sprints. He dabbled a bit in cricket, too, and later became associated with adult gymnastics.

He came to Canada in 1952 and was associated with his father Bob Carter in the interior decorating business. Then the call of athletics sounded and he went to Leeds, Ontario as recreation director and arena manager after taking a course in recreational training at the University of Western Ontario.

He came to Belleville in 1961 as assistant director of recreation and his work during his brief tenure here has been outstanding.

Soon after he arrived here the old urge to play soccer returned and he joined the only city soccer club in who area — the Belleville Rangers — and as former Northern Electric club that was more or less invincible the season Carter was with them. He played the outside right position.

The N.E.'s that year won the Bay of Quinte and Eastern Ontario leagues titles; the Trenton Challenge Cup and the Belleville Charity Cup. It swept the soccer plate clean.

His activities here were numerous. He took part in administrational and operational programs from minor sports to young people's activities, senior citizens, arts and crafts and was supervisor of training of playgrounds leaders.

He was appointed the chairman of the Society of Directors of Municipal Recreation of Ontario and was chairman of the committee for junior track and field development for Ontario.

Norman is married and has two married daughters, Mrs. Brenda Brown of Belleville and Mrs. Valerie Neil of London and one son Bob now in his final year at Quinte Secondary School.

"They say I have been successful here," Norman said, "but a big factor in that was the wholehearted co-operation I received from all with whom I came in contact. I have made many friends here and I want to thank all of them."

This column joins the sportsmen and others of the city and district in extending all wishes for success for Norm in his new environment. He was extremely well-liked in the many spheres in which he moved. Oakville has gained a fine new citizen, one who I am sure, will be a distinct credit to the town and who will discharge his new duties in the same manner that marked his efforts in this city.

Toronto's Hank Monteith picked up seven points to run his league-leading total to 12 points. His linemates, Paul Laurent and Steve Monteith, garnered five points apiece.

'Disgraceful Fraud'

Brundage Blasts College Sports

HAYWARD, Calif (AP) — Avery Brundage, president of the International Olympic Committee, today blasted the "disgraceful fraud" of college athletics and proposed a wide range of reforms.

The 78-year-old Brundage, in a speech prepared for delivery at dedication of California State College's new physical education building, particularly rapped college football.

However, Brundage also noted that "in the Olympic Games we have almost reached the conclusion that sports with a vast commercialized development . . . cannot be kept amateur at an international or even at a national level under modern conditions, and must be dropped."

Presumably the reference was to such team sports as hockey, basketball and soccer, and boating—all on the Olympic program.

"They have become a business and let us admit it," said Brundage. "Perhaps the colleges will also reach this conclusion. There are plenty, or even better, games that have not yet become commercialized to take their place—lacrosse, field handball, rugby, volleyball, land hockey, and so forth."

As for football, Brundage deplored the "perhora of bowl games" and suggested barring coaches from the stadium on the day of a game.

"How players can't even think for themselves," said Brundage, "it is a chess game between the coaches—the players are robots."

He also proposed that every school and college, beginning at the kindergarten level, should have compulsory physical education, including "at the proper time," competitive sport for everyone.

Brundage suggested a full sports program should include "classes in amateurism as a philosophy of life," and that emphasis should be on intramural sport and on games like handball, squash, golf and tennis."

Barney Ross Grateful

Champions Honor Champion!

The words were almost inaudible, but the crowds at Sunnyside Garden applauded the words of Barney Ross Wednesday night at the fight benefit for the former world lightweight and welterweight champion at a small club in Queens.

Ross, who is being treated for cancer as an outpatient at the Chicago Veterans' Research Center, spoke over a telephone hook-up from his Chicago apartment.

The benefit, attended by many celebrities, realized $18,000 to help defray Ross' hospital expenses. Most of it came from the sale of 100 tickets at $100 each. The money was presented by Father Frederic P. Gehring, a naval chaplain on Guadalcanal where Ross fought as a marine during the Second World War.

Former world champions present included heavyweights Floyd Patterson and James Braddock and middleweights Mickey Walker and Rocky Graziano.

Emile Griffith, current middleweight king, and Carlos Ortiz, present lightweight champ, also were on hand. Representing other sports were jockey Braulio Baeza and catcher Elston Howard of the New York Yankees.

Willie Pep and Sandy Saddler, former world featherweight champions, staged a two-round exhibition.

Madrid Whips Germans

Defending champion Real Madrid Wednesday night defeated Munich 1860, West German soccer champions, 5-1 and advanced to the quarter-finals of the European Cup of League-Winners.

The game, at Madrid, was the second of two and victory gave Real Madrid a 3-2 aggregate score. Munich won the first game 1-0 Nov. 17.

Slavia of Sofia, Bulgaria, also qualified for the quarter-finals by defeating Racing of Strasbourg, France, 2-0 at Sofia. In the first game Strasbourg won 1-0, thus the Bulgarian team had an aggregate of 2-1.

Chemie Leipzig of East Germany defeated Standard FC of Liege Belgium 2-1 in the first leg of their contest at Berlin. The second leg will be played at Liege Dec. 14.

In Europe Cup play Glasgow Celtic defeated Nantes, France, 3-1 before 20,000 Nantes fans. It was the first game of a home-and-home encounter for a place in the quarter-finals.

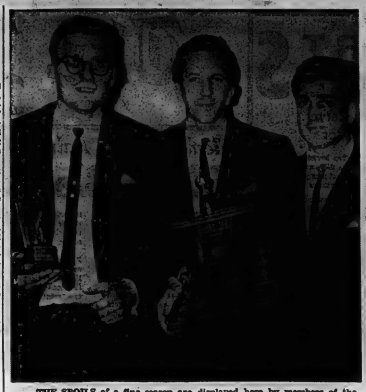
DRUGS POISON CHILDREN



TORONTO (CP)—A surprisingly high number of children are accidentally poisoned with drugs prescribed by doctors for other members of the family, says Dr. C. A. Morrell, adviser to the Food and Drug Directorate on laws to control hazardous substances in household chemicals. Dr. Morrell writes in the current issue of The Canadian Consumer that 250 children under the age of four look barbiturates and 486 swallowed tranquillizers during 1964.

Say Lions May Trade Fleming

VANCOUVER (CP)—The Sun says British Columbia Lions of the Canadian Football League may be negotiating a trade for quarterback Ron Vander Kelen of the Minnesota Vikings.

Vancouver's afternoon newspaper said Wednesday the Lions are interested in a deal which would send halfback Willie Fleming to the National Football League team in return for halfback Jim Young and Vander Kelen, two of Wisconsin's losing effort in the 1963 Rose Bowl game.

The newspaper said the Lions first hoped to trade defensive end Dick Fouts and defensive back Bill Symons to Toronto Argonauts for the rights to Young, a Canadian who played college football at Queen's University, Kingston, Ont.

Blames Russia, Poland

HONOLULU (AP)—The president of the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States said Thursday his organization is in bad financial shape because of the last - minute cancellations last summer of international sports events by Russia and Poland.

Clifford H. Buck of Denver, Colo., said the AAU should procure no further exchanges of sports events between the two Communist countries and the U.S. until reparation has been made.

He spoke at the AAU convention.

According to recent reports from Budapest, Russia and Poland agreed to pay compensation as soon as they received a full account of the losses sustained. The pullouts from the track meets were protests against U.S. involvement in the Viet Nam war.

Buck estimated losses at $200,000, and said the AAU is in "dire financial circumstances" because of them.

Knowles Trade Recalls 'Big Deal'

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Relief pitcher Darold Knowles, who unwittingly helped trigger the trade of the year the last time he changed uniforms, may be at it again.

Knowles was traded for the second time within a year Wednesday night, going from Philadelphia Phillies to Washington Senators for center fielder Don Lock, and strangely enough that set the Baltimore Orioles looking for an experienced starting pitcher.

As soon as personnel director Harry Dalton of the Orioles heard about the trade, he tried to reach officials of both the Phillies and the Senators.

He knew what he was after —pitching help in the form of Philadelphia's Jim Bunning or Washington's Pete Richert — and he intended to pursue it today.

"We have a good right-handed hitter in Sam Bowens who is available. Maybe Washington or Philadelphia has a pitcher available. We want to find out."

The Orioles were in a similar situation last December when they were seeking an accomplished outfielder. They shipped Knowles to the Phillies with Jackie Brandt for relief pitcher Jack Baldschun.

Three days later, Baldschun was on his way to Cincinnati Reds with Milt Pappas and Dick Simpson, and Frank Robinson was on his way to the batting crown with Baltimore.

"Knowles was the start of a three-club chain of events that brought Robinson to us," Dalton recalled.

"You can't make a trade that will turn out more successful than that one," he said.

Getting Robinson solidified the Orioles' punch and rocketed them to the American League pennant and the world championship.

"Our need right now is a starting pitcher with major league experience," Dalton explained. "We have a lot of kids —such as Tom Phoebus—but we'd like the protection of an experienced major leaguer."

Meanwhile, a one-time Orioles pitcher, Chuck Estrada, found his way into the New York Mets' chain when he was purchased by their Williamsport farm club of the Eastern League.

While the Knowles deal and the purchase of Estrada were the only transactions Wednesday the New York Yankees continued to pursue shortstop Maury Wills from the Los Angeles Dodgers and were reported offering one of two pitchers — southpaw Al Downing or right-hander Jim Bouton.

The Reds and the Minnesota Twins also were reported talking about pitching. The Reds supposedly offered pitchers Baldschun and Jim O'Toole for right-hander Jim Grant, but were turned down.

In another development, the player representatives talked with club owners about raising the minimum major league salary level about the $7,000 mark. The players are reported to want to hit the $10,000 level.

Canadian Favorite Beaten

NEW YORK (CP)—Damascus closed with a rush to win Wednesday's 53rd running of the Remsen Stakes, a $25,000-added, one-mile test for two-year-olds.

The Canadian two-year-old champion, Cool Reception, got just that. The colt ran into heavy traffic in the home stretch and finished fifth.

Damascus, a son of Sword Dancer making only his fourth start, carried the Belair Stud's colors across the finish line 1½ lengths in front of Herbert Allen's Native Guile. Another half-length back was Eibel D. Jacobs' Reflected Glory. Hornbeam was fourth.

The owners had planned to enter Cool Reception in next year's Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont, the leading events for three-year-olds, if he made good in the Remsen.

For his third straight victory and his first stakes success, Damascus earned $19,625. As the solid favorite, Damascus paid $4.60, $3.40 and $3. Native Guile returned $5.80 and $4.80 and Reflected Glory was $5 to show.

Willie Shoemaker rode the winner.

Minor Hockey

A couple of one-goal decisions in the midget division and a pair of shutouts in the novice section featured EMHL action at Memorial Arena last night.

Rangers edged the Leafs 4-3 and Elk's Rovers topped the Canadiens 3-2 in midget.

Wings blanked the Bruins 2-0 and Leafs whipped the Police Rangers 6-0 in the novice games.

Bill Thompson triggered three Ranger markers but it took a goal by B. Arnott to get them past the Leafs. Muldoon and Mc-D. Clark had assists. G. Parker, J. Caughley and M. Scarlett had the losers' goals, with B. Coughlin and D. Bland gaining assists.

Bank's second goal of the game proved to be the Hawks' winning tally. Mallory scored the other one. Watson and Gilbooly drew assists. Rosatte and Revill were Canadiens' marksmen and Thompson had a helper.

Goalies gaining shutouts in novice were the Wings' Brad Babcock and the Leafs' Greg Maloney.

Eric Powell starred for the Leafs with a four-goal outburst, including three in succession. Mark Boyd and Mike MacDonald had the others. Gerald Cunningham was credited with three assists, Mike Watson, Paul Meagher and Marlin Maloney one each.

SUCCESSOR IS CHAMP

NEW YORK (AP) — Successor, never out of the money in nine starts, was picks Wednesday as the Thoroughbred Racing Association's two-year-old colt champion. Bold Lad, a full brother, won the same title in 1963 and Bold Ruler, its sire, was best of the juvenile colts in 1957. Successor, racing for Mrs. H. C. Phipps's Wheatley Stable and trained by Eddie Neloy, compiled a record of four wins, three seconds and two thirds in earning $641,404.

NFL Realigned

New Set-Up Has Four 4-Club Divisions

NEW YORK (AP)—The National Football League owners realigned the league Wednesday when they closed the new New Orleans franchise in the Eastern Conference and Atlanta Falcons in the West.

Each eight - club conference was split into two four-club divisions.

The owners came up with a grouping of Cleveland Browns, Pittsburgh Steelers, New York Giants and St. Louis Cardinals in the Federal Division of the East. The Capitol Division of the East will include Dallas Cowboys, Philadelphia Eagles, Washington Redskins and New Orleans.

In 1968 New York will shift to the Capitol and New Orleans to the Federal in a compromise move designed to give all eight of the eastern teams a chance to play the Giants home and home in one of the two years.

Green Bay Packers will be joined by Chicago Bears, Minnesota Vikings and Detroit Lions in the Central Division of the Western Conference. San Francisco 49ers, Los Angeles Rams, Baltimore Colts and Atlanta will comprise the Coastal Division of the West.

No decision has been made on the 1969 alignment. The NFL and American Football League are due to merge into one league in 1970.

While the NFL owners worked on their problems, the AFL owners met separately and discussed the merger terms that were agreed upon last June.

It is expected that the joint committee recommendations on the date, site and financial arrangements for the Super Bowl game will be made today.

Riders Retain Gaines

OTTAWA (CP) — Defensive halfback Gene Gaines, a holdout throughout the 1966 season, has signed a three-year contract, Ottawa Rough Riders of the Eastern Football Conference announced Wednesday night.

Terms of the contract were not announced but it covers the 29-year-old UCLA product for the 1967 and 1968 seasons, as well as the past year.

Says Board Is Not Responsible

HAMILTON (CP) — Mayor Victor Copps of Hamilton said Wednesday that the Ontario Municipal Board is not to name the delay in construction of the Football Hall of Fame in Hamilton.

"It anybody is to blame for the delay, it's us," said Mr. Copps. "Somehow or other a letter I wrote to Ted Workman, president of the Canadian Football League, has been misinterpreted and I regret the fact that the blame has been attached to the OMB."

Mr. Copps said he will write J. A. Kennedy, chairman of the OMB, to "put things in their proper light."

He said that Hamilton city council wanted to have the Hall of Fame on its proposed 43-acre urban renewal site, which has been described as a $40,000,000 development with a hotel, two department stores and open plazas.

Wins Not Goals Count!

If the Belleville Mo-Hawks had to depend on goals scored or shots-on-goal for points, they would likely be in last place in the ten-team OHA Senior "A" hockey loop.

The Mo-Hawks, who open a tough weekend on the road in Collingwood tomorrow (Friday) night, have scored the fewest goals (37) and have been outshot in their dozen games 436-314.

But the club is in sixth place, just one point behind Kingston with a six-and-six won-and-lost record, according to statistics compiled here.

When the Mo-Hawks outshot Guelph 34-28 Tuesday it marked only the second time this season the club has outshot the opposition. The other occasion was against Oakville, also at home, 32-21.

The records prove how well goalie Ludger Doucet has been playing for us," said coach Floyd Crawford, "and also points out what I have been telling the boys. We have to shoot more on the net".

Doucet's record of 5.08 goals-against average would be much improved if 134 and 11-2 games in Orillia and Galt could be removed. He has allowed 61 goals in 12 games but only 37 in 10 for a 3.7 average."

And while the Mo-Hawks shots and goals marks are low, figures show that it takes them 8.3 shots to score a goal while the opposition has been clicking with every 7.3 shots.

Meanwhile, Crawford is eyeing his injury list with high hopes. Bob McAlpine scored a goal Tuesday, despite a gimpy knee, and is expected to play Friday and in Barrie Sunday afternoon. The club doctor says that right-winger Lou Smrke should stay off for another two weeks with his pulled shoulder muscles but Lou thinks differently. "He hopes to play this weekend if things go well but I don't know," says Crawford.

After the Friday and Sunday games away, the Mo-Hawks come home against Kingston on Tuesday and against Orillia next Friday.

Call Off Rich Stakes

MANILA (AP) — President Ferdinand Marcos has called off the traditional $250,000 Christmas sweepstakes because 15 of the 21 horses entered in the race are thought to have been smuggled into the Philippines from Australia and New Zealand.

Marcos cancelled the meeting, the biggest event of the Philippine racing calendar, after the Horse Breeders' Association of the Philippines complained that the alleged smuggled horses were likely to gallop off with all the prize money.

Under Philippine law, only horses bred in the Philippines are allowed to race on local tracks.

Rifles Place 5 All-Stars

The all-star team was selected by the league coaches, who were barred from voting for their own players.

Bob Brodhead of Philadelphia Bulldogs and Williams were repeaters from the 1965 team. Brodhead set a league record with 29 touchdown passes and gains of 3,199 yards although he missed two games because of injuries. Williams led the league in rushing with 1,250 yards, topping his own record of 1965 by 175 yards.

Philadelphia, which plays Orlando Panthers for the league title Sunday, was the only other team with more than one all-star. Philadelphia also placed tight end Dave Washington.

Bill Barber of Richmond Rebels was the split end, Bob Reed of Brooklyn Dodgers the flanker and Wallace Dickey of Orlando and Clyde Williams of Charleston Rockets the tackles.

Judy Jeered for Defence of Sunday Skit

OTTAWA (CP) — State-Secretary LaMarsh was almost drowned out by shouts and groans Wednesday as she attempted to defend CBC program freedom in the face of all-party disapproval of a controversial program last Sunday night.

Davie Fulton (PC—Kamloops) asked how long Parliament would have to put up with the "complete editorial freedom" of the CBC.

He referred to the CBC program called Sunday and its showing of a film clip in which lesbianism and homosexuality were central themes. This "kind of garbage" could not be tolerated.

Miss LaMarsh asks she could not agree with the member's language. Such programs involved a "personal question" on whether they were in good or bad taste.

She said a number of letters she had received on the latest Sunday program were being sent to the CBC. Short of requiring the resignations of CBC officials, the only immediate changes that could be brought in programming would be ceased by the public and parliamentary reaction to various shows.

Mr. Fulton asked" whether CBC management shouldn't have control "over this sort of thing?"

Miss LaMarsh said the corporation management "does have control over it—some control."

Parliament itself had a "very strong moral control" over programming. However, she could not agree that individual members should have a say in programming.

She noted similar criticism to the Sunday program til the Senate and along with Commons' expressions of opinion felt the CBC would be made aware of reaction to such programs.

Miss LaMarsh said she planned no special inquiry by the broadcasting committee but CBC President Alphonse Ouimet was scheduled to appear before the committee Thursday.

Realism Is Featured by Toys Boosting Sales 12 Per Cent

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The toymakers are ushering in the season of peace with with a child's baseball bat that shoots you between the eyes instead of knocking out home runs, a cane that fires projectiles and a smoker's pipe that fires a bullet when pressed against the teeth.

There are also retractable cannon concealed in miniature cars, bombs hidden in binoculars and a version of the American Ma1 cadence that looks like the real thing.

The same realism has produced a remotely - controlled truck that dumps and hauls earth, a doll that changes expression without being touched (it's done by magnets) and a kitchen oven that cooks and bakes with the heat of two 100-watt bulbs.

Realism, the manufacturers say, will this year lead toy sales to $215,000,000, up 12 per cent from 1963 despite a 3-per-cent decline in the birth rate.

Walter M. Griffith of Toronto, secretary-treasurer of Canadian Playthings Manufactures Inc., says the sales volume breakdown to $10.80 per capita.

Toys of violence are expected to make the cash registers ring but tradition continues to play its role and new influences are at work among the adults who control the purse strings.

In traditional toys, dolls and stuffed animals remain popular, although dolls are becoming more sophisticated than ever. Along with the doll that changes expression from a wet-pants baby to a good-girl grin is one that cries when the lights are turned on, stops when they go off.

Interest also remains constant in games and trains and in so-called action toys such as road-racing kits and cars that junior can sit in.

Some parents are attracted to educational toys, from the simple letter cards to the timed word game that has five billion possible letter combinations.

And Canada's growing cosmopolitan population is stimulating interest in toys of foreign lands. The Czech manufacturer of the Czech mechanical toy are being joined by a growing list of new importers—Italian about 25 per cent of the Canadian market.

Still another influence this year is the approach of Centennial Year. Many manufacturers have been licensed to use the Centennial symbol on toys with the proviso that they be well-designed and well-constructed.

The result is some interesting stuffed animals such as seals, beavers, buffalo, polar bears and wolves—all accurately costumed dolls, including several in traditional Canadian clothing.

Actor Forms Company To Look After Image

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—A fellow has to look after himself in the movie business, and that's why Jack Lemmon has formed his own company, Jalem Productions.

During the first dozen years of his film career, the Harvard-educated actor played his destiny in the hands of other producers. The results were often good—Oscar (supporting actor, Mister Roberts, 1955) and four nominations as star Some Like It Hot, "The Apartment," Days of Wine and Roses, Irma la Douce).

But in between those milestones were other films which did little to enhance the Lemmon image, though they were financially successful. He found himself cast as a satyr (Under the Yum, Yum Tree as the man who sacrifices his principles to go along with the system (Good Neighbor Sam).

Now Jalem has joined with producer Martin Manulis for the film version of Murray Shisgal's far-out comedy play, Luv in which Lemmon plays one of life's losers, a would-be suicide from a New York bridge.

"I'm taking a big chance on this role," Lemmon said. "The guy goes against all comedy principles! He feels sorry for himself."

"That's a dangerous thing to do with an audience; people immediately lose sympathy with a character who feels sorry for himself. The greatness of Chaplin was that he always played the underdog but he never was beaten.

"Even when he was starving, he remained indomitable. Instead of becoming defeated, he figured out how he could make a meal out of his shoe.

"Now Marry Berlin (his character in Luv) is nothing like that. He keeps moaning about how badly life has treated him, how he suffers from attacks of tiredness and blindness, even a temporary paralysis. He'll be describing it and suddenly go off. Lemmon summed up the entire bad condition, then came out of it.

Marilyn Monroe Pictured As Trying to Beat Odds

TV-Radio Column

"Behind the grotesque sexpoddess of the Hollywood glamor factory, the public recognized a more human figure—the gaunt loser trying to beat the odds. But the real Marilyn forever remained shadowy and elusive, even to Marilyn. . . ."

But for the next hour film clips, newsreel shots, still photographs, snapshots and personal recollections — even from her first husband—traced Marilyn's real, unhappy life from her cruel childhood to the desperate final days in 1962 when she lost her battle against mental illness.

The program was guilty of the very thing that Huston criticized. We saw a newsreel shot of a jostling press conference at which the star's lawyer announced the end of her marriage to Joe Dimaggio as Miss Monroe, pale and tearful, stood by.

"It," said Huston, referring to communications media, "will invade the last chamber of privacy, treat anguish as a charade, demand a quote from the deathbed."

At the end of the program there were pictures of Miss Monroe's elderly mother walking behind the fence of the sanatorium where she recently died. We saw a photographer smile as he held up the negative—more discreet for TV than the print—of that famous nude calendar picture. We heard Huston disclose that during filming of "the Misfits, "she took so many sleeping pills to rest that in the morning she had to take stimulants to wake her up—and this ravaged the girl."

Miss Monroe's fame, glamor and dramatic death probably will bolster the ratings of ABC's Stage 67 series, but the hour seemed at best a superficial rehash of a tragedy.

NBC's Bob Hope Theatre, television's other anthology series, deserves more attention than it gets. Like all such series, the quality has its up and downs, but Wednesday night's The Fatal Mistake was definitely one of the ups.

It was a murder tale—all very British—told in the good old Alfred Hitchcock four-style. The story centred on a boyish and evil blackmailer, played with relish by Broadway actor Donald Madden, who pushed one of his victims a little too far.

The victim, a man with a loving family, a dark secret and a convenient collection of revolvers, finally dispatched his tormenter with the help of a deadly adder. But there was a surprise ending, since on television, crime "never is allowed to pay.

Recommended tonight: The Jack Benny Show, NBC, 8:30 p.m. EST, special with Phyllis Diller and the Smothers Brothers.

Fantasticks Tops My Fair Lady

Which simply attests again that, around show business, you never can tell. For from this rickety start grew off - Broadway's most remarkable record-breaker and money - maker, The Fantasticks.

With more than 2,718 performances, it now has become the longest-running musical in New York theatrical annals, without sign of subsiding.

The previous longevity champ was My Fair Lady, which played in the big league, Broadway. But as a jackpot venture, the little show completely overspecialty, having so far recorded backers with $12.50 for every dollar invested. The MFL payoff ratio was 16 to 1.

The success of The Fantasticks, which Jones wrote with a songwriting chum from the University of Texas, Harvey Schmidt, demonstrates the abiding box office appeal of old-fashioned sentiment in a jet-age world.

An unabashedly warm and simple boy-girl fable, the show since that premiere May 9, 1960, has travelled, in multiple reproductions, to 400 American cities and been performed in 35 countries.

Sale of the original cast album tops the 100,000 mark, and versions of the most notable of its 13 tunes, Try to Remember, have been recorded.

All of which means that more than $1,500,000 has been grossed from the original investment of $18,500. Getting the backing was an ordeal that almost ended in defeat for producer Lore (short for Lorenzo) Noto.

"Hundreds and hundreds of people," the stocky Noto notes, "passed up bids to invest. Eventually he rounded up 57 backers, including his mother - in - law, into the pot went also Noto's lifetime savings of $3,500. His share of the proceeds thus far is about $200,000.

The show has also hooked in a converted speakeasy, the 141-seat Sullivan Street Playhouse, on one of Greenwich Village's tangle of obscure lanes. Sometimes 600 spectators have ye found the place.

"I'm not sure who our first customers were," says Jones. "The later notices were all very good, and that must have helped. But after a while, apart from the theatre 'discovered' the show and started little cam-paigns to get their friends to come."

During the run, 68 performers have appeared in the musical's eight roles, including Jones (who took part in the premiere) and Noto, who occasionally becomes an emergency replacement.

Parent-teacher Group Formed at Sacred Heart

MARMORA — Inaugural meeting of the newly - formed Parent - Teacher Association of Sacred Heart School, Marmora, on Thursday evening was well attended.

Chairman of the nominating committee, Monsignor F. J. Spence has installed officers for the coming year. They are: president, Ray Black; vice - president, Mrs. Bernard Doyle; secretary, Mrs. Stafford Shannon; treasurer, Mrs. Michael Maloney; Parent - counsellors — Mrs. Bill Meehan Jr., Mr. Leonard Deroche, Mr. Joe Maloney; teacher representatives Mrs. E. P. McNamara, Mrs. Joe Murray, Miss Anne Collins. Spiritual Director will be Monsignor Spence.

The constitution, read by the principal, Mrs. McNamara, was adopted.

Motions were passed that membership fees would be $1 per person and $1.50 per couple, and that monthly meetings would be held the third Monday of each month with the annual meeting in May and installation of new officers in June. The membership committee will consist of Mrs. Michael Maloney, Mrs. Clarence Shannon and Mrs. Bill Jones.

Mr. Wilfred Williamson of Tranton, diocesan president of the C.P.T.A., welcomed the Marmora Association as the 32nd unit of the Kingston Diocesan Council, expressing his thanks to the organizers of this unit.

"In order to be successful," he said, "members of the executive should work to find out everything about P.T.A., start with the committees, so that each member of the executive will understand why his office is important".

He outlined regular meetings, formation of a program committee, a membership committee, publicity committee, resolution committee to express the feelings of the membership and the forming of study groups.

"You have taken on a worthy job, one which will make a contribution to your parish and your community" he said.

Mr. Harold Morris of Belleville, treasurer, and past president of the federation CPTA, outlined the aims from the federation in Ontario who are grateful to parents for forming a unit in Marmora. He explained that the CPTA serves as an excellent vehicle in breaking down barriers between parents and teachers, and gets parents, teachers together in studying both sides of a child's personality.

Mrs. McNamara gave a presentation of some of the changes in the school curriculum this year, explaining to parents the new testing program instigated by the inspector to ascertain the ability of a child in learning school subjects, the new religious instruction combining the Baltimore Catechism and the Life With God series, and the reorganizing of the program from the Public Health Unit recently formed in Hastings County.

Guest speakers were thanked by Monsignor Spence who extended a hearty welcome that the executive would provide excellent programs for the meetings during the year, and encouraged the membership to attend and participate as much as possible. In this way the children would benefit most since through the co-operation of all, a good school family life was loved and supported by all involved in the educational process, and this would enable them to develop best in accordance with his ability.

Plans Made for Future Development of Park

DESERONTO — Even though little can be done to further the development of Centennial Park during the winter months, the committee continues to meet regularly to exchange ideas, receive reports and make plans.

There was considerable discussion concerning the layout of the park, especially the eastern end of the trailer and tent grounds. Also, the waterfront development was discussed, especially the proposed dock and boat ramp. William Higgins is responsible for this part of the development, and learned from meeting that plans would be completed in time to begin the actual work by the time the ground is frozen enough to go ahead. He also stated that at the next meeting he would present the completed tentative plan for the whole park, such as the location of wash rooms and of change houses near the bathing area.

Mr. Lloyd outlined a plan proposing the seeding of the remainder of the area in the spring. This plan will be further considered, and a decision will be made at a meeting early next year.

WILL RE-OPEN STORE

Mrs. Griffiths, chairman of the women's committee which has operated the White Elephant Store, reported at the meeting that the women are willing to reopen the store in the spring if the vacant store belonging to the town is then available. She was assured that it would be, and that it was available for the use of the churches for such things as sales at any time, since each church has representatives on the committee.

Agreement was reached regarding the bronze plaque which must be in place before the official opening of all Centennial projects. The inscription used will be the one selected by the women's committee, which had been delegated to make the decision. The plaque commemorates all the bodies responsible for bringing the project into being.

Doctor Orders Postmortem

NAPANEE—A Water Street home has again come into public notice, with the death of an inhabitant in the Lennox and Addington County General Hospital within two hours after she was removed from it by ambulance. About two months ago a woman was found dead in the same house by officers of the Napanee Police Department.

Because of the suddenness of the death so soon after admission to hospital, Dr. Brent Bergstrom ordered a postmortem, but the findings have not yet been made public. Dr. Bergstrom is now in Toronto.

Dr. R. A. McLellan, medical health officer, ordered the house placarded, and this order was carried out Wednesday. The policy is to placard such undesirable dwellings when they become vacant Dr. McLellan stated. The house is a double one, with a family of three children and their parents occupying the other half.

Donald Reid, chairman of the parks and community services committee several months ago was empowered by council to have a housing bylaw draughted and placed in council. He stated Wednesday that the draught was placed by his committee in the hands of the town solicitor and that the proposed by-law will be in the hands of the committee within a week or ten days. If it is passed by the council, it must then receive the approval of the Department of Municipal Affairs. Until such a bylaw becomes official the council is powerless to take steps to destroy this or other undesirable structures.

The basic question is not fit for a home for animals, let alone human beings, is the opinion of Napanee and district citizens who have visited it. The roof leaks, there is little or no plaster on the walls, windows are without glass and are covered with boards and plastic, and it lacks hydro, water, and sewage disposal.

The owner pays her taxes on this and other undesirable property in the town, and people who occupy the Water St. house just move in and pay-no rent.

OPP Urge Drivers to Adjust Habits

NAPANEE — "Drive defensively, and adjust driving habits to suit road and weather conditions." is the warning given by the Napanee detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police.

This urging is prompted by a comparison of the accidents reported in the first 26 days of November, and the number registered in that year over that period, all that year, and 20 in 1965. This has been the general trend throughout the year, the police report and they feel the motoring public must be made aware of the increased danger. Drivers must adjust their driving habits to the bad weather and the bad roads ahead.

Three days a week safety officer Constable J. E. Elliott takes his message to schools of the area, teaching school bus and traffic safety. Last week he visited Selby, the Strath Road and the Adolphustown public schools, teaching a total of 562 children.

Meeting House Will Be Turned Over to Museum

PICTON (Staff) — The Wellington Community Museum is now a certainty with the final action under way to pass the Meeting House at the Society of Friends over to the Corporation of the Village of Wellington. Recently a group of interested citizens met with representatives of the Department of Travel and Publicity.

Now in the early planning stages there remain to be worked out the various details such as display themes, a name, renovations curators, etc. The village council must also appoint a board to direct the operation of the museum. Until this is done the acting chairman of the Museum Committee is Reeve Robert Boyce and the acting secretary is Mrs. Allan Burnett.

Tentative plans are to have the museum open in a modest way, in the spring of 1967. Another meeting of the committee is planned for January.

Athol Having Lively Campaign

PICTON (Staff) — The number of elections being held in Prince Edward County this year is indicative of the increased public interest in all elective offices. In spite of the number of candidates who have come forward though, attendance at nomination meetings throughout the county has remained extremely light with only a token representation from these eligible to vote.

One of the most active election campaigns is expected in Athol Township. Much of the interest stems from that township's singular stand against the continually increasing power of county administration. The township is currently opposing the amalgamation of Prince Edward Health Units and county planning.

All but three of the 10 municipalities in Prince Edward County will have an election this year. Officers have been acclaimed in the villages of Bloomfield and Wellington. Still in doubt is South Marysburgh Township where, following nominations there remains a vacancy on Township Council. Township Clerk Gerard Kavanagh said another nomination meeting will have to be held the date being set for Friday, December 2. If more than one person contests the remaining vacancy there will be an election for one council seat.

Due to Shannonville United Church anniversary church school and church service at Melrose were withdrawn on Sunday morning.

PULP PLANT CRIPPLED

British Columbia Forest Products Ltd. Wednesday ordered partial closure of its pulp production plant at Crofton, a Vancouver Island community pending settlement of the West Coast longshoremen's dispute. The plant was believed to be the first industrial casualty in the 13-day-old battle between the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union and the Maritime Employers' Association. Shipping was at a standstill along the coast Wednesday.

RECKON AIRLINE LOSS

An Air Canada spokesman said in Montreal Wednesday the airline returned to 100-per-cent operation of its schedules at noon, except for possible weather problems, following a return to work Sunday of 3,300 mechanics. They had been on strike for 12 days over a new labor contract. The membership accepted settlement proposals in a vote Saturday. During the strike the full cost of the shutdown was estimated to be a net $300,000 a day.

CNR NET INCOME DOWN

Canadian National Railways announced Wednesday operating revenue of $74,311,000 for October compared with expenses, taxes and rents of $73,635,000—for a net income of $636,000. In October, 1965, the operating revenue was $69,506,000 and expenses, taxes and rents were $66,508,000 for a net income of $2,998,000.

TALE OF DOWNTRODDEN is unfolded by Air Cadet Eric Lane, 16, to Sea Cadets Jack Crozier, 14, (left), and Jim Drummond, 15.

Sea Cadets Retain Old Boots

The story of the Downtrodden Trophy added another chapter for two groups of young Bellevilie people last night.

The tale goes something like this:

Just two months later he reported back for another year's training complete with boots, which in turn were practically incompleta of soles and heels. This, without having worn them once on parade.

Their condition fascinated adult officer-organizers of the squadron, who had them brussed and pat them up as the champion trophy for annual sports competition between their group and the sea cadets of RCSCC Quinte.

There was one distinction. The trophy, instead of being presented the winner, goes to the loser.

Last year the sea cadets had the honor of bearing away the award in defeat.

Last night they returned hearing it to Belleville Armories for the annual return engagement.

After more than an hour of challenges in basketball, volleyball and rifle-shooting the award once more was presented to the sea cadets.

However, all took the occasion in good heart and the sea cadets underlined the sportsmanship of the occasion with a ship-ahoy parade square turnout to watch the Downtrodden Trophy being presented for another year.

Top Businessmen Optimistic

TORONTO (CP) — Some top businessmen peered at the economic outlook for 1967 Wednesday and found only a few smudges on their rose-colored glasses.

In papers prepared for a forum at the University of Toronto's business school, most indicated they expect some slowdown from the rapid growth of recent years with a continuation of many of this year's troubles.

But they also predicted an ever-all rise of about seven per cent in Canada's gross national product—the total value of all goods and services produced in Canada.

That would raise it to a record $81,500,000,000. It would, however, be below the increase achieved this year, now expected to be 10 or 10¼ per cent.

Difficulties many of the executives expect to continue through 1967—and to lead to the slowdown — include inflationary pressures, a squeeze on corporate profits because of rising material and labor costs, shortages of skilled workers in some industries, international balance of payments and labor-management relations.

They also forecast a continuing shortage of capital, with some easing likely as the government relaxes restraints to keep the slowdown from becoming a downturn.

Economist J. W. Popkin of the Sun Life Assurance Co. of Montreal forecast a 7½-per-cent gain in the GNP, but 3½ per cent would come from rising prices.

He does not reject the possibility that the significant slowing in economic activity earlier this year means a peak has been reached in the business cycle, but added he prefers to interpret it as a sign that resources of labor, industry and capital were stretched to their limit at that time.

John S. Dewar, president of Union Carbide Canada Ltd., suggested price increases will account for three per cent of his forecast of a 6.3-per-cent gain in the GNP.

"Even this rather modest increase will depend on some easing of current monetary and fiscal restraints and, of course, is premised on no major political or financial upheavals on the international scene."

Armand Trottier of Quebec City, president of the Canadian Construction Association, forecast that construction spending will rise in 1967 to a record $12,000,000,000 from an estimated $11,200,000,000 this year.

Demand continues strong in all categories and the dip in housing starts this year resulted from a shortage of mortgages rather than from a lack of customers, he said.

H. M. Griffith, president of the Steel Co. of Canada Ltd. at Hamilton, said he expects steel consumption in Canada next year to be about 11,200,000 tons, slightly under the estimated 11,600,000 tons in 1966.

Mr. Griffiths repeated earlier statements that Stelco is continuing to review its pricing policy, despite rolling back a proposed increase in September after federal government intervention.

"If demands remain at a high level for steel mill products and profits continue to drop due to the cost-price squeeze, the only alternative the industry will have will be to increase prices."

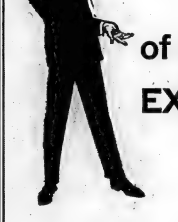
A. D. Hamilton, president of B.C. Forest Products Ltd. of Vancouver, said the short-term prospects for the pulp and paper industry are continued operation at near capacity in all sectors except possibly market pulp.

"Price levels will probably be maintained. However, profit margins will be under pressure and are not likely to be as good as in the last several years."

R. H. Waddington, senior vice-president of International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd., said the mining industry can look forward to a high level of activity in 1967.

J. F. Redmond, executive vice-president of Shell Canada Ltd., said petroleum production in 1967 should rise five per cent over this year. That would compare with an eight-per-cent increase recorded this year, raising production to more than 1,000,000 barrels a day for the first time.

Plastic Buoys To Mark Expo Channel



OTTAWA (CP)—Special plastic buoys, supplied by an Ottawa firm, will mark the channel to guide pleasure boats through the St. Lawrence River and intricate Montreal harbor to the Expo 67 site on St. Helen's Island next year.

The marine division of Computing Devices of Canada Ltd. will provide the department of transport with 300 of the conys to mark the small boat channel.

At $1,500 each, the new channel markers will cost the government $450,000.

A Community College Benefits Would Be Cumulative

Several Built-in Bonuses Come With College

By DONALD M. SOUTTER

A College of Applied Arts and Technology in the Quinte district would be more than just another "industry" or a school close at hand for area students.

Any institution of higher learning brings along with it some built-in bonuses.

At the moment, the board of governors of the new college is primarily concerned with locating a temporary site for 700 students for next September.

But a look at what could happen once the permanent site is chosen makes it almost a requisite that it be located in the area.

In the past year, Ryerson Polytechnical Institute in Toronto announced a $30,000,000 expansion program over five years. And this was for educational facilities only and did not include any student residences.

Queen's University in Kingston has seen its building permits range as high as 25 per cent of the total community building for the year.

The university estimates that an average of 180 men a year have been employed on new construction over the past few years and will be so employed for the next few as well.

Another bonus is that of extra-curricular use of the educational facilities.

In 1964 Queen's attracted 2,800 persons to conferences, seminars and special courses. In 1967 this figure will skyrocket to more than 6,000 people at conferences from May until Sept. 1.

With emphasis today on education, thousands of persons across the country are willing to go back to school for after-work retraining. Ryerson's night school enrolment exceeds, by a comfortable margin, its day student enrolment.

There are other benefits to a community which develop when a new industry locates in the area.

The Canadian National Railways some years ago prepared a brief which since has been quoted across Canada and the United States.

On the basis of 100 additional wage earners in the community, the brief claimed this meant: 321 more households, 427 more people, 85 more school children, 187 more motor vehicle registrations, 117 more workers employed other than in the industry involved, 393 more telephones, three more retail establishments and $630,000 more retail sales per year.

The presence of academic staff in a community also has sociological and cultural benefits. Area boards of education, councils, theatre groups, library boards, charities, community organizations and service clubs are the natural habitat for teachers and other staff members who have a high degree of community responsibility.

Last-ditch Talks Started

Film on Nazis Defended

OTTAWA (CP) — A National Film Board production based on the wartime slaughter of Jews in Nazi concentration camps was defended in the Commons Thursday by State Secretary Lamarsh.

Denying that the 60-minute film called Memorandum was racist, she told Creditiste Raymond Langlois Megantic that it had won four film festival prizes and had been hailed by a Montreal critic as "philosophy on film."

Debate on BC Shipping Called

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons decided unanimously today to set aside all other business for an emergency debate on the West Coast shipping tieup.

Proposal for the emergency debate was made by Howard Johnston (SC — Okanagan-Revelstoke).

Wilson and Smith Will Spend 'Few Days' Aboard Cruiser

GIBRALTAR (CP) — On a British warship steaming through heavy seas in the Strait of Gibraltar, Britain's Prime Minister Harold Wilson and Rhodesia's Ian Smith met today for a last desperate attempt to agree on ending the white Rhodesians' rebellion against eventual Negro rule.

Associates of Wilson reported he was pessimistic about the outcome.

The two leading antagonists in the 13-month-long rebellion went aboard the cruiser Tiger during the night as she lay at anchor in the rain-lashed Bay of Algeciras west of the rock.

This morning the Tiger moved out into the rain-swept strait between Africa and Europe, reported to be bound either toward the Mediterranean island of Malta, 800 miles to the east, or toward Madeira, in the Atlantic 600 miles from Gibraltar.

Wilson and his advisers flew to Gibraltar Thursday night after promising he would never surrender British principles.

Smith arrived after midnight following a flight from Salisbury that took him around the bulge of Africa to avoid passing over black African countries opposed to his white-settler regime.

They arranged full negotiations during the day to see if they could solve differences over the all - white Rhodesian regime's declaration of Independence in November, 1965, and the future of the country's 4,000,000 negroes.

Their talks are likely to last only a few days. Wilson wants to be back in London Sunday, ready to report to Parliament the next day.

If the talks fail, Britain has promised its Commonwealth partners to ask the UN Security Council for compulsory sanctions against Rhodesia.

New RCAF Airlift to Zambia Likely if Sanctions Tightened

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada may mount another airlift to assist Zambia if the United Nations imposes compulsory economic sanctions against Rhodesia, informants said Thursday.

From January to April this year, RCAF transport planes helped to carry oil and gas into Zambia from the Congo.

Prime Minister Pearson has said Canada will join in UN sanctions against white-supremacist Rhodesia. This will represent no change in policy because this country already has a full trade embargo against Rhodesia.

Present sanctions against Rhodesia are voluntary. If they become obligatory on all UN members, the economic squeeze on Rhodesia would presumably become much more severe.

Veteran British diplomat Sir Saville Garner arrived here Thursday night to discuss the exact nature of the proposed sanctions and the terms of the British resolution expected to be placed before the UN Security Council before the end of the month.

Bear Rug Bites Woman

TWEED, Ont. (CP) — It was one of those unbearably funny situations, says Mrs. Henry Spicer, when she was bitten by a bear rug.

Mrs. Spicer was housecleaning for District Forester Norman Patrick when she stepped over a rug on the floor and caught a foot in the open mouth.

U Thant Accepts New Term

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The re - election of U Thant, United Nations secretary - general, for a new five-year term was assured today when the UN Security Council gave its unanimous approval and sent its recommendation to the General Assembly for ratification later in the day.

The 15 - nation council acted in a closed meeting after the 37-year-old Burmese diplomat had bowed to continued pressure and reversed his announced intention to retire.

One factor which influenced Thant's decision to take a second term, diplomats said, was the assurances given by the big powers that he would have full authority to use his initiative in peace-making.

Bancroft Coldest

A new-born winter is cutting its teeth on the Quinte district as an Arctic cold wave moves across much of Canada.

In the northern townships it was colder.

The Department of Lands and Forests radio station at Tweed reported a range of lows from nine above at Tweed, down to three above at Bancroft and Dacre.

Temperatures will continue three to six degrees below normal for the next five days, predicted the Trenton forecaster, although there will be a slight warming trend Sunday.

There will be some light snow.

Winter road crews were out for the first time yesterday as a combination of early snow flurries and later falling temperatures turned pavement icy.

However, drivers took it cautiously. Both municipal and provincial police reported no serious accidents.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: At least another day or two of cold weather is expected before any significant moderation takes place. Meanwhile snowflurries and a few snowsqualls are forecast to continue in parts of southern and central Ontario near the Great Lakes and some periods of light snow in Northern Ontario today and Saturday.

An icy blast Thursday set record-low temperatures in parts of Ontario and brought snowflurries along the St. Lawrence valley. The cold arctic air headed into the Maritimes today.

Meanwhile, the Prairies, which had tasted the cold earlier, showed some signs of recuperating.

Dief Suggests Judy LaMarsh Consider Charges Against CBC

OTTAWA (CP) — The CBC's prime Donna public affairs program took another raking by MPs Thursday for a film that featured in-bed antics by two actors and a frankly-worded sexual quiz.

But that only prompted this statement in the Commons by Opposition Leader Diefenbaker:

"There are too many such mistakes."

Mr. Diefenbaker asked State Secretary Judy LaMarsh whether she would examine the Criminal Code "to ascertain whether it contains regulations which might be used with effect against those who apparently will defy the law."

Miss LaMarsh, who reports to Parliament for the CBC, said if there was a "self-evident breach" of the law any person could bring a charge and a prosecution would be launched.

This Commons exchange came after Mr. Ouimet's morning appearance before the Commons committee on broadcasting, films and assistance to the arts.

Much of that 70-minute session was spent on the CBC's views on the government's proposals for revised broadcasting legislation.

But for about 20 minutes, committee members had a chance to question Mr. Ouimet on management's control over production items in the CBC in general and that film clip in particular.

The film was used on the program called Sunday—the successor to This Hour Has Seven Days which died last spring after a monumental battle between producers and higher management about how the program should be run.

The film showed a man and woman in bed, embracing and petting. After this scene, in which the dialogue made it clear they were not married, each reviewed probing questions on such subjects as lesbianism and homosexuality, response to sexual acts and whether they condoned extra-

Rail Shop Craft Unions Settle; Extend Mediation for Others

OTTAWA (CP) — The wage dispute that caused the national railway strike in August remains largely unsolved and mediation talks have been extended to Dec. 17.

Labor Minister Nicholson told the Commons Thursday that a railway wage offer has been accepted by one group of unions representing 28,000 shop craft workers.

Two other union groups had rejected the company terms as completely unacceptable. Informants said the railways offered a six-per-cent wage hike for 1968 on top of the 18-per-cent increase ordered by Parliament for 1966 and 1967 in the strike-ending act passed in September.

Carl Goldenberg, Montreal lawyer and veteran mediator, was due to file his final report Thursday, but the cabinet extended his mandate to Dec. 17.

Mr. Nicholson expressed the hope that the mediator can complete a second agreement by then, involving the 20,000-member Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen.

The bulk of the 120,000 rail workers now average $2.23 an hour and would get an extra 23½ cents over three years under the railway offer.

The shop craft unions represent machinists, boilermakers, electricians, and other tradesmen who repair and service train equipment.

An informant said the shop unions obtained their key demand for a 12-cent hourly premium for skilled tradesmen. This agreement still has to be ratified by the union rank-and-file.

The act of Parliament that stopped the seven-day rail walkout provides for compulsory arbitration if mediation efforts fail.

Two union groups representing 72,000 railway employees pulled out of the mediation talks earlier this week and are awaiting arbitration. Union leaders charged that the railways would not even meet their "rock-bottom" demands.

The two negotiating groups represent non-operating employees such as clerks, freight handlers, baggagemen and various office workers.

Two Campuses For District College Possible

Discussions on the choice of a possible site for the community college proposed for this area took on a new look yesterday with the question being raised whether there should be two campuses or separate locations.

Last night at a meeting of the college board of governors held at Belleville, a special committee was set up to discuss the matter with the department of education in Toronto.

Heading up the committee will be former Premier Leslie M. Frost with Hastings County Judge J. C. Anderson, and Dr. T. H. B. Symons, head of Trent University mentioned as members.

However, all 12 members of the board of governors have been invited to attend the meeting with education officials in Toronto.

Father H. J. Maloney of Bancroft, interim chairman of the college board of governors for Area No. 3 said this morning that all fundamental problems facing the board were discussed at last night's meeting.

Due to the extent of the territory which Area 3 covers and because of the distance between population centres, the question of separate campuses and separate boards was raised.

Questions to be discussed with department officials in Toronto are whether there should be two campuses with one board or whether there should be separate campuses under separate boards.

Included in Area 3 are the counties of Hastings, Prince Edward, Lennox and Addington, Northumberland, Peterborough, Haliburton and Victoria.

Both the Quinte area and the Peterborough district have made submissions for the proposed college of arts and technology to be constructed in their areas.

Selection on the location of the college or campuses will be the responsibility of the board of governors. On the meeting temporary quarters are being sought for about 700 students for next September.

Belleville members on the board of governors are Harold Wilson, Mrs. Ernest J. C. Anderson and Mrs. Spence Wonnacott.

The next meeting of the colleges board of governors will be held at Peterborough on January 11th.

They are Peter Notaro, 31, Patrick DeFilippo, 27, of the Bronx, Peter Joseph Magadino, 25, of Brooklyn and Carlo Simari, 47, of New Brunswick, N.J.

Bonanno, son of Mafia king pin Joseph (Joe Bananas) Bonanno of New York city, was ordered deported Wednesday after being found an undesirable visitor because of a criminal record in the U.S.

Kiesinger Lists Two Top Tasks

BONN (Reuter) — Kurt Georg Kiesinger, launching his government's program as West Germany's 3rd chancellor, said Thursday night he sees solving the country's financial problems and improving relations with France as his top priority jobs.

The ex - year - old Christian Democrat, elected by Parliament to succeed Ludwig Erhard, told the Bundestag (lower house) that better relations with France are at the top of his foreign policy tasks.

Kiesinger had a coalition of Christian Democrats and Social Democrats, filling the government benches with 447 deputies, against the opposition Free Democrats' 49.

West Germanys 17 years, Willy Brandt, Social Democratic leader and the new vice-chancellor and foreign minister, said the first visit Thursday night to the French capital by a West German chancellor was "a symbol of the Christian Democrats' powerful Saarland wing, Strauss is assuming the key post of finance minister.

Financial problems led to the Erhard government's downfall.

S.C. Barry Named Dairy Group Head

OTTAWA (CP) — R. C. Barry, deputy minister of agriculture, has been chosen as the first chairman of the Canadian dairy commission, Agriculture Minister Green announced today.

The minister told the Commons the two other commissioners will be Jules Thibaudeau, Thurso, Que., dairy farmer and L. A. Aldham of Vancouver, general manager of the Fraser Valley Milk Producers Association.

Mr. Greene hailed the commission, which will start operations immediately, as a historic move in agriculture. It is the first attempt at national marketing of farm products aside from the wheat board which sells wheat and other grains.

He hoped it would be "the model and the crucible" of national marketing projects for other farm commodities.

HAS PROBLEMS

Alvin Hamilton, Conservative spokesman on agriculture and fisheries, welcomed the move, said the commission will have immense problems to tackle:

Divided federal and provincial jurisdiction, the need for a national basis of dairy product classification and the imperative duty to strengthen the industry and help feed the hungry people of the world.

He hoped Mr. Greene had "repented of his sin" when he said politics should be left aside in the commission and it was "no place to start fights with provincial minister of agriculture."

This was presumably a reference to a federal dispute with William Everett, Ontario agriculture minister, over milk price supports.

Mr. Hamilton said the free flow of dairy products between Ontario and Quebec puts a high obligation on getting the two provinces to agree on marketing arrangements that will ensure equal opportunity to farmers on both sides of the provincial line.

Also named was a nine-member consultative committee to help the commission. Included are:

Mr. McLaughlin of Beaverton, Ont., chairman of the Ontario Milk Marketing Board and president of the Dairy Farmers of Canada;

Eilard Powers of Beachburg, Ont., first vice - president of the United Farmers' Union;

W. T. Murchie of Toronto, president of Pet Milk (Canada) Ltd., and a director of the National Dairy Council.

Talon Order Not Secret Says Morin

MONTREAL (CP) — Rosaire Morin, chairman of the technical committee of the privately-organized Estates General of French Canada, said Thursday he also belongs to a group called Ordre de bienfaisance Jean Talon.

But he added there is nothing secret about the organization, the name of which, in English translation, is the Jean Talon Order of Charity.

Mr. Morin issued a statement about his membership following a Monday night allegation by the chief organizer of a separatist party that the estates official belonged to a French-Canadian secret society which constituted a new "patente."

Patente, a Quebec parlance, has been taken to mean a purely French-Canadian equivalent of the Masonic Society having possible political objectives.

The allegation about Mr. Morin was made by Bernard Beauchamp, a delegate to the estates general and a chief organizer for the Rassemblement pour l'Independance nationale.

Mr. Morin will be presiding at a Barry session last weekend. It is an assembly designed by its organizers to be representative of a cross-section of the French-Canadian community and an agency for in-depth discussion of the possible development paths open to French-Canadians in future.

Mr. Beauchamp called for Mr. Morin's resignation from the technical committee chairmanship. Mr. Morin made no mention of any resignation plans in his statement Thursday.

Lovely Theory Meets Nasty Query: 'Is Golf Really Preferable to War?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The possibility that anthropologists have unwittingly discovered an aspect of human behavior which could unlock the doors to world peace is under some discussion here.

A number of studies have accumulated in U.S. government archives which show that some primitive peoples work off frustrations by banging the ground with sticks.

The significance of this activity for modern man was almost universally overlooked until a political science student detected the extraordinary parallel between groundpounding and the modern game known as golf.

From this he has postulated —tentatively—the theory that a nation's peace-loving quotient can be accurately established by counting the numbers engaged in golf.

Preliminary investigation indicates that where golfing is widespread no dictatorship can long survive. The anonymous scientist's initial findings are reported here for the first time.

LACK COURSES

For example, there are no known golf courses in the Soviet Union, China, Poland, Romania, Bulgaria or Albania. The number of courses in once-democratic Czechoslovakia has been reduced to two and they are primarily for the use of Western diplomats.

Since 1945, the Japanese, a hard-driving, aggressive people, have renounced war as an instrument of national policy.

As matters now stand, Japan is developing golfers at a greater rate than any other nation in the world.

Of equal significance is the fact that the English-speaking peoples, who have a long and unbroken history of self-government, are the world's most avid stick-swingers.

Germany, which has brought about two world wars, has only 67 golf courses and 6,000 golfers. Most of these golfers, however, are American servicemen.

Political terrorists have long maintained that democracy cannot be exported. It might be noted, however, that golf provides rudimentary training since it requires a collective decision on who shall be first on the tee. Anyone who can keep a golf score can also keep a national budget.

It is possible that, in time, a diplomatic drive will simply be one 20 yards shorter than a foreign opponent's.

For the sake of national prestige diplomats would have to keep their eyes on the ball and develop a smooth follow-through.

There would be peace in a swinging world.

He said Cablevue will provide perfect reception in black and white and color and will give Belleville viewers the widest selection of TV programming ever received in this area.

Good Publicity

Over Counter Sales of Cheese At Show Helping Industry

Over the counter sales of exhibition cheese at the British Empire Dairy Show is good publicity for the cheese industry, according to Jack M. Bain, Director, Milk Products Division, Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Speaking yesterday at the closing session of the Central Ontario Cheese Makers Association Mr. Bain said the sale of good cheese at a reasonable price did much to promote the industry.

The continuous line-up of people waiting to buy cheese indicated that Belleville and district people appreciated the opportunity of buying exhibition cheese, he said.

Association president Ivan Sine said it was unfortunate that the cheese show lasted but two days.

"If the show lasted for several days I'm sure that most of the exhibition cheese would be sold," he said.

NEW TYPES USED

The trend towards stainless steel vats in modern day factories is forcing cheese makers to come up with a new type of agitators, shovels and forks for handling of curd.

Mr. Bain said that experiments were now underway and it was expected that some type of nylon tipped equipment would soon be available.

New legislation expected by next spring would prohibit the use of any type of equipment which would wear or break and thus get into the cheese.

Other speakers during the afternoon session included Arnold Johnston, director, cheese division of the Ontario Milk Marketing Board at Belleville; K. L. Duttschaever, science lecturer at the University of Guelph, and W. A. Harley, laboratory supervisor at the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

CLOSES WITH BANQUET

Mr. Johnston outlined the organization of the Ontario Milk Marketing Board which included three advisory boards for milk, cheese and transportation.

This week's cheese makers' convention and dairy show wound up last night with the annual cheese makers' banquet and dance at Club Canara.

Trophies and other awards won at the cheese show were presented. Special guest at the banquet was Miss Dolly Ann Edmunds of Cobden, this year's Ontario Dairy Princess.

The banquet and dance saw more than 350 in attendance — the largest number ever to attend a cheese makers' banquet.

Chairman for the banquet was J. M. Bain. Among the guests were Mayor and Mrs. Jack Ellis, Lee Grills, M.P. and Mrs. Grills and Clarks T. Rollins, M.L.A.

This year marks the retirement of J. F. Robinson, for many years chief cheese instructor for Central and Eastern Ontario and in recognition of his lengthy service was made two presentations at last night's banquet.

Mr. Robinson received a purse of money from cheese makers and fieldmen in Central Ontario and a second presentation from the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association.

BANCROFT — Gun - happy hunters cost hydro supply agencies throughout Ontario thousands of dollars every year, it seems blackout near here revealed today.

The blackout, blanketing a wide area in surrounding townships, was caused when insulators on a main 44,000 - volt Ontario Hydro line in Cardiff township, were shattered by gunfire.

About 20,000 people were believed affected.

A foot patrol of hydro workers found cartridge cases at the scene indicating at least three different high - powered rifles were used to shatter the insulators.

Officials believe the damages was done during hunting season because the lines prone to moisture effects in subsequent heavy rains.

The hydro telephone line also was damaged while one pole was badly burned. Replacement costs are estimated at $1,000.

However, the incident is nothing new.

A spokesman at Ontario Hydro's eastern regional office said today similar incidents are repeated throughout the province every year and both Hydro and municipal utilities pay dearly for the damage.

"It runs in the neighborhood of over $100,000 a year in repairs," he estimated.

British Army Cut Will Affect Canada

LONDON (CP) — Gen. Jean Allard, chief of the Canadian defence staff, said today any move by Britain to reduce its army on the Rhine would have an impact on the operations of the Canadian Army brigade in Germany.

"To some extent we depend on the British army for logistics support," Gen. Allard said in an interview as he opened a round of talks with British military chiefs.

"If Britain reduces its Rhine army, then we would have to find logistics support elsewhere, or perhaps supply it ourselves."

Gen. Allard will spend three days in London, to be followed by a six-day official visit to French military installations before the final meeting of the NATO council which opens in Paris in two weeks.

Britain has threatened to reduce its 50,000-man army on the Rhine unless West Germany places sufficient orders in British factories to balance the amount of British sterling spent in the West German economy has increased its purchases from Britain but claims it cannot order more than Canada's 6,600 - man brigade uses some British maintenance, transport and supplies channels in its operations.

Gen. Allard said shutting down air bases in France "is easier said than done." Canadian bases now at Metz and Marville not only assisted NATO but also provided logistics for Canadian commitments in the Middle East and elsewhere.

Man Essential To His Family, So Is Freed

LEWISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Bruno T. Pepe, 31, of Wilmington, Del., walks out of the Lewisburg federal penitentiary today because of a judge's ruling that Pepe's family won't live without him.

U.S. District Court Judge Caleb M. Wright has granted Pepe parole from his 18-month prison term for a gambling violation after hearing this testimony:

1. His seven-year-old son has refused to receive first communion since Pepe was imprisoned on Sept. 9.

2. His eight-year-old daughter has fallen to the bottom of her class.

3. His nine-year-old daughter is suffering from insomnia.

4. His wife has become a "disorganized woman."

5. Three of his six children are seeing a psychiatrist.

Mrs. Pete, 30, told the court the effect of her husband's imprisonment has been so severe on her family that three of her children now are undergoing psychiatric treatment.

Several witnesses supported her testimony, including the psychiatrist, Dr. James A. Flaherty, who said Pepe must have been "an excellent father" and a man of "enormous love and warmth."

Pepe was sentenced Aug. 4 to one year for evading the 10-per-cent federal excise tax on approximately $5,400 in gambling income for June, 1964.

He also was sentenced to concurrent six - month terms for failing to file an excise tax return and failing to register as a gambler with the Internal Revenue Service.

The clip was used near the start of a program examining church attitudes toward sex and other questions.

It drew verbal barrages in the Senate and Commons and outside Parliament as well. Jean Pouliot, Quebec City station operator, said in future he wanted to screen Sunday in advance before allowing it to be shown on his English-language television station.

Mr. Diefenbaker called the film "lewd and pornographic" and said steps should be taken to protect youngsters from such programs.

Mr. Guimet told the committee he had come prepared with a statement of management on the film.

It fell the decision to use the clip was wrong. The film did not form an integral part of the theme of the program.

But he added that Sunday is trying to follow what was best from the Seven Days format, a program that won much praise and a wide audience while it often raised storms of controversy.

The corporation had brought together the best possible program team to turn out Sunday, Mr. Guimet added. The program was only four weeks old and it would be a miracle if it didn't make some errors in judgment.

Mr. Guimet said the Sunday clip was eight minutes taken from a film used on the BBC in Britain at full length—45 minutes.

Private broadcaster Don Jamieson (L—Burin-Burgeo) asked "how far up the ladder" of the CBC hierarchy the question of the film went. Mr. Guimet said the decision was taken at the producer level.

Family of Seven Homeless in Codrington Fire

TRENTON — A Codrington family of seven is homeless as a result of a fire that destroyed their story and one-half frame dwelling and much of its contents last night.

When firemen from Brighton five miles away reached the Geoffrey Lord place flames had broken through the roof and were spreading into the interior.

A fireman said the outbreak started in the chimney and produced great amounts of smoke while Mrs. Lord, with the help of her five children and neighbors, moved furnishings and personal effects to the lawn outside.

Mr. Lord, away at work, returned to help as much as he could.

All the time, burning embers carried by a brisk wind threatened to catch in a nearby barn where the Lord's kept livestock and feed for them.

When the water supply in the tank on the pumper was depleted, ice forming on hose couplings slowed down firemen laying a line to another source.

Then fire chief Ed Rose decided to call for help from the Trenton Fire Department to control the farm buildings.

Mrs. Lord, contacted at her father-in-law's home this morning, said the fire could be considered a serious setback so close to Christmas, but she was thankful because she had decided last week to put off buying presents. At the present time the Lords are staying with her husband's parents, Irving Selkin view of the scene of the fire, which was still smouldering at day break.

Estimate of the loss has not yet been reported but is expected to be in the neighborhood of $10,000.

8 Bodies Hunted On Huron

HARBOR BEACH, Mich. (AP)—With 20 bodies counted, the U.S. Coast Guard today pressed its search for eight missing crew members of the Daniel J. Morrell as a board of inquiry planned an investigation of some puzzling aspects of the tragedy.

In the worst Great Lakes disaster in eight years, the 603-foot ore carrier split apart and went to the bottom of Lake Huron early Tuesday during a gale that concealed her fate for 24 hours.

There was one survivor, Dennis Hale, 26, a deck watchman from Ashtabula, Ohio. Hale was asleep in his bunk when awakened by the battering that tipped the 12,500-ton Morrell in two.

Hale—will be the only eyewitness before the board of inquiry appointed Thursday by Admiral Willard J. Smith, the coast guard commandant in Washington.

Rear-Admiral Charles Tighe, commander of the coast guard district with headquarters in Cleveland, had recommended the inquiry and was appointed to head the five-man marine board.

Such an investigation is reserved for major marine disasters. The board is expected to convene in Cleveland Monday.

Election Doubts

A spokesman for Premier John Robarts has demonstrated convincingly that the premier did not make any firm commitment regarding the holding of a provincial election next year when he spoke in Brockville last week.

Tape recordings of Mr. Robarts' press conference prove this fact. However, the premier did indicate he would have no compunction about calling an election during Centennial Year.

"I think the government of the province has to continue regardless of the fact we happen to have a birthday lasting for a complete year . . . I don't think really one could permit it to be a deciding factor."

On the other hand, Mr. Robarts should realize that to call an election in Ontario during Centennial Year could be regarded as a tactless move. True, it has been customary to call one every fourth year, but 1967 is rather special, and there is nothing to stop the Government continuing for its full five-year span until 1968.

Nothing, that is, other than political expediency, and it may well be that Mr. Robarts is thinking of striking when the iron is hot, with the Opposition Liberal party in comparative disarray. The Opposition has only 22 seats against the Conservatives' 78 and is still hunting for a leader to succeed Andy Thompson who has resigned due to ill health.

Mr. Robarts might take rather than gain votes by subjecting the province to an election at a time when the minds of most people will be focused on Expo and the Centennial celebrations.

Lack of Respect

In a recent editorial we deplored the tendency in the admittedly charged atmosphere of Parliament to indulge in character assassination.

At the recent Conservative conference in Ottawa one elderly delegate jumped to his feet and called Dalton Camp a "political rat." Mr. Camp himself, though the central figure in the humiliation of John Diefenbaker, was in scrupulously good taste in his utterances throughout the conference.

But we are reminded of the generally lamentable state into which Parliamentary debates have lapsed of late by observations of D. McCormack Smyth, Dean of York University's Atkinson College. His words are directed not so much at Parliament as they are at the public and at public media. But they are applicable either way.

Mr. Smyth spoke of "the almost complete lack of privacy in the lives of political leaders and the personal pain experienced by those politicians vilified in the public media," and said this was particularly obvious in television coverage.

"Politically lazy as most of us are," said Mr. Smyth, "still we are ever ready to criticize our political leaders. All too often our political attentions bear witness more to the prejudice than to our capacity to think."

Both in Parliament and in the realms of public thought there is room for that often lacking virtue known simply as good taste — a respect for one's fellow man and for the fitness of things, without which we are little more advanced than the barbarians of old.

Poor Guide

Ditch diggers and girls who can use sewing machines are not listed in the International Labor Organization Guide, according to Deputy Manpower Minister Tom Kent.

It seems that immigration officers are using this guide to determine who is skilled, and the absence of the above categories in the listings has caused some surprise in Government circles.

Senator Croll, member of a committee examining the white paper on immigration, put it this way: "Can you for a moment tell us that a young girl doesn't acquire a precious skill at her mother's knee when she learns to sew?"

The senator is right. Even allowing for automated processes which likely have displaced some workers in this field, where would the textile industry be without its expert women employees skilled in the art of needlework?

The Irish linen industry, though it has undergone modernization in recent years, maintains the high reputation for quality because it also employs women to hand stitch the intricate design work.

Where would the Nottingham lace industry be without people with similiar skills? And shirt manufacturers the world over?

Manitoba is aware of the competence of old country people in this regard. The province needs some 4,000 garment workers and is reported to be recruiting them in Scotland.

Drugs Stop Epilepsy But Might Harm Baby

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I am an epileptic and take four capsules of Dilantin a day, plus four quarter-grain tablets of phenobarbital. I have not had a seizure in over a year.

The doctors feel that my epilepsy is the result of a birth injury. If I become pregnant, what effect would these drugs have on the baby?—MRS. W. F.

In a rather long list of drugs which may cause harm to a baby, Dilantin is not mentioned.

Phenobarbital in excessive does can provoke bleeding in newborn babies, but the amount you mention is not excessive.

Discuss the subject with your doctor. He may want to try some reduction in dosage, particularly in the first three months of pregnancy, since that is when the danger from drugs occurs in most instances.

It is also possible that he may want to try such a reduction before pregnancy, to see whether the smaller amount will still prevent seizures.

After all, the fewest drugs of any type and the smallest dosage which will do what needs is be done are obviously desirable. But it is also reassuring that you have enough to prevent seizures.

Dear Dr. Molner: Years ago I recall that use of Iodized salt was a preventive for goiter. It has been so long since then, I wonder if you would comment on whether experience has borne out the theory?—D.A.

Iodized salt first came into wide use in the 1920's. It has proved to be extremely successful.

Some people still develop goiter (even though) for various reasons, but not in large numbers that once prevailed.

Iodized salt is a preventive in that goiter results when the body lacks iodine. The human system needs very little, but it must have some, and in some parts of the world, including the Great Lakes region Iodine has been washed out of the soil so there is virtually none in vegetables, nor in feeds used for farm animals.

Seafoods are high in iodine, however. Increased long-distance shipment of such foods, plus the Iodine in iodized salt, make it rare for a person not to get the tiny bit of Iodine the body needs.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have married again and would like to know if there is any chance that I can become pregnant. I had my tubes cut and tied 11 years ago after three Caesarean sections.—MRS. N. S.

Sometimes the tubes can be repaired, but the attempt frequently fails. Discuss this with your doctor. If you have such a repair operation you must be prepared for the possibility that it still will not make pregnancy possible.

Dear Dr. Molner: What is the name of the first that makes a person quit drinking? Is it dangerous?—R. W. M.

Antabuse (disulfiram) is probably the drug you mean, but you need a prescription for it from a physician's prescription. Yes, it can be dangerous if not used properly. It is also necessary that the patient not have alcohol for some hours before taking the first dose; therefore, it cannot be given without his prior knowledge. In any event, it is only part of the "cure", it's a help for some individuals who want to stop drinking.

Strictly Personal

After Viet Nam-What Then?

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Let's assume that the hawks are right — which I don't for a moment believe — and that our presence in Viet Nam is imperative in order to "contain communism" in that part of the world.

Let's assume further that we "win" the war in Viet Nam, whatever that means, and the Communists withdraw to lick their wounds. Then what have we really got?

What we have got are a dozen other Viet Nams, ready to spring up in a dozen other parts of the world. As soon as one fire is put out another one will begin to rage elsewhere.

We cannot doubt this. The next World War could start anywhere — in the Middle East, in Africa, in South America. For communism is no longer something that is "explored" by Russia; it is more like a spontaneous combustion that can happen in any bitter, frustrated and underprivileged nation.

Today there seem to be only two main forces in the world — reaction and revolution. There is no effective "middle force" to temporize between the two. There is a Batista, and he is followed by a Castro. And the sad history of our country in the 20th Century is that of supporting a Batista until he is inevitably followed by a Castro.

The whole continent of South America — which we ignore at our peril — is rent with the conflicting forces of reaction and revolution. Adherents of the democratic process are pitifully few and weak in almost all South American countries. The people have little real choice.

And the same is true in many other parts of the world. Only poor people choose communism in preference to reaction, and the affluent people (along with the military) choose reaction as the only way to stop the march of communism.

Between these two vicious extremes, truth and justice are crushed in the middle. And this U.S., which is supposed to represent the viable center, has in its obsession with the Communist menace, too often given aid and comfort to the forces of reaction.

How can we beat back communism in Viet Nam when the military dictatorship as shaky and cynical as that of General Ky's? How can we win the common people to our side anywhere by supporting their oppressors and exploiters? With the best intentions — at least, let us assume so — we have not only succeeded in alienating most of the world's people.

"Winning the war" in Viet Nam is meaningless, even if possible. When we abandon love and resort to force — as we have there — we give sanction to the abandonment of law and the resort to force of all nations. If we are no better than our enemies, what do we fight for but raw power?

Computer's Capacity

Manchester Guardian Weekly

Our favorite computer story has a very small scientist standing before a thinking computer which is expurgitating tape. The tape reads: Cogito ergo sum (I think, therefore I am.") We have always been on the side of the very small scientist, who, before the computer more than usually wrong-headed. Not that the computer does not think: it is inevitably followed by a Caesar.

Children and Christmas

Christ'n Science Monitor

There was a time when an orange in a Christmas stocking was a luxury and a treat to a child. But since oranges juice has become a staple on the American breakfast table the orange has lost its charm as a seasonal gift.

So it is with toys. One could hardly expect the modern tot to ask for a carpet sweeper or a cooking stove. Side play at being adults. Since mother uses a vacuum cleaner, not a hand sweeper, and father goes to work in a car, not on horseback, small girls and boys want copies of power-driven household tools and transportation. This runs up the bill for parents and grandparents. The price tags on some playthings this season are surprising. But well-to-do relatives are buying the costly items.

There is nothing wrong with an expensive toy if it encourages a child to use his talents. A simple camera or toy sewing machine may start a child on a career.

Fortunately, youngsters do not let price enter into their enjoyment of a present. A kitchen obtained from the city pound may outrate the most expensive gift a child receives in a youngster's estimation. The criterion is the fun or the education the toy or girl gets from the plaything. This means that adults must think in terms of childhood when they make up their gift lists.

The second French empire was proclaimed 114 years ago today—in 1852—after a plebiscite confirmed Napoleon Bonaparte's nephew in power. The monarchy had been overthrown by the revolution in 1848 still France's Louis Napoleon was elected president of the Republic in the same year. His half-brother organized a coup d'etat on his behalf on the 1851 anniversary of Napoleon's victory at Austerlitz but the republicans resisted in the Paris streets and were suppressed in the Massacre of the Boulevards. Napoleon III's empire lasted until his defeat and capture by the Prussians in 1870.

Quebec Paper Raps Jargon

Granby La Voix de l'Est

"It is suggested that we decree unilingualism in Quebec; we are asked to make commercial and industrial firms use French; there are demands for French signs and posters. All this can be done through the authority of laws. The state has responsibilities in this field. But will it suffice when this is done? Will it do nothing to change the habits of our people who seem to have lost the sense of their destiny? . . ."

Mr. Tremblay is absolutely right on this point. We make demands ceaselessly, but we don't take the trouble to exercise the rights we already have. French signs, the use of French in business, the practice of unilingualism would certainly give a new image to our province. But would that change the habits of our people? Do not French-Canadians themselves court the use of English? Let us open our eyes and ears. English signs often are those of French-Canadian companies and for every French-Canadian who speaks correctly there are two who speak a real jargon.

It is the duty, of our elite, that is to say of the ministers of cultural affairs, of school commissions, of teachers, of patriotic societies and of French-language associations to contribute; each in his own domain, to the improvement of spoken French.

It is in this way that we will assure French the place of honor it should have in this province.

Biculturalism need not be an obstacle to the respect of French especially in this province where we are the majority. Teaching of English is necessary to facilitate our relations with the English-language ethnic group in Quebec as well as in the rest of the country. Instead of limiting ourselves to deploring the Anglicization of our people, let us teach them their language correctly and it is certain that they will be proud to speak it well.

Teacher Has Two Students

GORDON IRVING in the Christian Science Monitor

Mrs. Margaret MacKenzie, the wife of a Scottish crofter, and mother herself of four children, has been appointed teacher of Britain's smallest and loneliest school.

It is at Rhenigidale, on the Isle of Harris, Outer Hebrides. The school is held in a single room, and there are only two pupils this year — old cronies John Angus McLeod and Louie Campbell.

The village has a population of 17. There has been no teacher for over two years, since there were no children in the village.

Then Louise and John came of school age. This set a problem for the Educational Committee. The teacher for the job had to be Gaelic-speaking. (In Gaelic as well as English).

Mrs. Mackenzie, who was a widow for 20 years, left her job at the school all week and go to her home, 30 miles away, on weekends.

It will cost the authorities about $2,000 a year to keep the school going.

Environment And Disease

Saint John Telegraph-Journal

One of the more interesting medical researches being made is under way in laboratories throughout the world. It involves the relationship of disease — the study of why many diseases are more prevalent in certain geographical areas, environments and nationalities than others.

In some cases, scientists think they have found the answers. Diabetes, one of the more common ailments to afflict mankind, is believed to be caused by a gene which "skips" in transmittal, and at some time in the past when food was very scarce. By snubbing natives of diabetic gene to store sugar in their bodies instead of burning it, the diabetes gene protected them from starvation.

That same gene causes nothing but trouble for the well-fed population. It is not alone.

There are geographic differences for almost all kinds of cancer. Breast cancer is a common killer in the United States, Australia and Britain, but almost unknown in Japan. Liver cancer is a foremost cause of death in South Africa, but almost nonexistent in some other countries.

Learning more about the hereditary traits which make these differences possible is an intriguing path to discovery of the causes of killer diseases and their possible eventual prevention.

Will Bears Have to Go?

Halifax Chronicle-Herald

In the clash and confusion of the battle, pardonable enough and editorial, now raging over the government's drive to create a single uniform color out of the three armed forces, li is doubtful whether anyone has given a thought to the fate of the national bear. Or, for that matter, to the military or air force mascottes.

If unification goes through, will sailors (or floating privates, as whatever they are to be called) retain their ancient right to grow beards? Will soldiers transferred for duty on marine service (formerly naval) oblge, be able to retain their moustaches, grown in army blessing, but against all naval regulations?

A man, though not perhaps his wife, can be very fond of his beard. And clean-shaven politicians in Ottawa, even those in a hurry should hesitate before wielding the razor indiscriminately in ships and bases of the (former) Royal Canadian Navy.

Then, just to prove that there are more problems to unification than at first meet the eye, there is the question of the naval salute . . .

Washington Makes Strong Protest Over Bank Controls

OTTAWA (CP)—A confrontation between the Canadian and American governments is shaping up over legislation now before Parliament to curb assets of the U.S.-owned Mercantile Bank of Canada.

Finance Minister Sharp confirmed Thursday night that a diplomatic note on the issue has been received from the U.S. state department. He refused to say the note is one of the stiffest protests ever fired here from Washington.

Mr. Sharp said he would consult today with other members of the cabinet and prepare for the questions expected to fly when the Commons meets at 11 a.m. He declined further comment.

The diplomatic dispute stems from a section of the revised Bank Act that would limit Mercantile's assets to 20 times its authorized capital of $10,000,000.

Mercantile, a subsidiary of the Rockefeller family's first National City Bank of New York, the world's third largest such institution, boosted its assets by 20 per cent in recent months to $457,000 at Oct. 30, well over the proposed ceiling of $200,000,000.

The U.S. government is understood to object that the legislation is retroactive and discriminatory, thus setting a bad precedent for other countries where U.S. banks do business.

The other Canadian chartered banks, all under Canadian ownership, fear U.S. reprisal against their lucrative branches south of the border and oppose the restriction against Mercantile.

In a day-long appearance before the Commons finance committee Thursday, G. Arnold Hart, Bank of Canada president, termed the section discriminatory and dangerous.

Liberal MPs on the committee questioned Mr. Hart's arguments. Mercantile officials are due to submit their case before the committee next Thursday.

The Mercantile Bank was sold by City Bank to Canadian interests in 1953.

Walter Gordon, then finance minister, and two top federal officials said earlier this year that Mr. Gordon warned City Bank executives before the transaction that legislation would be passed to prevent foreign takeovers of Canadian financial institutions.

In his testimony before the committee, Mr. Hart said the restriction against Mercantile would earn Canada a "bad reputation" and invite retaliation from other countries.

Foreign ownership of a Canadian bank could greatly benefit Canadians, it could provide international contracts influential to trade, for instance.

Highaid Canadians as a whole "couldn't have any strong objection" if foreign interests took over the Bank of Montreal.

It was discriminatory to change the "rules of the game" for a bank operating under an existing charter.

The Bank Act bill has received approval in principle in the Commons and has been before the finance committee for hearings lasting several weeks.

Railways Buy New Cars In Freight Revolution

MONTREAL (CP) — Pressure from shippers across Canada has prompted the CNR and CPR to invest heavily in more specialized freight equipment—and start a pressure play of their own.

The latest step in the trend toward more sophisticated equipment is a 100-ton capacity pressure unloading hopper car being put into service by both railways.

CPR has purchased 20 of the covered cars from National Steel Car is Hamilton, Ont., while the CNR has made two in its own shops and leases 30 others from North American Car Corp.

"They are the spearhead of the freight car revolution," said J. R. Gordon, CNR vice president in charge of traffic.

"The customer system speeds up the unloading operation, cuts down handling costs, provides all-weather protection for the cargo during unloading and eliminates the need for permanent unloading facilities other than an air compressor and storage silos.

NEW UNLOADING SETUP

Compressed air is used to agitate the cargo and force it through outlets in the bottom of the cars into pipes, then directly into trucks, silos or any container. The cargo need never be exposed to the weather.

To end of the discharge pipe can be shifted from one side of the car to the other so that unloading can be done on either side of the tracks—an important advantage for shippers taking delivery of large carloads.

CNR and CPR are now conducting marketing experiments with the new cars, testing their efficiency in handling dozens of powdered or granular cargoes that are shipped in bulk. They expect that the pressure system will be particularly useful in moving pulp and paper products for shipment of cement, fertilizers, salt, sugar, flour and malt.

CPR currently is preparing cars to go into service hauling cement to the huge Arrow Dam project on the Columbia River in British Columbia.

Cement shipped in pressure cars be unloaded at about 4,000 pounds a minute or more compared with an average of 500 pounds a minute by the conventional system of opening hatches in the bottom of cars and letting the cement spill out into a hole.

Spokesmen for CNR and CPR said the cars are "considerably" more expensive than conventional cars and haven't been practical until recently.

"We need these cars now that the Atlantic Ocean terminals are really under way," said a CPR spokesman. "The freight business is getting more and more specialized, specialized and competitive.

"The pressure cars should be particularly useful in co-operation with the trucking industry. With direct unloading and loading from the hoppers to trucks you combine the low cost of rail transportation with the mobility of trucking."

Governments Urged to Forsake Deficit Financing at PC Meet

PICTON — A former Ontario cabinet minister last night warned that Canadian governments, both federal and provincial, must forsakes deficit financing and return to traditional balanced budgets.

The emphatic advice came from Keith Roberts, former Minister of Lands and Forests, speaking to the annual meeting here of the Prince-Edward-Lennox Conservative Association.

"We haven't had a balanced budget in Canada in a long time," said Mr. Roberts. "And we can't go on indefinitely running in the red to get what we want."

He said governments had to stop budgeting on credit.

"We must get back to a balanced budget — and in the black," he added.

Easy to like.

That is if you like an easy whisky. If so, you should have no difficulty liking 5 Star.

Where things get difficult is in making a whisky this good. It means selecting whiskies from our five distilleries across Canada (only Seagram's has 5, by the way). Then blending and re-blending them to get 5 Star's easy taste.

Is it worth all the trouble? Easy for you to find out.

WEDDING

CASSIBO — THOMPSON

The Pentecostal Church, Wellington, was the scene of the recent wedding when Jean Lois Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Thompson, Wellington, was united in marriage to Eugene Lelvis Cassibo, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Cassibo, Belleville. Rev. John Shannon officiated at the ceremony and music was provided by organist Miss Grace Easton who also accompanied the soloist Mrs. John Shannon.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a full length gown of white taffeta. A waist-length veil was caught with a crown of lace studded with seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of pink roses mingled with white baby 'mums.

Miss Carol Cassibo, sister of the bridegroom was the bride's only attendant and wore a full-length gown of American beauty pink taffeta featuring a lace bodice. She wore a large rose headpiece of matching material and carried a bouquet of white baby 'mums.

Mr. Gilbert Stephens was groomsman, while Mr. Ken Thompson, brother of the bride and Mr. Joel Cassibo, brother of the bridegroom were the ushers.

The wedding supper was served at the Trinity Hall, Wellington where the bride's mother received the guests wearing a burgundy satin suit with lace overlay, black accessories and a corsage of white 'mums. Assisting was the bride groom's mother who wore a pale blue chiffon dress with matching accessories and a corsage of pink carnations.

For the wedding trip to points in the United States, the bride chose a red wool suit with black accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

Teenagers Exchange Photos at Christmas

By Reba and Bessie Churchill

Picture this! Last Christmas, over one million teenagers exchanged photo 'presents. This year, the trend is growing. Whether your kids are attending a different school, your boyfriend was drafted, or you're joining the ever-expanding group of picture-swappers, here are some novel ways to give a personalized present. As Cheryl Tiegs illustrates, the gift box can be used as the frame. Simply cover the top and inside of the container with colorful wrapping paper. For a shadow box effect, centre a school photograph in the inside of the bottom of the container. Insert a piece of the inside lining of the box bottom with two-way tape (the kind that has adhesive on both sides.) To make "swing open" sides, conventionally close the box; then, slit the lid down the centre and along the top and bottom. Gently press these two sections back until the portrait inside the package is visible. When these "swinging doors" are open, they provide balance for frame to stand upright; when closed, the box retains its original appearance and can still be mailed or carried.

There is no mystery about who receives the gift when the present contains a photo! Identification tag. Let your imagination and artistry take over as you cut out a variety of ornament shapes (diamond, triangle, circle) from a sheet of folded cardboard. For instance, a star design can be fashioned with the points folded in, concealing the photo on the inside. Cover cardboard with holiday paper, mount picture, and punch a hole in the top for the string tie-on. Those personalized tags can also serve as dangle decorations on the Yule tree or as a pattern for a photo Christmas card.

St. Andrew's Guild Holds Tea and Bazaar

"Anything made by the women of St. Andrew's must be good." This was a remark overheard at the annual tea and bazaar sponsored by the Ladies' Guild in St. Andrew's Church parlors on Wednesday afternoon, St. Andrew's Day.

The festivities were officially opened by Rev. W. R. V. Walker, former assistant minister, in the absence of Rev. Laurie Sutherland. Mr. Walker cited the team effort of all the women of the church, which had resulted in the beautiful booths and tea room. He concluded by aptly quoting "Blest Be The Tie That Binds."

As usual, at bazaars held just before Christmas, the patrons were eager buyers of imaginative handiwork and novelties suitable for gifts. Children's wear and aprons also were most eye-catching. Other popular booths were home cooking, delicatessen and candy.

Mrs. K. Davidson and her committee had beautified the tea room by filling each window with white baskets filled with autumn blooms. The serving table, covered in lace and centred with evergreens and gold candles in silver candelabra was surrounded by small tables with white linen cloths and centres of white tiny trees adorned with blue Christmas baubles. During the afternoon the following group leaders poured tea: Mrs. H. Elvidge, president of W.M.S.; Mrs. R. Shier, Mrs. H. Arnott, Mrs. J. Morris, Mrs. E. Hall, Mrs. R. Jones and Mrs. W. Mantle.

BAZAAR CONVENERS

Overall convener of the bazaar was Mrs. M. W. Barlow and co-convener was Mrs. G. Durno. Mrs. R. Sutherland, wife of the minister of the church, and Mrs. R. Strachan, president, welcomed the guests at the door of the tearoom.

The tearoom hostesses were Mrs. H. McKay, Miss Frieda Matthews, Mrs. F. Bensof, Mrs. R. Sale and Mrs. K. Davidson; replenishing plates: Mrs. F. McKeown, Mrs. C. Shaw, Mrs. A. Williamson, Mrs. R. Bunkard, Mrs. T. Burnett, Mrs. P. Toonaley, Mrs. E. Elliott, Mrs. C. Ryan, Mrs. H. Kelly, Mrs. E. Pigden, Mrs. T. Anger, Mrs. V. Weir and Mrs. C. Hiuser. Mrs. A. McCreary was in charge of arranging plates and Mrs. J. Browning was kitchen convener.

Conveners of the various booths: aprons, Mrs. R. Michaud; children's wear, Mrs. J. Robinson; candy, Mrs. William Mantle; delicatessen, Mrs. H. York; homecooking, Mrs. L. Wilson; novelties, Mrs. S. Morson; OGT and Sunday School, white elephant table, Mrs. G. Boyce and Mrs. C. Huiser.

A nursery was provided for the children. This was convened by Mrs. F. Sheffield, assisted by Mrs. G. Scott, Mrs. R. Cameron, Mrs. A. Adams and Mrs. R. Mott. Ticket convener was Mrs. J. Sly and the treasurers for the afternoon were Mrs. G. Bennett, Mrs. O. J. Reed, Mrs. H. Elvidge, Mrs. Eugene O'Neil and Miss Helen Blair.

Church Groups

CHRIST CHURCH W.A.

Evening Branch

The final business meeting of the year of the Christ Church Evening Branch W.A. was held on Monday evening with the splendid attendance considering the unfavorable weather.

The devotional service centred around St. Andrew's Day and was led by presiding Mrs. A. Reagan assisted by Mrs. L. MacInnis and Mrs. H. Rose with Mrs. L. Williams at the piano.

Reports were given by the various secretaries. Mrs. F. Green had church calendars for sale. A bowl meeting will be held in Deseronto.

Articles for sales to be sent to Jim Churchill at Rawdon House in northern Ontario were on display. Mrs. J. Churchill of Tamboro gave an interesting talk of her Christmas spent there last year.

As has been the yearly custom money was voted to many worthy causes.

Those included articles sent to Rev. John Jeffery in a northern Saskatchewan parish and Christmas cheer baskets. Several bales of good used clothing have been sent to remote areas.

The closing meeting for the year will be a potluck supper next Monday.

Susanna's Family Fair

STARKLY BEAUTIFUL CARD TREE

Dear Susanna: What to do with a house (full) of cards at Christmas time besides filling every bit of mantel, table and windowsill space with them? Make a remarkable card tree.

Hide yourself out to the garden and back off a graceful limb about five feet in height — one that is complete with many smaller branches. Spray or paint it white (do this outside) and set it in a large pot or vase of earth in the corner of the hall or living room.

As each festive card arrives, punch a hole in the top left hand double corner and tie it to the tree. If you have reason for not mutilating the cards in any way, an alternative is to clip each one onto a branch with a gold, red or green clothespin. — Mrs. S. Maynard.

For added interest (as they say), or just for the heck of it, add a few ornaments. You'll find this lovely card tree won't compete with your Christmas tree, it will simply complement it. — SUSANNA.

Dear Susanna: Enclosed is a request or two for some of your pamphlets — which will be much appreciated.

In return, the only hint of value I can think of to give to others, is to read Susanna's Family Fare. — Mrs. Ward K. Cole.

Why, Mrs. Cole! . . . although, it's a sly one you are, less, knowing perfectly well, that valuable thoughts like that are worth their weight in hints! — SUSANNA.

(If you have any hints for running a successful household or any problems — write to Susanna, c/o this newspaper. Please enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope when requesting pamphlets.)

Ann Landers

Pregnant Bride Needs No Fertility Symbol

DEAR ANN LANDERS: What is the world coming to anyway? My 17-year-old niece, Geraldine, announced with pride that she is pregnant and is getting married next month. She wants a church wedding with bridesmaids and ushers — and her parents are going to let her have it.

Yesterday her mother told me that instead of a bridal bouquet Geraldine is going to carry a bouquet of wheat. This has been her dream ever since she saw it in a movie. Wheat is the symbol of fertility.

I say the girl has already proven she is fertile (everyone in town is talking) and she doesn't need to carry wheat as evidence. Please express your opinion. If she does this stupid thing, she will never live it down. — CONCERNED AUNT.

* *

DEAR AUNT: I agree that Geraldine will be the object of stinging ridicule if she goes ahead with her plans. She didn't ask me, however, and unless she has asked you, let's both keep out of it.

* *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am the mother of four sons (one set of twins) all in college.

After years of having our dinner interrupted by telephone calls from girls, I announced that I was sick of passing the telephone from one to another, with the cord dragging in the plates while the dinner gets cold. I asked the boys, why, if they want to talk to the girls, they don't do the calling. There was a shrugging of shoulders and this statement. "The reason they call us is because nobody is calling them."

It seems to me such a girl would appear less attractive to a boy, but nobody said so. It also occurred to me that girls who call boys are insecure and boys who encourage girls to call them major being pursued.

Our young men have part-time jobs along with their college and we are pleased with them, generally. But this thing about the girls bothers me. What is you opinion? — WEST COAST MOTHER.

DEAR MOTHER: So long as there are girls in the world, some of them will call boys. A boy's mother, however, can make a rule — no more cords dragging in dinner plates while the soup gets cold. The girl should be told to call back later or the boy call the girl, which is the way it ought to be in the first place, of course.

* *

DEAR ANN: I just read the letter from the teen-ager who wrote about her travelling-salesman father who is never home for anybody's birthday or for Mother's Day.

I was surprised that you lit into the person who wrote the letter instead of the father who really deserved to be told off.

My dad is the same kind of father and I think you were wrong to defend such an inconsiderate person.

If a man can't give his family any more time than that, he shouldn't get married. What do you have to say now, Ann Landers? — PENELOPE.

DEAR PEN: If your father hadn't decided to get married, what would that make you?

To tell people they shouldn't have done something they've already done is no solution. The travelling man has chosen that means of making a living and his family should accept his absence without complaint.

Cookie Recipes for Overseas

QUESTION: . . . I have a request for real Scotch Oatcakes and cookies one could send overseas . . . Mrs. E. McC.

ANSWER: I have mailed to you my recipe for Peanut Butter Cookies (also called Arkansas Travellers) which appeared here November 5th. The following recipe for German Moons was given in November, 1953. These keep and travel well and each should be wrapped separately in saran.

GERMAN MOONS (72 crescent cookies that keep and travel)

1 cup butter
1 cup icing (use fresh unsifted) sugar
1½ cups sifted all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon salt
1¾ cups ground unblanched (skin on) almonds, lightly packed.

Cream butter and icing sugar together thoroughly. Work in the flour, salt and almonds until blended. Now comes the part where you must sit down and patiently shape these by hand. Roll a piece of dough (about 1 tablespoon) between palms until you form a smooth roll with tapered ends. Form into crescent and place on unbuttered cookie sheet. We made 72 and while this is time - consuming you are rewarded if you make them uniformly neat and identical. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. about 15 to 18 minutes, turning pans around 2 or 3 times. Do not let them brown - they should be barely tinged with gold when done. If desired dredge with icing sugar. Please clip.

GENUINE SCOTCH OAT-CAKES

½ teaspoon baking soda
¼ to ¾ teaspoon salt
¾ cup butter or margarine or good quality shortening
9 tablespoons milk

Buy a package of fine ground Scotch oatmeal. If you cannot find it in your store grind rolled oats through the fine knife of your food grinder and meat sure. (This is hard to do as the rolled oats plug the knife.)

To ground oatmeal in bowl add baking soda and salt. With wooden spoon rub the butter thoroughly into them. Add milk to make a smooth pliable dough. Wrap in large sheet floured wax paper, press to flatten to about ¼-inch thickness and chill for about 30 minutes or until of rolling consistency. It must not be too cold. Roll out to less than ⅛-inch thickness or as thin as you can manage. Using a 7 - inch plate, place it on rolled out dough and cut out two rounds using plate as guide. Cut each round into four wedges from triangular quarters. Lift to buttered cookie sheet. Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. about 10 minutes or until they are barely tinged with gold on bottom. Roll remaining scraps of dough and shape and cut out as above.

Horticulturists View Slides of South Africa

The Belleville Horticultural Society members gathered at Corby Library recently to view slides and a film on the Republic of South Africa. Guest speaker for the evening was C. J. Becker, R.R. 1, Corbyville, formerly of South Africa.

Slides were shown of Kirstenbosch, on Table Mountain, the National Garden of South Africa. More than 1,200 acres of wild flowers bloom there and research of vital importance to international horticulture is undertaken. Kirstenbosch was established in 1913 for the collection, preservation, study and display of the indigenous flora of South Africa.

The national flower of South Africa is the protea. There are 1,400 distinct species of protea with such names as blushing bride, sulkerbos, pink cushion and peach protea. Other delightful flowers include the impala lily, red disa and strelitzia.

Fifty per cent of the 17,000 different types of daisies in the world are found in South Africa. Namaqualand in the North West Cape is a semi-desert during the summer, but becomes a fairyland of flowers after the rains. Namaqualand daisies are orange, buff, lavender, and shades of salmon. Roads and fields are covered with these gay little flowers.

The film, Dance in the Sun, depicting the wild flowers of South Africa was presented through the co-operation of the South African Embassy in Ottawa.

Successful Living

Architectural Hazards Faced by Handicapped

DEAR DORIS: Our Local Council of Women would like to see some thought given to handicapped people when plans are being drawn up for new buildings. I am a wheel-chair traveller myself and find myself frustrated time and again when it comes to getting where I want to be.

DORIS CLARK

Such things as doorways too narrow for my chair, heavy doors and high steps cramp my style. Ramps are rare, and seating facilities in churches and theatres almost never provide for folk like me.

Kind friends who would willingly lend a pushing hand, as it were, are still stymied by a long flight of steps. Telephones are usually out of reach. I pay taxes, but I am often barred from the use of a public resource I help to support. — WHEEL CHAIR.

DEAR WHEEL CHAIR: Your suggestion is supported in spirit by many Local Councils as well as by architects.

I am told that there are a quarter of a million people in Canada who face architectural barriers, that is, they cannot use facilities which are in common use. One in every seven Canadians has a physical disability.

Since more and more handicapped people are being trained for gainful employment, it behooves us to make it easier for them to get around. I'm with you all the way on this.

DEAR READERS: News and Views in Welfare (Newfoundland) contributes the following verses:

I am the Child.
All the world waits for my coming.
All the earth watches with interest to see what I shall become.
Civilization hangs in the balance.
For what I am the world of tomorrow will be.

I am the Child.
I have come into the world, about which I know nothing.
Why I came I know not.
How I came I know not.
I am curious; I am interested.

DEAR DORIS: I have two kids and sometimes when they are asleep I have time on my hands. This may sound silly but I like as a hobby working with a hammer and saw. I guess it just runs in the family. I especially like to fix and redecorate old furniture. — HANDY WITH A HAMMER.

DEAR HANDY: Many a gal would envy you your skill. And your furniture! Such a hobby is wonderful mental health insurance, too. I'm sending you the names of three helpful books. Would also suggest an inquiry of your nearest vocational school about night classes in woodworking. This could be fun.

Mrs. Nixon also spoke briefly on the Canadian Federation's participation in the Commonwealth Conference in Africa.

Quebec Challenges Ottawa Over Old Age Pension Responsibility

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Daniel Johnson's Union Nationale government of Quebec has mixed what seems to be a constitutional challenge into its new and sweeping blueprint of future action—and Ottawa already has begun to react.

The speech from the throne, which Thursday ushered in a new session of the Quebec legislature under the fresh-to-power Johnson administration, said the provincial government must have "sole responsibility within its territory for all laws and expenditures relating to old age security."

The speech, read amid traditional pomp and ceremony by Lieutenant-Governor Hugues Lapointe, told the lawmakers they will be asked to pass the legislation necessary for this purpose.

In Ottawa, Finance Minister Sharp commented Thursday night that action of old age pensions by Quebec would involve an area of activity in which the federal government has definite jurisdiction, even though that jurisdiction is not exclusive. The pensions now are administered mainly from Ottawa.

Health Minister MacEachen, responsible for old age pensions, said he's going ahead with the introduction of Commons legislation that would guarantee $105 a month as the minimum pension for recipients of old age benefits. The introduction would come today or Monday.

Mr. Johnson took over in Quebec City after his surprise election victory June 5 over the then-governing Liberals.

But there must be "a new constitutional order which will be the instrument not of an artificial unity but of a true alliance between two co - equal peoples."

The speech, opening the first legislative session since the election, promised help for Quebec students, farmers, fishermen, labor, industry, and in the area of housing.

There also will be efforts to bolster the arts, research, sports, tourism and immigration.

As the ceremonies of legislative inauguration unfolded in the legislative buildings, some 200 cheering, banner waving teachers demonstrated outside, despite a snowfall, against what they called government interference in contract negotiations between them and regional school boards.

The premier also was treated to the predictable demonstrations of hostility to his program on the part of opposition spokesmen.

Former premier Jean Lesage, promising vigorous criticism but no systematic obstruction in his capacity as leader of the Liberal opposition, denounced the whole speech as reactionary and picked especially on its promises of future action concerning old age security and the constitution.

The speech vowed action to change the Quebec's own constitution as well as the Canada-wide system.

Mr. Lesage wondered to what use such referendums will be put.

As for the promised action regarding old age security, the former premier said the Johnson administration will either have to obtain fiscal compensation from Ottawa or "it will have to impose double taxation" to achieve its stated end. Mr. Lesage heads an opposition of 50 Liberals against Mr. Johnson's contingent of 56. There are two independents in the 108-seat assembly.

Ontario Criticized For "Not Helping" Designated Areas

OTTAWA (CP)—Members of the Commons industry committee Thursday hit out at lack of action by Ontario in helping underdeveloped areas as they continued discussion of the area development agency and designated areas.

Mr. Andras and Leonard Hopkins (L—Renfrew North) both complained that where Ontario was concerned, the federal government was the only government doing anything about underdevelopment.

Areas not being helped were complaining about lack of action by the federal government but they "are not being helped because they are under provincial jurisdiction, not federal jurisdiction," Mr. Hopkins said. "Main witness at the two-hour meeting was W. J. Lavigne, commissioner of the industry department's area development agency.

Mr. Lavigne told the committee that complaints about designated areas stealing industry from nearby areas are not justified. Designated areas were attracting less than five per cent of industrial expansion in Ontario so there was plenty left for other regions.

Sunday School Lesson

Peace Is Not One-sided Affair

By Clarence W. Crawford

Man's universal desire is for peace, but he does not seem to be able to get rid of war. Why is this so? Can he ever learn to solve his international problems by peaceful means?

These questions are raised repeatedly in the Bible. Nowhere is man's universal desire for peace been better expressed than by a passage in Isaiah repeated in Micah. (Isaiah 2:4 and Micah 4:3-4) Both men dreamed of a day when nations "shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks." Yet both knew that war is inevitable unless people change their ways.

> The Uniform Sunday School lesson for December 4: "PROPHECIES OF PEACE." Isaiah 9:2-7; 11:1-9.

Obviously, it takes two to make peace. The Apostle Paul stated this very clearly when he said, "If possible, so far as it depends on you, live peaceably with all." (Romans 12:18 RSV) Both sides must be willing to come to the negotiation table. Both sides must be willing to arbitrate. Both sides must be willing to put the good of all ahead of the selfish advantage of a few.

Why do not people realize that? Why do they insist on having their own way regardless of the outcome? The answer, says the New Testament writer James, lies in the covetousness in the human heart. "What causes wars, and what causes fightings among you?" he asks. Then he answers his own question by saying, "You desire and do not have, so you kill. And you covet and cannot obtain; so you fight and wage war." (James 4:2 RSV)

As evidence of this, we are living told we are living in a three-fold revolution. First, it is described as a revolution of expectation. People who have or basic human rights, are disheartened by material needs covering that other people have these things, and now they want and expect them for themselves.

Second, it is described as a revolution of resentment. People often resent the very people they most try to copy. Much of the world resents the United States today because it is rich and powerful.

Finally, the revolution through which much of the world is passing is called a revolution of determination. People are determined to get what others have. They are determined to get their rights, even if they have to sacrifice peace to do it.

If people are even to be led into the paths of peace, it will take a different kind of leadership to do it. The prophets of Israel knew this. Instead of a conquering warrior riding a steed of war, Zechariah dreamed of a leader who would symbolize his spirit and mission by riding into the midst of "the people on the back of a lowly beast of burden. (Zechariah 9:9) Instead of one born in a palace of Caesar, Micah dreamed of a leader who, like David, would come from humble beginnings in Bethlehem. (Micah 5:2) And Isaiah, with the greatest insight of all, dreamed of one whose coming would be like a great light shining in the midst of people who are living in deep darkness. Under such a leader, the instruments of war would be burned for he would rule with justice and righteousness. (Isaiah 9:2-7)

Would people follow such a leader? Isaiah 53 gives the answer. Such a leader would not be attractive to many for he would demand that they change as well as their enemies. Instead of pride, he would ask for humility. Instead of resentment and hate, he would ask for forgiveness and love. Before they can have peace, men must love the things that make for peace more than the things that make for war. (Luke 19:42) They must see the futility of violence and war as a method for obtaining their legitimate wants and needs.

Christians rejoice in Isaiah's vision, and point to Jesus as its perfect fulfillment. In Him they see a heart empty of covetousness, and full of love for all mankind. Until men follow His precepts and reflect His spirit, they cannot enjoy a peaceful world.

Prices Committee

Firms Urged to State Soap's Cleaning Power

OTTAWA (CP)—Members of the Senate-Commons prices committee suggested Thursday that the government should set standard performance criteria for soaps and detergents and require manufacturers to state publicly how their products measure up.

Senator C. W. Carter (L—Nfld.) said the National Research Council should be able to prescribe a standard unit of cleaning power, stating on each package how many hundreds or thousands of units the contents contain. Housewives would then be able to compare price and value between one product and another.

George Williams, president and general manager of Procter and Gamble Co. of Canada Ltd., said if such a standard can be set, his company would go along with it.

"But I wish them luck," he added.

Mrs. Grace MacInnis (NDP—Vancouver-Kingsway) and Reid Scott (NDP—Toronto Danforth) complained about the odd-sized packaging in which tooth pastes are sold—1¼-ounce, 5¾-ounce, and 8¾-ounce tubes.

Mr. Williams said his company gain 4,000 to 5,000 letters a year from consumers but the size of tooth paste tubes has not been a subject of complaint.

Purchasers of Crest toothpaste can save 30 per cent by buying the family-size tube in place of the smallest tube, and 32 per cent by buying the largest size tube.

"But the housewife doesn't know that, unless you tell her," Mr. Scott said.

Asked whether he would abide by a federal government ruling on standard packaging, Mr. Williams said:

"Who am I to say to the federal government, we won't listen to you? Heavens above, we listen to them all the time."

He declared that higher prices for soaps and detergents on the retail market are clearly the result of price increases charged by retailers, not the manufacturers. The DBS index of soap and detergent industry selling prices was 114.9 in 1964 and 114.0 in September this year, he said.

"Don't you take any responsibility for the prices charged by retail stores?" Mrs. MacInnis asked.

"My dear," he replied, "we do take responsibility as far as we can. But in the final analysis we cannot do very much; we do not set retail prices and by law we cannot control retail prices."

John Lockwood, president of Lever Brothers Ltd., said his firm has sold 170,000,000 towels in packages of powdered detergent during the last 15 years in Canada.

He told the committee the premium in the box is so popular with housewives that when the company tried to sell the same brand at a lower price, without a towel, sales dropped so rapidly the company had to take it off the market.

Lever Brothers sells the towels and detergents under the Breeze brand name. It is the company's biggest seller, and the brand on which it makes its biggest profits.

The normal price is higher, to cover the cost of the towels, and the company can't get as much detergent in the box as it can with other lines not carrying premiums.

Newspaper Workshops Scheduled

NEW YORK (CP)—One Canadian and four U.S. universities will conduct workshops next summer to help elementary and secondary schools improve their instruction through regular use of the daily newspaper in the classroom.

Two-week sessions, for which academic credit is granted in the U.S., will be held at the University of Iowa, University of California, Syracuse, N.Y., University, and University of Georgia.

An affiliated workshop will be held at the University of Waterloo, for one week, July 23-29, and will not carry academic credit.

The project is sponsored in the U.S. jointly by the American Newspaper Publishers Association and the National Council for the Social Studies.

The Waterloo workshop will be co-sponsored by the Canadian Daily Newspaper Publishers Association.

Attendance at all five workshops is by scholarship grant provided by the participant's local daily newspaper.

Stanford Smith, general manager of the ANPA foundation, which administers the program, said the workshops are designed primarily to train local leaders. Curriculum directors, school principals and teachers would benefit most, he said, emphasizing that the workshops are not journalism seminars and are not aimed at high school journalism teachers or publications advisers.

"The focus of this program is to develop critical readers and better citizens," Smith said, "rather than to train writers."

Medicare: 165 MPs Miss Vote

OTTAWA (CP) — A Liberal amendment to delay medical care insurance by one year smashed through by eight votes in the Commons Thursday night after the move was bitterly denounced by David Lewis, NDP deputy leader.

The highly - contested deferment to July 1, 1968, was approved by a standing vote of 50 to 43, with the eight Creditistes abstaining or absent. About 165 MPs missed the crucial vote.

Interrupted frequently by a furious Finance Minister Sharp, Mr. Lewis (York South) charged that the "economic establishment" forced the minority Liberal government to drop its election pledge to introduce the massive federal-provincial medical plan on July 1, 1967.

The NDP critic described the postponement as typical of "the penny-pinching, orthodox, financial reactionary for whom it is never time to do this kind of thing.

"He cannot do it when the economy goes down," said Mr. Lewis. "He cannot do it when the economy goes up.

"He can never do it."

MEMBERS ABSENT

Most of the 305 MPs were somewhere as Mr. Sharp explained his reasons for the decision and Mr. Lewis struck back.

The amendment to change the target date was introduced by Stanley Haidasz (Trinity), who came close to resigning in September when the cabinet agreed to the delay.

The amendment was backed by 48 Liberals and J. A. Mongrain (Ind—Trois-Rivieres).

Conservatives, New Democrats, Social Credit MPs and Independent Gilles Gregoire (Lapointe) all voted against it and the Creditistes abstained.

The medical bill provides for federal payment of half the cost of provincial plans that meet federal requirements — coverage of physicians' services, portability, public administration and universality.

"We have now firmly determined that we will go ahead on that date (July 1, 1968) and we will accommodate all our other programs to that date," Mr. Sharp said Thursday.

Top priority now was being given to a bill to provide a minimum income of $105 a month for the aged and to extra spending on education.

This would involve a tax increase—expected to come in a mini-budget Mr. Sharp may produce by Christmas — and the country couldn't afford another costly program such as medical care now, he said.

WILL RAISE TAXES

Mr. Sharp suggested that another tax increase will be necessary when medical care goes into effect in 1968.

The decision to postpone the plan was based on the need for a stronger fiscal policy, minimum tax increases, a containment of inflation, and to meet the views of the provinces.

Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia now have medical care programs, although the approaches vary. Mr. MacEachen said Saskatchewan and Nova Scotia are discussing medical care with federal authorities.

Mr. MacEachen listened attentively as Mr. Lewis raked the finance minister over the coals.

At one point, Robert Muir (PC—Cape Breton North and Victoria) said the health minister appeared to be "thoroughly enjoying the tongue-lashing."

"To talk about medicare as an irresponsible action is precisely the characteristic of a financial reactionary that he knows himself to be," retorted Mr. Lewis.

"The philosophy I put forward, and that I would defend in this House and on the election platform, is that it is very much in the interests of this country that we should not do too much too quickly," replied Mr. Sharp.

WARNS OF INFLATION

"We should not run the risk of destroying the fabric of this country and exposing the poor, weak and defenceless to the results of inflation."

Mr. Meltzer on Real Estate
"What's Your Problem"

By BERNARD C. MELTZER

Dear Mr. Meltzer:

Our present home was fine when our boys were living with us, but now that they are both married, it is just too much house for us. It is completely paid for, so we are now thinking of building a new home, much smaller and much more modern.

We have a guaranteed selling price of $20,000 for the old house from the realtor (signed contract) and our new home is going to cost $25,000. Our problem is: Should we put the entire $20,000 on the new home, or just part of it, using the money from our old home for investments in stocks and bonds? — Mr. W. G.

Answer: In these days of high interest rates (6¼ per cent or more) on real estate mortgages, you might be better off to put the whole $20,000 in the new house.

The difference in monthly payments on a 30-year mortgage of $15,000 and $5,000 is considerable. Thus, you might be saving from having the lower mortgage to invest in stocks and bonds by the monthly investment plan so popular today.

• • •

Dear Mr. Meltzer:

After living in an apartment for three years, following graduation from college, my wife and I want to buy a new home. We've found a home which sells for $19,500 . . . making the monthly payments $137. This does not include taxes or insurance.

This arrangement is a 30-year mortgage which means that when the house is paid for, we will have spent $42,120. Why is it $19,500 home actually costs $42,120? — Mr. D. A.

Answer: It doesn't really. When a young fellow who is on the very up finds a home he wants — it usually is selling for considerably more than he would wish. That's because his future will put him in that kind of house, and he feels he might as well obtain it.

It is this "having it now" factor that you are paying for in addition to the cost of the house. Interest payments on the kind of mortgage you will need are not to be looked upon to be wasted money.

If your income climbs, which it is certain to do if you are a reliable and productive employee with a sound firm, you really won't have to pay all the interest anyway.

Be sure your mortgage is the kind which will permit you to make additional payments without interest penalty, and you probably will be able to pay for the house in much less than 30 years.

Factors far more important to you are the quality and durability of the house and the likely future of the neighborhood which will influence the continued value of the home. These days a remarkable number of young home owners are moved by their companies, or switch to other jobs and new communities. You want the house to retain its value to a good degree so you will not be penalized by such an opportunity.

• • •

Mr. Meltzer welcomes your letters and comments. Unfortunately he is unable to enter into personal correspondence with readers, but will attempt to answer as many letters as possible through his column.

World Seen Facing New Noah's Flood

LONDON (AP)—The head of Britain's family planning association today warned the world to restrain its excessive breeding—even if governments have to penalize people for having too large families.

Sir Theodore Fox, 57, writing in the medical journal Lancet, said the world is facing "a new Noah's flood—the flood of rising population."

He said that if people fail to do something fast almost overpopulation, "the old and horrible triad of war, pestilence and famine will return to control man."

"Contrary to what many people suppose," Sir Theodore wrote, "man is a fertile animal capable of multiplying rapidly. In the past half-century he has escaped from the high mortality that formerly kept his numbers down and he is replenishing the earth at a rate previously unprecedented."

BRINGS POVERTY

Sir Theodore said the first result of over-population is widespread poverty.

"But the old horrible controls of war, pestilence and famine are not inevitable. We can prevent them if we are prompt.

"Noah's new flood is advancing, but the remedy this time is not to build an ark for the few. It is to show the many how, if only they can refrain from becoming too many, they can live prosperously in the land the Lord has given them."

He said it had taken "hundreds of thousands of years" to reach the world's present population of 3,400,000,000 "and yet a second 3,400,000,000 would be added in only another 35 years."

"Where knowledge and means of contraception have been provided, but the public refuses to use that family limitation is in their interest, the argument can be strengthened by taxation—by taxes that encourage late marriage and benefit the small family rather than the large one, or even by bonuses for not producing children above a certain number.

"Unquestionably the more dangerous the situation is allowed to become, the nastier will be the remedies."

Outer Seven Will Meet

LONDON (AP)—When Britain and six of its trading partners formed the European Free Trade Association in 1960, one of their major objectives was to merge with the Common Market. They are still not sure how to do it.

Prime Minister Wilson will be on the spot Monday when the leaders of Denmark, Sweden, Norway, Switzerland, Austria and Portugal assemble in London to hear him explain what Britain's plans to enter the European six-country Common Market mean to them.

The meeting represents a first step in Wilson's reconnaissance into Europe. He clearly hopes to be able to hold out the lure of 90,000,000 customers in the seven countries of the free trade association being added to the Common Market's own 180,000,000.

The free trade association—called the Outer Seven now, because it becomes a completely tariff-free area for its members on Jan. 1. But it is only a halfway house to European unity. Even the bureaucratic sound of its name lacks the dynamism and idealism built into the Common Market.

As the Common Market has solidified, its members have increased trade among themselves by 43 per cent. In the early years of the decade, Outer Seven trade with the Common Market rose by 11 per cent a year. But this only equalled the average increase of all world trade.

Last year the increase was down to five per cent, and Britain's increase in trade with the Common Market was only two per cent. An Outer Seven report commented this "may indicate that the increasing tariff discrimination between the two groups is beginning to affect trade between them."

Quick Sentence

TORONTO (CP) — Leonard Lauzen, 32, of Toronto, was sentenced to 10 years in prison Thursday less than 24 hours after he was knocked out while trying to rob a downtown bank.

Lauzen pleaded guilty to attempting to rob the Parliament and Gerard streets branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia.

Masked but unarmed, he told the teller Wednesday: "Put your big bills in the bag."

Lauzen was felled by one punch from 220-pound truck driver Don Scott, who lives near the bank. Police will recommend that Scott be given a civilian citation.

Fruit Growers' Costs Rising Fast

VINELAND, Ont. (CP)—The retired director of the Vineland Horticulture Research Station Thursday predicted a dismal future for the Niagara Peninsula fruit industry.

Dr. W. H. Upshall told the annual meeting of the Niagara Peninsula Fruit Growers Association that costs to fruit farmers are rising faster than returns.

"Try as I do, I cannot be optimistic about it. You are caught in the mesh of economics," he said.

He partially blamed the growers for their own fate. He said farmers were planting poor trees, neglecting cultivation and picking too early.

"Perhaps the most urgent job of your marketing boards is the control of quality, the making of premature picking impossible or at least unprofitable," Dr. Upshall said.

The 200 delegates to the meeting defeated a resolution calling for a vote next year to assess the value of the Ontario Fresh Fruit Marketing Board.

Hellyer Faces More Battles

OTTAWA (CP)—Defence Minister Hellyer has won a preliminary skirmish in the battle of armed forces unification.

But he hasn't yet won the war.

There are four more scheduled engagements for the bill before it can be proclaimed law and the Conservatives are giving every indication that each will be protracted.

The four stages still to go are second reading — approval in principle, an examination by the Commons defence committee, clause-by-clause study in the House and third reading. These steps must be followed by Senate approval and royal assent.

With medical care and old-age pension supplements still before the Commons, Mr. Hellyer's hope of getting his bill through s e c o n d reading by Christmas seems to have evaporated already.

One Conservative who is a member of the defence committee said it is extremely unlikely that the unification legislation will receive final passage before next July 1.

WON FIRST ROUND

Mr. Hellyer won the opening round when he refused to yield to opposition demands that the bill be sent to committee before approval in principle.

But during that two - week fight in early November, Prime Minister Pearson promised that senior military officers who appeared before the committee last summer may be recalled.

The Conservatives are bound to take Mr. Pearson to on this promise because they have declared they want to find out to what extent testimony prepared by these officers was altered by Mr. Hellyer's office before it was presented to the committee.

Documents have been tabled in the Commons showing that substantial changes were made in the evidence of Rear-Admiral William Landymore, lince dismissed, before he presented his brief to the committee.

Nativity Pageant by School for Deaf Is Annual Communication Triumph

Currently in rehearsal is the school's annual pageant of the Nativity which, even relieved of all religious connotations, still conveys a warm message in any age of longing for lost innocence.

The OSD presentation is the traditional one-unchanged since medieval times — of the New Testament story.

What lifts it from the framework of the ageless miracle-play is the manner of its presentation.

Its players are either deaf, or hard of hearing in varying degrees.

Yet for years, the OSD production has established a tradition of its own — and won warm public response.

The handicaps in communication have long since been overcome by the pageant's participants and those who have directed them through the years.

Mr. Graham now is directing, coaching and accompanying the production for its annual public presentation Dec. 9.

The pageant has now been a seasonal OSD feature for about 15 years. This is Mr. Graham's second year as its co-ordinator.

"This shows what work can be done in the way of people who are quite deaf," said Mr. Graham, pointing out a young actor going through his paces onstage.

The young student was one of a cast of more than 50, who have learned the text of the play by heart, readying to expound it before their first public audience.

Mr. Graham chooses his cast from a representative group of students — those who are hard of hearing and can respond readily to conversation and those who are totally deaf with lesser degrees of articulation.

To aid the audience the text is projected on a screen as the ageless story unfolds onstage.

The prime object, of course, is the exercise in communication it provides for all students.

"It was written to meet the needs of following the Bible story and the language our students can cope with," explains Mr. Graham.

However, the script provides more than a common challenge in parts.

Frequently, Mr. Graham pauses between watching and cuing action onstage, to call a young actor aside and help him clarify a more difficult phrase.

The student repeats it several times until both are satisfied on enunciation.

Then Mr. Graham turns back to the scene at hand.

"We're awfully proud of the fact that we're getting our children to speak," he says aside. "Remember this is a school where we try to teach orally — if it can be done. This is one of the ways to do it."

"They work pretty hard in practice," he says.

He turns back to the stage and signals a group of young performers to start looking busy and react to the scene around them.

"The deaf mainly are quite passive," he explains. "You've got to show them. You've got to tell them: 'Come on you kids — use your props and get busy.' "

Students who are hard of hearing, seem to readily respond to music, he says.

As he played, several of the older boys clustered around the piano and joined in the carol being played as a musical bridge.

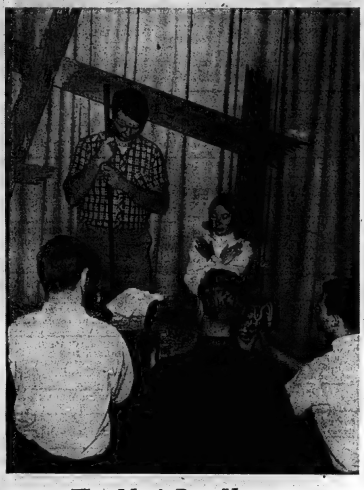
If any one thing epitomizes the annual production, it is this genuine concentration for the project at hand, a common denominator for all its young participants.



The students look forward each year to the production and highly regard being cast in a role.

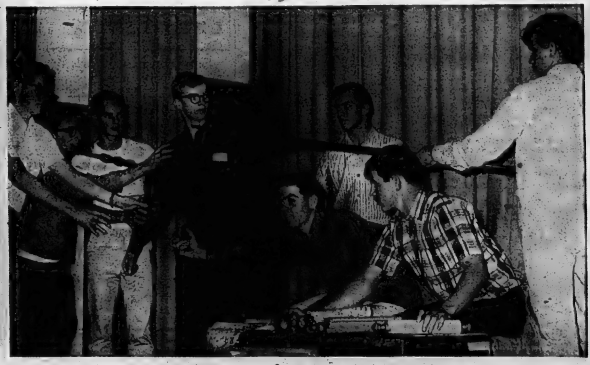
"They have great enthusiasm for it," says Mr. Graham. "They are very intense about it — and they have a great deal of reverance for it too."

An Impromptu Christmas Carol

While Kenneth Graham cues onstage action, students gather round in spontaneous rehearsal of pageant's music.

The Magi Pay Homage

A high point in the play when the Three Wise Men visit Mary (Carol Cleary) and Joseph (Bill Gregory) in stable at Bethlehem.



The First Tidings of Triumph

The Angel (Shirley Bruce) brings news of Christ's birth as fearful shepherds cower on Bethlehem hillside, before making their way to pay tribute at the manger.

"Uneasy Lies the Head...."

And King Herod (Alex Brill) worries over his crown with high priest (Erwin Sinn) and page (Derek Masters), as portents reveal miracle at Bethlehem.

A Taxpayer Files A False Return..

And action flares onstage as Caesar's tax collectors discover the falsehood. Cast of the OSD pageant numbers over 50 and crowd scenes like this link the Nativity episodes throughout the production.

Howe Hoists Hapless Wings!

SPORTS SLICES

By Geo. H. Carver
Sports Editor

Back in 1942 a patrol of United States Marines were under murderous fire from the Japanese in the jungles of Guadalcanal.

Three leathernecks lay seriously wounded in a foxhole. Over them stood a squat flat-nosed Marine corporal, his machine-gun spitting fire at snipers. Singlehanded he fought them and when the smoke of battle had cleared 22 enemy soldiers littered the terrain with their dead bodies.

Winning battles was nothing new to the corporal. But this one did not have the roar of the crowd, the accolade of hero-worshippers nor the kudos that go to world boxing champions.

He was Barney Ross, now 57, a terror of the boxing ring in the mid thirties when he won the world lightweight and welterweight championships.

But Ross fought and won another battle more important after than the glory and gold that goes with boxing championships.

In 1946 there were four torturous months in a government hospital when he conquered the narcotics habit which "slipped up" on him in the aftermath of malaria contracted in the South Pacific jungles.

Now he faces the most important battle of his life. He has been challenged by the Grim Reaper who enters the ring with cancer-loaded gloves.

He is said to have cancer of the throat, the end of a fantastically grim struggle in the life and times of the little iron man born in New York city as Barnet David Rosofsky.

He is in his corner, his seconds a world of admirers and wellwishers. Never a beaten fighter before he entered the ring, Barney sits on his stool confident, unafraid.

"Don't worry, I'm still in there swinging and I'll hit this thing low," he brags through a pain-racked throat. "I've had ten weeks of cobalt treatment and the doctors have arrested its spread."

But it's a lonely desperate battle, with no gloves, no referee and no rules for the less-hearted little guy who has heard the acclaiming roar of thousands.

I met Barney at a sports celebrities dinner in Toronto a few years back. The soft-spoken ex-champion smiled as he said, "I like Canada for a Canadian was one of my best friends and one of my best opponents."

He was referring to Jimmy McLarnin with whom he fought an epic three-fight series winning the welter crown from him in 1934, losing a rematch and whipping McLarnin in the third hrisling tangle.

The year before he won the lightweight title from Tony Canzoneri at Chicago and the same year outlasted Tony in a fierce rematch before 35,000 in New York's Polo Grounds.

He came to the end of his illustrious career in 1938 losing the welterweight title to Hammering Henry Armstrong. He retired after that fight.

Barney like many another boxing champion and near-champion did not know the value of money. He had many friends, too many of them of the hand-out type. When Barney retired his money was gone — but not his friends.

The other night probably the greatest galaxy of champions ever to assemble under one roof paid financial and moral tribute to the gallant ex-wartime champion. From Jack Dempsey to Canada Clay they gathered to honor a great former great.

Former featherweight kings Willie Pep and Sandy Sadler, who fought one of the greatest ring battles in history 17 years ago, staged a two-round exhibition.

Upwards of $11,000 will go to the Ross Fund to help with medical expenses. On December 11th Barney's Chicago friends will pay $50 each to attend a downtown theatre to watch film clips of Barney's old fights.

Ross was a true champion in every sense of the word. He faces the grimmest struggle of his life and has entered it confident, unafraid. He gave his best to his sport, his country and his friends. Who or how he will stand up or go down, as he always did, fighting to the bitter end.

Sportsmen, the world over, hope that when the grim struggle is ended, Barney's hand will be held aloft in victory.

GORDIE HOWE

It's been an old and oft-repealed saying around Detroit that as Howe goes so go the Red Wings.

The big right winger pulled the Red Wings out of a slump Thursday night when he scored what proved to be the winning goal and assisted on a goal by Pete Goegan to lead Detroit to a 4-1 victory over Boston Bruins.

Dean Prentice and Ray Cullen scored the other Detroit goals. John Bucyk spoiled Hank Bassen's bid for a shutout when he scored Boston's goal in the first period.

Howe, playing in his 21st National Hockey League season with the Red Wings, has been generally acknowledged as the greatest player of all time. In 20 seasons with Detroit, the six-foot, 201-pound native of Floral, Sask., has collected 624 goals and 781 assists for 1,405 points in 1,329 games—all NHL records.

His 21st season in the NHL is also a record. Only three other players have played 20 seasons in the NHL. They are Dit Clapper, formerly of Boston Bruins, Bill Gadsby, a defenceman with Detroit who retired at the end of last season, and Red Kelly of Toronto Maple Leafs, who is in his 20th season.

This year, Howe suffered a knee injury in training camp that slowed him up a bit and in 17 games, he had three goals and nine assists. But the Red Wings also got off to a slow start as they dropped their first four games of the season.

Howe's goal Thursday night was his fourth of the season and helped the last-place Red Wings snap a six-game losing streak. Boston remained in a tie for fourth place with Montreal Canadiens, three points ahead of Detroit.

The goal also gave Howe a total of 693, including playoffs.

Prentice shot Detroit ahead 1-0 at 8:17 of the first period but Bucyk evened the score just over three minutes later. Howe scored his winner at the 14-minute mark while Boston's Gilles Marotte was serving a minor penalty.

Cullen and Goegan, called up this week from Pittsburgh Hornets of the American Hockey League in an effort to help break Detroit's slump, put the game out of reach when they scored less than two minutes apart midway through the third period.

The loss was the third in a row for the Bruins, who were outplayed most of the game.

Sid Abel Happy With Hank

DETROIT (CP) — Coach Sid Abel isn't sure his Detroit Red Wings' success in the National Hockey League Thursday night can be traced to his recent player shakeup, but he's happy with goaltender Hank Bassen.

"He'll start Saturday against Toronto," Abel said after the Red Wings snapped a seven-game losing streak by defeating Boston Bruins 4-1 Thursday night.

Bassen, 34, a steady goaltender with Chicago Black Hawks and Detroit during most of his 12 professional seasons, got the call to fulltime duty last week.

Abel began his kill-or-cure measures after the Wings lost 8-3 to Boston Nov. 24. He benched regular defenceman Roger Crozier indefinitely.

The Wings lost 3-1 to Montreal Canadiens Saturday night so Abel took more drastic steps, demoting Andy Bathgate, Ab McDonald and Bob Dillabough to the minors.

Two replacements—Ray Cullen and Pete Goegan, both from Pittsburgh Hornets of the American Hockey League—scored in Detroit's victory Thursday.

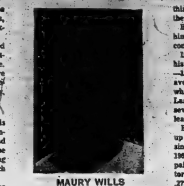
Dodgers To Bucs, Maury Not Sorry!

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Brushed from Los Angeles to Pittsburgh because he jumped the Dodgers' Japanese tour, Maury Wills says he is ready for "several more fine years" at his new position—third base.

"Leaving the Dodgers is by no means the end of the world," Wills said Thursday night in Spokane, Wash., after learning he had been traded to the Pirates for infielder out-fielder Bob Bailey, a onetime $175,000 bonus baby, and shortstop Gene Michael.

"I think of myself as a shortstop, but they have Gene Alley. He's one of the finest. I'm no stranger at third base. I should be able to have several more fine years playing third. You last a lot longer at third."

The deal, the second multi-player trade this week for the National League champions, came suddenly and unexpectedly.



The Dodgers had disclosed earlier in the week that the 34-year-old Wills was available. His abrupt and early departure from Japan angered Los Angeles owner Walter O'Malley and the decree went forth.

PITCHING QUESTIONABLE

The Pirates' pitching still is questionable for a pennant-winner, but a sound Wills—he's had leg problems—could prove the difference between finishing three games out of first, which they did last season.

"We think we have a chance to win the pennant next season, and we think Wills can help us do it," general manager Joe Brown said.

"He's good defensively, and

MAURY WILLS

* * *

he's great offensively. We've got some guys who can run, but he can help them, get them thinking about it more, show them by example."

Brown said the Dodgers told him Wills' legs were okay, a condition Wills confirmed.

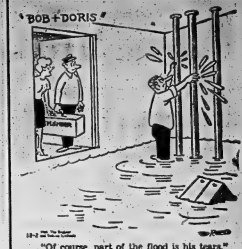
If so, Wills should improve on his 1966 record. He batted .273 —15 points under his life-time average—and stole just 38 bases while being caught 26 times. Last season was the first in seven that he didn't lead the league in stolen bases.

Bailey, 24, never has stayed, up to the Pirates' expectations since he signed with them in 1961 and became the biggest paid bonus baby in baseball history until that time. He batted .279 with 13 homers and 48 runs batted in last season.

PLAYED IN COLUMBUS

Michael, a 28-year-old rookie, played most of the season at Columbus where he was the International League's all - star shortstop. He hit .289 for the Jets, then batted .133 for the Pirates in 39 games.

Manager Walter Alston of the Dodgers said Michael or John Kennedy would be his shortstop while Bailey would play one of three places—first, third or the outfield.



"I'd like to say Michael's my shortstop — from what I've heard about him," Alston said.

"As for Bailey I'll find a place for him. He's a fellow who can provide zock."

The Dodgers acquired second baseman Ron Hunt for the New York Mets Tuesday—but Alston did not rule out the possibility that either Bailey or Jim Lefebvre would play first with the other at third. That would send Wes Parker from first base to the outfield.

Minor Hockey Results

Wings outlasted the Bruins 9-4 in a loss Belleville Minor Hockey Association midget game last night.

Packing the Wings' scoring punch were Drummond and Mitchell with a pair of goals each. Allore, Beecher, Macintosh, Doyle and Blatchford triggered the others. Huffman, Sero, Allore and Beecher had assists.

Gordie Howe, who scored what proved to be the deciding goal and assisted on another as Detroit Red Wings broke a six-game losing streak by defeating Boston Bruins 4-1.

Junior Macs Host Trenton Tonight!

Trenton Apple Kings will be looking for their first victory of the OHA Eastern Junior B season when they tackle the Quinte McFarlands here tonight. Game time is 9.00 at Memorial Arena.

The Macs, tied for second place with Cobourg going into the game, have had a week's layoff. It should have helped by allowing time for Billy Hopkins' groin injury and John Todd's banged up leg to heal.

Oshawa Crushmen, who lead the Macs and Cobourg by a lone point, play host to the Cougars in a key game tonight. Thus the Macs will take over second place all by themselves with a victory regardless of who wins in Oshawa.

They should not, however, consider the weakened Apple Kings a pushover. After player problems and 10 consecutive losses, the Kings are due. And with players like Tommy Dunn, Dan Dinn, Chuck Howard, Bob Benham and young goalie Gary Hunt, they are capable of an upset.

The Macs' starry left-winger Ron Riley, will be out for a few points. Latest league statistics show that Oshawa's Phil Solomon has caught Ron, each with 20 points, and Cobourg's Bryden Kilmeny is one behind with 19.

Tonight's game is the Macs' final in Belleville until January 13. They have three "home games" in Picton in the meantime.

$23,000 Bonanza For Champs

Thar's Gold In Them Thar Heels!

NEW YORK (AP) — Each player on the team winning the professional football championship may receive a bonanza of $23,000, a record for a team sport.

The pay for two games would almost double the all-time high of $12,794 for a baseball World Series winner for a minimum of four games. Los Angeles Dodgers of the National League set the baseball record in 1963.

When the National Football League and American Football League winners meet in the first Super Bowl at the 100,000-capacity Los Angeles Coliseum in early January, each winner will get a guaranteed $15,000 and each loser $7,500. That breaks down to $250 a minute for each of the winners.

If the NFL game is played in the big Cotton Bowl in Dallas, the winning share should match the record of $8,052 by Cleveland Browns for beating Baltimore Colts in 1964. The AFL share would be smaller but the league set an all-time high a year ago when Buffalo Bills got $5,189.

The mechanics of the Super Bowl game were announced Thursday night by commissioner Pete Rozelle after both leagues accepted unanimously the recommendations of a joint committee.

AWAITING TALKS

"The weekend of Jan. 7-8 or the weekend of Jan. 15 are the likely dates," said Rozelle. "We are not able to announce a definite date at this time until we have talked more to the television people."

It is possible that the new league title game will be played on the same date, Sunday, Jan. 1, as part of a unique doubleheader, starting in Buffalo or Boston and ending in Dallas or St. Louis.

As of now, the AFL game is to be played Monday, Dec. 26, in the home park of the Eastern Division winner. The NFL game is to be played Sunday, Jan. 1, in the home park of the Eastern Conference champs. It is expected the AFL date will be moved up to avoid a long layoff before the Super Bowl.

When a TV contract is signed for the Super Bowl, the receipts will be thrown into the entire pot. After the game expenses and rent, and the player pool have been taken out, 40 per cent of the remainder will go into the two league's player benefit pension fund. Each league office will get 15 per cent and each of the competing teams will get 15 per cent.

Five-Year Contracts

Riders Sign Clair, O'Quinn

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa Rough Riders have given coach Frank Clair and general manager Red O'Quinn a strong vote of confidence despite the team's 2-9-1 loss to Saskatchewan Roughriders in the Grey Cup last Saturday.

Both men have been given five year contracts to carry through to the end of the 1971 season.

The new contract is the third five-year pact Clair has had with the Eastern Football Conference team since he came here in 1956. He started with a five-year deal, then was given a second contract of the same duration after his 1960 Grey Cup victory. The second contract was renegotiated for a three-year pact two years ago.

President Sam Berger said the contracts signed Wednesday were "in the best interests of the club."

"I'm very happy with the contract and the whole deal," Clair said.

For O'Quinn, the new contract replaces a three - year agreement that still had one year to run. Club directors recently approved O'Quinn's request to purchase a share in the team at $50,000 and he will become a director as well as general manager.

Clair's biggest job in the off-season will be to find a new defensive coach to replace Bill Smyth. Smyth, who came to Ottawa with Clair 11 years ago, died a week after the eastern conference final against Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

"I won't get one like Bill, I know that," Clair said.

FRANK CLAIR

RED O'QUINN

"But I have to find one of his type . . . a dominant coach."

Clair said assistant coach Al Bruno will continue in his role of recruiter and coaching pass receivers.

"I believe he'll be getting a new contract."

Leading goaltender-Gallingwood (Game of Nov. 19)

Senior O.H.A. Statistics

GALT—A rookie goaltender is helping Woodstock Athletics make a charge for first place in the OHA senior "A" hockey league race.

Ray Emeson, a graduate of Ingersoll junior B, leads the goaltending race and has been the vital factor in a six-game winning streak which has propelled A's into second place. Emeson has given up only 11 goals in those half-dozen games.

The first year Woodstock net minder leads in the Turofsky Trophy race with a sparkling 2.43 goals against average, yielding only 34 goals in 14 games. He chained his first shutout during the past week, blanking Toronto, 3-0.

Chuck Jewell of the leading Collingwood Chimos and Ross Hurley of Guelph Regals are Keeson's closest pursuers and share the shutout lead with each. Jewell has a 2.81 average in 16 games while Hurley has a 3.00 mark in 11 starts.

Collingwood centre DeVe McComb also maintained his league scoring lead, widening his margin to seven points with two goals and two assists. McComb has 13 goals and 19 assists for 32 points.

Team mate Hec Brainard remains the goal scoring leader with 18 and is second in the points race with 25. McComb's 19 assists are tops and team mate Corby Adams of Barrie Flyers.

Argos, Cats Not Bidding For Quarter

TORONTO (CP)—Officials of Toronto Argonauts and Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the Eastern Football Conference said Thursday their clubs have not made bids for University of Florida quarterback Steve Spurrier.

They were commenting on a report from New York which said New York Giants of the National Football League may have to go as high as $500,000 to sign Spurrier, winner of the Heisman Trophy this year as the outstanding U.S. college football player.

The report quotes Spurrier's lawyer, Bill O'Neil, as saying there have been feelers from the Canadian Football League reported as high as $500,000.

Jake Gaudaur, general manager of the Tiger-Cats, said his club hasn't bid for Spurrier and he has not heard of any other club seeking his service.

Bob Moir, director of public relations for the Argos, said the same thing.

GORDIE HOWE'S HOCKEY

Roger Crozier, our goalie, always insists he doesn't get nervous on the day of a game until we have the team meeting at noon. I can say the same thing. From the time of the meeting until the opening faceoff I'm nervous.

I think this points up to the importance of the meetings. It focuses each player's attention on the game and everyone starts thinking about the job ahead.

There are several other important reasons, for having the team meetings at noon. For one, it gets everybody out of bed and this is not as trivial as it may sound. We have some notorious sleepyheads on our club, especially when we are on the road.

Getting the players up and to the meeting also gives each man the opportunity to check his body. By this I mean if some one is nursing an injury he will know by the time he gets to the meeting what condition he's in and if he'll be able to play or not.

On the road, the meetings are always held in Shift Work (Detroit manager Sid Abel) and when we are at home, of course, the meetings are always held in our dressing room at Olympia.

At the meetings, we go over the lineups and discuss our plans for the night. We also discuss the other team and decide what lines we'd prefer to have play against the lines they put out on the ice.

The meetings are really a coordination thing. It gets us thinking like a team . . . and it gets us out of bed.

An hour or an hour and a half after the meeting . . . the meetings usually last from 20 to to 30 minutes . . . we have our steak and then, if we are on the road, go back to our rooms to read or watch television or have a nap. If it's a 8 o'clock game, we start assembling in the lobby of the hotel between 5.30 and 6 to have a cup of tea and then we are off to the rink.

New NHL Division

Talks Central Scout System

OSHAWA (CP)—Wren Blair, general manager of the Minnesota club that will begin operations in next season's expanded National Hockey League, says the new six-team division will probably adopt a central scouting system within the next few years.

"The six new clubs will probably hire a four-man team, which will rate the 73 junior players that become eligible in June each year for the NHL draft," Blair said from his home here Thursday night.

Under the terms of a new NHL-Canadian Amateur Hockey Association agreement, professional-hockey clubs no longer sponsor amateur clubs and have no priority rights to an individual player.

When a player reaches 20, he will enter the universal draft pool and professional clubs are allowed to bid for him during the June draft meeting.

The first universal draft takes place in June, 1967, but Blair expected that most junior players won't be eligible because their priority rights were bought by professional clubs before the NHL - CAHA agreement was signed.

"The universal draft will go into effect only in theory next June," Blair said. "It will be two or three years before all junior players become eligible."

Under the universal draft system each of the 12 NHL clubs will be allowed six draft choices during each draft.

Blair, chairman of a three-man committee now studying the central scouting system, said under the plan the four scouts "would rate each player and provide each of the six new division clubs with their ratings monthly."

No Olympics Hockey?

CAHA Boss Not Worried

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canadian Amateur Hockey Association officials showed no concern Thursday over a suggestion that hockey, among other sports, may eventually be dropped from Olympic competition.

Avery Brundage, president of the International Olympic Committee, said in Hayward, Calif., Thursday that sports "with a vast commercial development . . . must be dropped."

Fred Page of Vancouver, president of the CAHA, said:

"I don't think Mr. Brundage's statements are anything to be alarmed about. We would have our world championships every year whether they were part of the Olympics or not.

Gordon Juckes, secretary-manager of the CAHA, in a statement from his home in Melville, Sask., said:

"I wouldn't like to see hockey dropped from the Olympics, but if the game were dropped, the International Ice Hockey Federation almost certainly would hold International tournaments every year instead of three years out of four."

Trouble Getting Courses

Gals' Golf To Be Tougher

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario women's Championship golf tournaments are going to get shorter and tougher.

"It's because of the trouble we're having in obtaining courses for tournaments," Shirley Woodley, secretary-treasurer of the Ontario branch of the Canadian Ladies Golf Association, said Thursday.

"Golf club members, paying higher and higher fees, are reluctant to give up their course for a solid week."

She said the new format was passed at an executive meeting this week and announced to the branch's annual meeting Wednesday.

It will make championship play harder for good players, eliminating various flights for higher handicap golfers and limiting the over-all field to 96.

For instance, entrants in the provincial open in July will play two 18-hole qualifying rounds Monday and Tuesday, with the top 32 advancing to match play. The remaining 64 play a third and final medal round Wednesday.

It means the two finalists will play seven rounds in five days instead of a previous maximum of five or six.

"Under the new system we will need the tee for three days, plus about 1½ hours Thursday, and no more than an hour Friday," said Miss Woodley.

Marlene Stewart Streit, Pontiac, Que., golfer, was given a standing ovation at the annual luncheon and presented with an engraved 14-carat gold charm, set with emeralds and garnets in a replica of the Ontario branch crest.

"She's won all the cups there are to win," said Ontario president Mrs. Bruce Mimms.

Houston Or Detroit

Garden Rejects Clay Fight

NEW YORK (AP)—Houston and Detroit figured today as the most likely spots for the proposed Cassius Clay-Ernie Terrell heavyweight championship fight after Madison Square Garden officials rejected Clay's terms.

The Garden Thursday gave up hope for staging the bout, saying Clay's price was "too steep.

"It's a big disappointment to us," said Harry Markson, director of the Garden. "We very much wanted to promote the fight, but under the terms asked by Clay . . . it wouldn't be feasible for the Garden. We would have to take all the investment risk and wind up with only 1⅓ per cent of the ancillary rights."

Markson said Clay wanted a guarantee of $250,000 against 30 per cent of the live gate and 33⅓ per cent of the theatre-television, radio and movie rights.

Markson said the Garden offered Clay $200,000 against 30 per cent of the live gate and 50 per cent of the ancillary rights.

The Houston Astrodome, scene of the Clay-Cleveland Williams fight, is considered a desirable location because the big theatre television areas of New York, Los Angeles and Chicago would not have to be blacked out. Maple Leaf Gardens in Toronto has also been mentioned as a possible site.

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP)—A conservatively dressed young man robbed the Mayfair branch of the First National Bank of $1,400 while his taxi driver waited outside, unaware that his passenger was an armed thief. He took the man another three blocks and was tipped 70 cents on a $2 fare.

Theatre Guild Mounts Bright Vehicle to Open New Season

By HARRY MULHALL

Belleville Theatre Guild has brought up the lights on another year of community theatre — and the first production unveiled indicates a promising season.

With the Seven Year Itch at Belleville Collegiate last night, it couldn't have mounted a brighter vehicle with which to head into the new season.

The Itch is sufficiently sophisticated in material and technique to challenge the Guild's resources, without bearing down heavily on its audiences, allowing them to settle comfortably down to another program of local theatre productions.

The comedy by George Axelrod, already has shown its 100 per cent proof of audience appeal in a long Broadway run and later as a motion picture.

The story line follows the complications of a husband left in his own thoughts when his wives while, his wife is on vacation. All is normal until his thought processes start to take extreme turns, graduating from wishful dreaming to wild imaginings, despite his attempts to control them.

His worst fears are realized when his best imaginings inevitably come true — thanks to the inevitable girl upstairs.

For its director, the Guild invited Harry Plummer of Cobourg to preserve the Itch. In turn, Mr. Plummer assembled a cast of newcomers and longtime Guild players.

PLEASANT ADDITION

Heading the latter group, and the pleasantest surprise of the evening was Susan Brickwood, still in her teens and appearing for the first time in a Guild presentation.

As the girl upstairs and the unwilling source of mental affliction to her married neighbor, Miss Brickwood charmed her audience not only with her personal appeal, but a poise that indicates the Guild has found a new, talented figure.

However, it is to Peter Kitcher, as Richard Sherman, the husband victimized by his own imagination, falls the supreme challenge of the evening.

He never leaves the stage; he has no time to relax throughout the play. Thus, as its focus, he bears the responsibility for the whole production's triumphs or tribulations.

Opening night performances are notorious yardsticks for drawing comparisons — particularly in the crucial matter of pace. It affects all cads and all performances.

The pace in a number of scenes, especially those opening the play could bear a little more attention for overall effectiveness. Mr. Kitcher — especially in voice.

A little less emphasis here and there, the odd line thrown away, could provide the needed contrasts, tightening a character performance that otherwise unquestionably meets the demands of the production.

MORE

PACE SLOWS UP

Similarly for George Brickwood and John Webster. Mr. Brickwood's role has opportunities for a delightful cameo as a psychiatrist in which more character contrast would draw even warmer audience response than last night.

However, the psychiatrist is a real person. Mr. Webster's conduct as an author is only the figment of Sherman's thoughts, or rather his rapidly-degenerating control of them. Thus a broader touch could effectively hand him his scene.

Pace again could also be used with better result by an actor who isn't seen, but heard. As Sherman's disembodied conscience, Colin Robbins could take his scenes without showing his face by more commanding, commanding delivery.

The smaller roles are headed by Ruth Vanner and include Heather Wiens, Margo Hall, Mary Mulvihill, Theresa Holman, Karen Williamson, Pat McGregor and Al Hall.

However, those up front aided by the Guild's backstage personnel have come through with a polished production as an obvious contribution.

The play, although set in the conventional three-act framework is a single set, weaves a pattern of events separate in time and distance, in reality and dreams.

PLAY WELL DIRECTED

To gain the needed action dimensions, the author makes skilful use of lighting area.

After a few minor first night adjustments, the technicians delivered the play its technical pace, weaving the actors in and out of areas as clever as they could flick their switches.

Finally, the most important figure, and the one never seen — the director.

Mr. Plummer, although a former Bellevillian, a veteran director at the Cobourg Opera House, comes to this end of the region for the first time in community theatre work.

The ease with which his cast projected the production's first night performance showed his talent and grasp of theatre. The Guild to its advantage could invite him to use it further in future Belleville productions.

The Itch was a healthy sign of maturity in Guild enterprises — displaying an ability to cope with the complicated demands of contemporary stage production.

The evening also revealed the message might be getting across to its audiences. There were more than 200 at the opening night — not enormous, perhaps, but a heartening improvement from other years in which Bellevillians have shown a reluctance to attend first nights.

If that's a sign that local theatre in Belleville is at last being taken as a serious community project the Guild can take a bow all round.

Madoc Junction

MADOC JUNCTION — Mrs. C. Bridges returned home from Belleville Hospital last Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Fitzsbett were dinner guests last Sunday of Miss Shirley Eggleton and Mr. Morley Eggleton of Foxboro.

PRESENTATION PARTY

A large number of neighbors and friends in the community gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Saunders on Saturday night to honor Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Board (the former Gordon Chambers) who were recently married.

Mr. D. Detlor was master of ceremonies and presided over the program, which opened with a round of community singing with Mrs. Bruce Stapley at the piano.

Humorous readings were given by Mrs. William McMullen and Mrs. Russell Sills.

An address of appreciation was read by Mrs. Jack Hall.

PARKING BAN

NAPANEE — The overnight parking ban on Napanee streets went into force at midnight, November 30. The bylaw making it illegal to park between 1.00 a.m. and 6.00 a.m. was passed to facilitate snow removal, but will be enforced strictly, the police say, even though snow is not yet a problem. A parking ticket will cost the owner $3.00 in addition to having to pay for the towing fee. Cars found on the street during the 1.00 to 6.00 hours will be towed to a service station lot.

ROTARY MEET

Donald White of the Ontario Hydro regional office in Belleville, showed slides of floodlit buildings to the members of the Rotary Club at the weekly luncheon meeting. As these slides were coloured being given to floodlighting the Cenotaph and certain public buildings as a Centennial project, this was a timely subject for the Rotarians. It was noted that buildings which attract little attention during daylight hours, have their beauty brought out by floodlighting.

Mr. White was introduced by Donald Walters chairman of the Public Utilities committee, and thanked by Harry Vine, a member of the Commission.

SANTA PARADE

Santa Claus will arrive in Napanee Saturday, under the wing of the Napanee and District Junior Chamber of Commerce. His entourage will precede him, leaving the Prince Charles School at 1.00 p.m., and proceeding west to York St., east down Dundas to its intersection with Bridge, west on Bridge to Centre until it reaches Graham St. and will disband at the school. It will consist of at least 20 floats and four bands, with clowns and horses galore.

Solve Smelly Poser

MELTON MOWBRAY, Eng. land (CP)—Garbage collectors in this Leicestershire town refused to empty a man's garbage bin for two months because it was six inches taller than the regulation size and therefore heavier, they said. The owner refused to buy a new can and the rubbish piled up. Finally, a council official bought a smaller bin out of his own money to prevent the squabble developing into a serious dispute.

New Police Chief Takes Over Duties

NAPANEE — Napanee's new police Chief, Cecil L. Boyer, took up his duties Thursday morning, December 1. He comes to Napanee after 14 year experience in the Peterborough Police Department, two years as Chief of Police in Alliston, and 18 months as chief in Gravenhurst.

Chief Boyer is married, has a married daughter and an eight-year-old daughter. He is looking for a house in Napanee so that he can bring his family here as soon as possible.

Chief Boyer was chosen from 20 applicants, and one thing which swung the decision in his favor was his interest in youth and youth activities. While on the force in Peterborough, where he reached the rank of detective, he founded the Petes Lee erborough Boys Club, and in Gravenhurst directed the Police Boys Club. While not interested primarily in organized sports, he does encourage boys to take an active part, but he also believes in such things as hiking. Young people have energy which must be worked off somehow, and if they are not directed, will get into mischief.

He is stopping up organization of the office and standing orders were posted the morning of his arrival. The work sheet is made up for three months, he added. He finds it difficult to work in such cramped quarters, however, and hopes for a new set-up soon which will be big enough for the work of a six-man force, and also give some opportunity for privacy for people who come to

Monsignor F. J. Spence Honored by Parishioners

MARMORA — Rt. Rev. F. J. Spence, who has recently been elevated to the rank of Domestic Prelate, was honored on Sunday in Sacred Heart Parish, Marmora.

To commemorate the occasion, after the 9.30 a.m. Mass a presentation was made on behalf of parishioners of a gold chalice and a purse of money. Presentations were by Mrs. Breen O'Connor, president of the C.W.L. and Douglas Lynch, president of the Holy Name Society.

In the address to Monsignor Spence given by James Shannon, he said the honor conferred on him is his alone "but the coincidence that he should be our pastor at the time brings a reflected honor to this Parish."

"So while we rejoice for your sake" he said, "we also harbour in our hearts a small secret satisfaction at the thought that our parish has been honored too. When we recall the long line of devoted priests whom the church authorities have sent to minister to our spiritual needs during a period of 141 years, the impact of your elevation to an officer of the Papal Household is even greater, as never in the history of the parish has one of our pastors been so honored while actually serving as parish priest. In accepting this chalice, perhaps in the years to come when you celebrate the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass, it will serve as a silent recurring prayer both for you and for us."

In expressing his appreciation, Monsignor Spence used the simple words "Thank You" with the hope that the congregation would realize his sincerity. He said he had made a special point of reference to his appointment in the hope that the parish would not feel obliged in any recognition to it.

He referred to the office of monsignor as being an honorary one and although this office is personal it not only belongs to him, but to the parish in Marmora.

In the afternoon residents of the village and area were greeted at a reception and tea in the Parish Hall. Welcoming the visitors were Monsignor Spence and his mother, Mrs. William Spence, Mrs. O'Connor and Mr. Lynch. The chalice was on display at the hall entrance and a guest book was signed by visiting friends.

Tea and refreshments were served by members of the CWL at small side tables. Pouring tea at the head table which was centred with beautiful baskets of 'mums, were Mrs. Donald Shannon, Sr., Mrs. Charles O'Connor, Miss Gertrude Maloney and Mrs. E. D. O'Connor.

Clergy who called during the afternoon to congratulate Monsignor Spence were Rev. Robert Stewart of St. Paul's Anglican Church and Rev. Douglas Miller of St. Andrew's United Church at Trenton, Father F. J. O'Neill, Madoc, Father J. F. McGarvey, Stirling, Father A. C. Hendrie, Kingston, Father T. J. Raby, Kingston Mills and Father N. V. Hamilton, Read.

Opportunity Knocks For Quinte

New Technical School Could Spark Expansion

By DONALD M. SOUTTER

The Quinte district has been marking time for the past few years.

It has been looking for the order which would send everyone to "action stations."

One possibility which could do the trick would be the location of the proposed Eastern Ontario College of Applied Arts and Technology in the Quinte area.

The Ontario council of regents has stated it wishes an institute to be ready to start next September. An enrolment of 700 students is predicted.

The million dollar a year plum goes at first to the area which can provide 50,000 square feet of unoccupied space which can be converted into classrooms and administrative facilities.

In subsequent years will come the decision where the permanent buildings will be located.

It means the seven members of the college's board of governors representing the area from Napanee to Brighton, Prince Edward to North Hastings, must be convinced a united front is being presented by the Quinte area.

Sectional rivalries must be forgotten, for the benefits of a potential $2,000,000 annual expenditure would spread to all parts of the area.

The location of a technical school in proximity to the Canadian Forces Base, Trenton, would have an obvious benefit to the children of air force personnel who are technically inclined. It's a factor which should be of prime concern to federal representatives in the area.

Many of the Quinte district's brighter students leave for other centres which have post-secondary institutes. After college training a large percentage fail to return.

If the Canadian brain-drain is of concern nationally, then the regional exodus should be of vital interest to provincially-elected representatives.

The idea of regional interests coming first is not new. The tourist industry has done it with excellent returns.

Ten years ago, when the CNR was re-organizing across Canada, the regional office in Eastern Ontario was originally scheduled to be located in Kingston.

Instead, through a combination of shortsightedness on the part of Kingston and a receptive mood on the part of the Quinte district, a million dollar industry located in Belleville.

It would be a shame if the reverse were to happen now to the Quinte area.

Santa and His Fairy Princesses

Santa, Jack Frost Arrive Together

Santa blew into Belleville this morning accompanied by Jack Frost, a North Pole neighbor.

By that time the temperature had reached four above the all-night low of zero.

The body - tingling temperature had one effect.

More than 30 floats, pipe bands, brass bands, marching bands and a clown band, were lavishly sprinkled with marching majorettes and capering clowns, who spilled through the downtown area in advance of the jolly gent's sleigh.

Only three weeks ago it looked as though the parade might be the poorest in its 13-year-old history. Since then the spirit of Christmas seemed to reach a community turning point and volunteer help turned out to assist.

Its eleventh-hour effectiveness was apparent today as crowds flocked in from around the Quinte district to view the 1966 spectacle.

The crowd saved its most spirited salute of all for the end — when Santa himself made his appearance.

City police moved in extra crowd and traffic control details before the throngs began moving into downtown Belleville.

The parade — organized by a special committee headed by city firefighters — went off without incident.

An hour after he had arrived, Santa returned to the parade's starting point, then took his leave of Belleville — until the night before Christmas.

Right of 40 MPs to Their Seats Said Jeopardized by CBC Fees

OTTAWA (CP)—The right of a number of MPs to sit in Parliament may be questioned next week on the basis of a prohibition against an MP talking public money for any transaction.

The number of MPs involved is unknown although a news report by Patrick Nicholson in the Oakville, Ont., Journal-Record put the number at 30 or 40.

They are said to have accepted fees from the publicly-owned CBC for radio or television appearances.

The Senate and House of Commons Act says any MP who accepts public money for a transaction—other than his $18,000-a-year salary as MP—must vacate his seat in Parliament.

The act also provides a penalty of $200 a day for every day he is a member. The money would be paid to anyone who wins a civil lawsuit on the basis of his ineligibility.

An informant said the issue may be raised publicly early next week in the Commons, where it has been simmering quietly for some time.

Written questions were submitted to the government in the Commons last May by Dr. Lewis Brand (PC—Saskatoon) asking whether such payments had been made to cabinet ministers. The questions were answered and Dr. Brand submitted another set of questions in September. These also were not answered.

Opposition leader Diefenbaker said in commenting on the Oakville report there is reason to believe MPs have accepted CBC fees and some want the government to introduce retroactive legislation to regularize their status.

"Retroactive legislation of that kind can't be justified in any way," he said.

"The people of Canada are in no mood to add to the sources of income available through the government to MPs."

One possibility mentioned by the Oakville Journal - Record was that the government might convention was the place to discuss policy. ☆

The Conservative-produced platform will be presented by Mr. Hamilton and other MPs to Conservative urban committees that Mr. Hamilton is trying to establish in Toronto, Montreal and Vancouver.

The Toronto committee is operational, but has not met since June. Vancouver and Montreal committees are less advanced. Mr. Hamilton has pushed for the development of these urban committees to maintain caucus

Conservative Members of Commons Plan To Set Party Policies Which Convention Ignored

OTTAWA (CP) — The Conservative party's federal MPs took on a policy-making role Friday with disclosure of plans to...chart directions at a pre-Christmas meeting.

Announcing the move, Alvin Hamilton, MP for Qu'Appelle said it was made necessary by the failure of the Nov. 13-16 annual meeting of the party association to do the policy job.

As a result, the federal caucus, made up of MPs and senators, will meet Dec. 19 and 21 at the party's national headquarters in Ottawa to discuss "75 per cent of the policy spectrum."

Specifically excluded from the closed-door discussions will be defence, external affairs and federal-provincial relations. But the MPs will tackle agriculture, labor, immigration, urban affairs, finance, trade and health matters.

The November convention gave short shrift to policy matters, wrangling instead over the leadership of John Diefenbaker.

The Conservative Association president, Dalton Camp, won the day when delegates favored a leadership convention next year, placing Mr. Diefenbaker's 10-year hold on the job in jeopardy.

Mr. Hamilton said the party was left in a policy vacuum by the November convention.

"Ordinarily, the association meets to give direction on policy," he said. "This time we didn't get much of a chance to discuss it."

He said Mr. Camp, the top man in the Conservative association, had not been notified of the caucus plans to assume a policy role. But Mr. Diefenbaker was acquainted with them.

Mr. Hamilton said he recognized that the association, made up of various party elements including the caucus, had the final say on policy.

The caucus - drafted policy would hold a "high level of authenticity, however, until it is approved by the association."

Mr. Hamilton gave no indication when association approval might be forthcoming. He doubted that a leadership

Wilson, Smith Talk All Day In Secrecy

GIBRALTAR (CP) — Prime Ministers Wilson of Britain and Ian Smith of Rhodesia resumed their talks today aboard a British cruiser in the Mediterranean, apparently still searching for a solution to the Rhodesian crisis.

The two leaders had lengthy discussions which lasted until midnight Friday.

There was no word here or in London on either the mood or the progress of the talks.

A statement issued early today from Wilson's official residence in London said only that talks were old and would continue today.

The vessel slipped briefly back into the outer harbor here Friday night. A launch, probably carrying the small party from London, went out to meet it.

The talks, amid reported discontent both in London and Salisbury, are seeking to end the crisis started 13 months ago when the all-white regime of Smith declared independence from Britain. Britain is demanding guarantees of steady progress toward majority rule by the 4,000,000 blacks of the country but Smith still regards as a colony.

No time has been officially announced for the talks. But preparations here indicated the two leaders would return home today. Two Britannia aircraft were on standby at Gibraltar airport.

It is known Wilson wants to be at Chequers, his country residence, Sunday night to entertain ministers from European Free Trade Association countries.

Wilson was reported to have assured a small group of key Labor party MPs a few hours before leaving London there would be no question of Smith's returning to Salisbury to consult with his cabinet on the terms. It was said Smith was told he must enter the summit with full power to negotiate and that no further delay would be accepted by Britain.

Many hard-line members of Smith's government and party were reported to be worried just how far the prime minister was prepared to go in pacifying Britain.

BC Claims Continental Shelf, May 'Colonize' It

VICTORIA (CP)—British Columbia laid claim Friday to a vast area of the ocean floor off its coast by passing a cabinet order declaring provincial ownership of the Pacific continental shelf.

The claim brought immediate reaction from federal authorities, who said the move does not alter in any way the current Ottawa - Victoria dispute over who owns what off the coast.

Attorney-General Robert Bonner said the order means that the province's area of 366,255 square miles will be increased by as much as 30 per cent. He said the shelf claimed extends 100 to 300 miles out into the Pacific Ocean.

He said that if the province cannot uphold a legal claim to the continental shelf it might "colonize" the continental shelf.

He said the province is anticipating "a considerable subocean land use by people who will equip themselves with a means of living beneath the ocean."

However, oceanographic experts usually calculate the end of the continental shelf at about 200 fathoms, and on that basis it extends between 30 and 100 miles off the B.C. coast—and in places off Vancouver Island, only a few miles oceanward.

The order claimed for British Columbia the ocean floor "beyond the territorial sea belonging to British Columbia where the continental shelf admits of use or exploitation."

The order gave to the province Jurisdiction over all mineral and other resources "of the sea bed and sub-soil."

British Columbia and Ottawa have long been locked in an argument over who owns offshore mineral rights—especially in view of current offshore drilling for oil. Companies now drilling are operating under licences issued by both Ottawa and Victoria.

This is the first time the province has asserted a claim to the sea bed so far into the Pacific Ocean.

Canada Owns Shelf, Jurisdiction Before Court

OTTAWA (CP) — Sovereignty over the continental shelf has been assured Canada since 1958, but whether it falls under federal or provincial jurisdiction is to be decided by the Supreme Court of Canada in February.

On Friday, without waiting for the court decision, British Columbia's Premier W. A. C. Bennett announced that the shelf on the Pacific coast was the sole property of his province.

The move, which adds some 22,000 square miles to B.C.'s 366,255 - square - mile area, brought an immediate challenge from Prime Minister Pearson who argued that changing provincial boundaries was a federal right.

Resources Minister Jean-Luc Pepin said the B.C. move did not affect plans to have the matter decided by the Supreme Court. The case was originally scheduled to be heard at the present Supreme Court sittings, but it now appears it will not be dealt with until the February session.

The Geneva Convention on the Continental Shelf, ratified now by 22 countries, was passed in April, 1958. Signatories include Britain, the United States and Soviet Russia. The convention gives Canada control over the shelf for exploration and the exploitation of natural resources.

In Hamilton, Prime Minister Pearson said the matter of provincial offshore claims is before the Supreme Court of Canada and "this decision at this supreme Court will take precedence over any of Mr. Bennett's orders-in-council."

Federal Resources Minister Pepin said the move "doesn't change the situation. It is being debated at the moment."

Premier Robert Stanfield of Nova Scotia said his province also claims rights "far beyond the 12-mile territorial limit" but he said his province has not formally stated claim to the whole continental shelf the way B.C. has.

Mr. Bonner said B.C.s action was "not made with the offshore dispute in mind," though he admitted it might have some effect on it.

The Supreme Court of Canada has delayed four times a reference in it by federal and provincial governments over constitutional jurisdiction of undersea resources. The reference probably won't be heard until February.

Stepping Out for Santa in Belleville This Morning Called for Majorettes, Makeup and Merry Make-Believe Floats.

For 200 Majorettes It's No Longer Mini-skirt Weather

A few hundred Belleville girls will attest to the fact that it is no longer mini-skirt weather. They are the girls, ranging in age from about four to 18, who marched for almost an hour down Front Street today, clad in scanty majorette costumes, and paving the way for Santa Claus.

The bitter four-degree weather even forced many parade spectators in doors, and most of the display windows of Front Street stores indicated that the interiers were jammed tight with viewers.

Some of the tiny marchers strutted along, their mothers following along the sidelines carrying what must have been warm - looking coats. A few had to drop out, tears streaming down their cheeks because they couldn't complete what they had waited for all year.

Their viewing counterparts, several thousand of them, were bundled from head to toe, themselves looking like the well - wrapped Christmas presents they expect from Santa. The youngest parade-watcher on hand appeared to be a tender six months, the youngest at heart, perhaps 80.

Despite the raw weather, the majorettes never appeared to lose their poise, most of them wearing pleasant smiles that belied their discomfort.

Following the parade, the small participants adjourned for hot chocolate and to the praise and congratulations of their parents. And thought about Christmas.

Skidding Car Snaps Pole

The second serious traffic mishap in the Belleville area this week occurred last night on Highway 2, some four miles east of the city. Debris from the wreck was hurled 60 feet through the bedroom window (arrow) of a nearby dwelling.

Two Hurt In Crash

Two men were injured last night when their automobile crashed off Highway 2 east of the Point Anne lane, struck a hydro pole and ended on the lawn of a roadside residence.

Ernest Hughes, 19, R.R. 7 Collins Bay, and Donald Bradshaw, 23, R.R. 4 Belleville, were taken to Belleville General Hospital.

Hughes later was transferred to Kingston General Hospital for treatment of a suspected broken neck. Bradshaw was admitted to hospital in Belleville with superficial head and face injuries, say police.

Electric Shock Cures Infatuation

LONDON (AP)—Two British psychiatrists say they have cured a husband of infidelity by giving him a 70-volt shock every time he looked at a photo of his paramour.

Dr. John Barker and Dr. Mabel Miller of Sheldon Hospital, Shrewsbury, said the husband now is totally indifferent to the other woman, a neighbor.

Describing the treatment—"aversion therapy" — in the medical magazine Pulse Friday, the doctors said it had been used successfully in experiments with gamblers and homosexuals, but they believed this was the first instance of it being tried on the old familiar triangle.

Mr. Hamilton said there is also talk of carrying the caucus policy draft to regional policy conferences, but money is a problem.

"The party lost the opprtuunity to reach the people on policy at the November meeting. "We have to do it the hard way now," Mr. Hamilton said.

Mr. Hamilton maintained that discussion of policy through the urban committees and at regional conferences could "unite the party," divided over Mr. Diefenbaker's leadership.

Teamwork Built Firm Black Diamond Head Says

Robert Paste, president of Local 668 United Packinghouse Workers of America, presided over the banquet party and announced that Patricia Robson, the new local president for 1967, is the second woman president of a union ever elected in Ontario.

Company president Donald Joss reviewed the progress of the firm stating how in 20 years it had increased from 10 to 15 employees to more than 100. Such progress could not have been achieved without co - operation and teamwork.

Mr. Joss said that unions were now an acceptable force in company organization but stressed that with union recognition went responsibility.

He said that successful corporate growth lies in recognition of the interests of both shareholders and unions within the framework of the organization.

Colorful Contrasts In Parade

In keeping with the arctic weather snap was the northland float which drew much applause for its ingenuity.

Then there was the lonely looking Bedouin on his bulky-wheeled bicycle, not exactly fitting in with the chilly environment, but pedalling merriment wherever he meandered down the crowded streets.

TOYS GET SECOND WIND

BROCKVILLE, Ont. (CP) — The local Jaycees organization collected broken toys for repair before Christmas, to be given to underprivileged children, by putting on a movie show. Admission, for children only, was one broken or useless toy.

It Was Organized Pandemonium at Parade Start

Like a bus station during the train strike, perhaps, or like the Toronto Stock Exchange after a uranium find, but not the starting line for a parade.

At least 100 person, clad in everything from Indian headdress to Keystone Cop garb, milled about, wondering where they should go, where the rest of them were, and why it had to be so cold today.

Outside, parade officials ran about, directing floats this way and that, marching personnel here, bands there, in a futile effort to meet the parade starting deadline of "10 o'clock sharp."

But, as usual, with lots of work, and a little bit of luck, the parade got underway, just a little after the pre-arranged time.

The initial pandemonium was rewarded minutes later by the cheers and applause of a crowd that must have considerably exceeded expectation, taking into account the bitter weather picture.

Following Fire Chief Ted Foste's car down the parade route this year was a color party from Kingston carryinf a picturesque array of banners, including the distinctive Centennial flag.

Next came the Salvation Army Band playing Christmas carols, which, with the familiar Nativity scene float close behind, reminded onlookers of the true spirit of Christmas.

Kiddies this year saw ingenious floats depicting a number of storybook characters, including Jack and the Beanstalk, the Wizard of Oz, the Old Lady in the Shoe and Cinderella.

Also on hand to delight the small fry were Captain Kangaroo, the Three Blind Mice, Huckleberry Hound, Winnie the Pooh, Andy Pandy, the Three Little Pigs, the Flintstones, and many more.

Today's parade came up to expectations for its organizers, despite earlier uneasiness that public and private support might be leaner this year.

"It was one of the best parades we've had," said Lloyd Doran, city recreation director and one of the founding members of the annual parade committee.

"The only thing that mattered was the cold weather. It was a pity it had to happen."

Firemen and St. John Ambulance workers had them wrapped in blankets and were thawing them out with hot drinks.

In addition to the Salvation Army Band, this year's participating marching bands were the Quinte Highland Pipe Band, the Canadian Forces Band from Trenton, the Quinte Secondary High School Band, the Tweed High School Brass band, the ArmyNavy Pipe Band, a clown band, the Sea Cadet Band, the Kingston Trumpet Band, and the Colbourne Band.

The members of the bands and the majorette corps felt the full brunt of the near-zero temperatures.

Floats participating under the latter category included the Moira Secondary Cheer Leaders, the Picton Starlights, the Tweed High School majorettes, Gail Hendrick's Majorettes, Iris Lohne's Majorettes, and the Dorothy Dickie Majorette Corps.

These people, and the usual nameless behind the scenes workers, saw their efforts rewarded again this year in the faces of hundreds of Belleville children.

have to call upwards of 43 by-elections to fill vacated seats or a general election early in February.

However, no evidence could be found of any plans for by-elections or a general election here and a high source indicated this has not been considered.

Dr. Brand's questions asked specifically about cabinet ministers having taken CBC fees.

SAUVE PUZZLED

Forestry Minister Sauve, asked whether he had accepted such fees, replied: "I don't know; I've tried to check through the authorities but I couldn't get an answer . . . I'm sure that since becoming a minister I've received no money from the CBC."

Energy Minister Pepin said: "I can only say, as a minister I have not."

Reid Scott, New Democrat MP for Toronto Danforth and a lawyer, said that "over a year ago I appeared on a CBC television show and they sent me what they called an honorarium for expenses, minus an income tax deduction. . . .

"As a result of that, I never used the cheque because I knew about the provisions of the House of Commons Act."

The provision against MPs accepting public money was originally made to guard against governments buying the votes of members.

Mr. Diefenbaker said: "I have always followed the course of refusing payment from the CBC and I've warned others that to do so that they would place themselves in contravention of the Senate and House of Commons Act."

He added that if the government has a legal opinion that is favorable to the practice of CBC fee-taking "they wouldn't have delayed answering Dr. Brand's questions for so long."

Car Plunges Into Trent, Boy Drowns

CAMPBELLFORD — Glen Woodcock, 18-year-old Campbellford youth, was drowned early Saturday morning when his car went out of control and plunged into the Trent River at Campbellford.

Police said that the youth was driving south on Highway 29 inside the town limits when the car skidded out of control for 200 feet and went into the river opposite the Orange Hall.

A passenger in the car, Dennis Briggs, 20, of Trent River, was thrown clear of the car before it went into the water and escaped with abrasions to the back of his head.

The accident occurred about 1:00 a.m. and the body of the drowned youth was recovered about two hours later.

It Was A Cool, Good Morning!

We've been living in the banana belt all autumn, but Old Man Winter last night finally caught up with the Bay of Quinte district.

For the first time this season the thermometer dropped to the zero mark and at 7:30 this morning actually stood at one below before the sun got over the horizon to start warming things up.

Smoking chimney pots and wisps rising from the open water on the Moira River attested to the chilly morning.

All around the Bay of Quinte district heavy snow has fallen, but here again the Belleville area has been fortunate with only a trace of snow seen so far this season.

The zero temperature put a chill on the local farmers' market with neither vendors nor purchasers caring to brave the weather.

At 9:30 there were only three vendors on the market and customers appeared to be almost as scarce.

Two eggs vendors offered home bake goods while the other had dressed ducks for sale at 60c per pound.

Whose Will Shall Prevail—Caucus' Or Organization's?

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — "The Party Caucus, not the Party organization, determines the Party leadership in Parliament.

"The democratically - elected Caucus, and not the democratically - appointed executive is supreme."

This was John Diefenbaker talking, in bitterness, on that black morning after the night before that the 700 or so delegates, who still remained on the last day of the Conservative convention, voted to call a leadership convention within the next 12 months.

The Caucus, as you probably know, is the Party's Parliamentary group which includes its Senators, but for all practical political purposes is dominated by its MPs.

So to become a real "voice" or "power" in the Caucus, you must first be elected to the Commons by a majority of the taxpayers in your constituency.

The Party organization, as you also probably know, comprises the national executive and the riding delegates at a convention, among others.

Generally speaking, the delegates are elected to nothing, for mostly, they are appointed as the voting voice of their constituency.

So whose will shall prevail?

CHANGE OF TUNE:

John Diefenbaker has said of course it must be the Caucus, the MPs who have a mandate from the Party's voters.

President Dalton Camp has said of course it must be the organization with its mandate from the Party's supporters.

Get the difference?

As between voters and supporters?

It is this, really: you can be a voter without being a supporter in the organizational sense.

The stand Dalton Camp takes now on the question of Caucus-organization supremacy is exactly the opposite to his position previously.

Out of the files have come two Dalton Camp speeches bearing directly on the issue.

Both were made here in the Capital, both at the previous Party convention which initially elected him to the presidency.

"The Association, (that is, the organization) its officers and its membership are in the service of the Parliamentary Party (the Caucus).

"Their policy must be our policy.

"And their leadership is our leadership, to be sustained and championed, supported and upheld."

Difficult, if not impossible of misunderstanding, those words of two years ago.

The Party Caucus, said President Dalton Camp, without qualification, calls the tune and the Party organization keeps in step.

That was one speech.

SUICIDE, HE SAYS

Three days earlier, at that same convention which first gave him his Party presidency, the text of his speech shows him as saying this on the point:

"The responsibilities of the Parliamentary Party, its members and its leadership, are its own and nobody else's.

"The supporter in the organization has only two practical choices: Support the Parliamentary Party (the Caucus) or don't support it.

"There is no useful purpose in attaching conditions, reservations or qualifications.

"We can advise, they need not consult.

"We can warn, they need not take heed.

"We can propose, but they can dispose."

Almost as an afterthought, two years ago after saying all these things, Dalton Camp added, significantly:

"Nevertheless I must add we are bound to advise, warn and propose. And they are bound to listen."

Significantly, too, in the current context of Conservatism and what seems to have happened to the Party, Dalton Camp's keynote address convention speech two years ago with a quotation taken from the text of an address delivered by former Prime Minister Richard Bedford Bennett:

"This party of ours has never been defeated by our opponents: it has always committed suicide."

Perhaps the damage doesn't go as deep as first Montreal.

Perhaps it can be repaired by a new leader, Ontario's John Roberts, Manitoba's Duff Roblin, Nova Scotia's Robert Stanfield — but whoever is to take over could use a helping hand from John Diefenbaker almost more than anything else.

Competitive World

Canadian cheddar cheese has long been popular not only at home but in Britain — and producers know that quality is the key element in its success. Only the best is good enough to win over discerning palates among the cheese-orientated gourmets of England for instance.

When Canadians realise they are competing not only with the high quality domestic product in Britain but with New Zealand, Swiss, Danish and French creations they can afford a sense of satisfaction over the fact that this country has been holding its own.

But wait a minute . . . we said "has been holding its own." On Thursday this newspaper noted that Canada will have to look to its laurels as a producer of quality cheese if it expects premium prices for cheddar products on the British market.

Speaking to cheese makers here, R. H. Gillan, head of the Grading and Inspection Services of the Department of Agriculture said English buyers were disappointed that Canadian cheese did not win the top prizes at the Royal Dairy Show in London this fall. He noted that a New Zealand producer had won top prize in the show and that Canadians had not done so well as in the past.

"If Canadian cheese is to sell at a premium on the English market," he said, "care must be taken that only the best quality cheese possible is shown at the Royal Dairy Show."

Some prophetic words of Shannonville producer Clarence Mastin come to mind. Interviewed on his recent retirement, Mr. Mastin said: "Just like any other business you have got to put your heart into it. You can't go off half-sh*t about anything."

Canadian producers do not need to be reminded of this — as their record shows. But as we said, there is competition and the home product is being placed on its mettle.

De Gaulle Is Host

President de Gaulle's talks with Soviet Premier Kosygin are further proof of the French leader's now firmly-established reputation among world leaders.

Now restored largely to its former status in European and world affairs — thanks almost solely to de Gaulle — France has been playing a maverick's role on the international political scene.

It has established close relations not only with the Soviets but with its old enemy, the Germans, cocked a snoot at the British over its entry to the Common Market, at the United States and Canada over the question of basing NATO aircraft on French soil, gone ahead with its own nuclear test program, and generally told all and sundry where they can get off.

Now the premier of the second most powerful nation on earth comes to Paris, to be greeted by an unprecedented 101-gun salute and a personal welcome by de Gaulle himself.

Aside from the prestige value of the international scene, President de Gaulle has found time for extensive tours of French territories overseas and of Latin America. And all this despite his advancing years.

The president's speech of welcome at Orly airport was indicative of France's independent role in the world. It spoke of "the co-operation being organized between our two states for the welfare of our two peoples and at the same time for the balance, progress and peace of the world."

Family Travels Too

Former Soviet Premier Khrushchev set a trend by bringing members of his family with him on visits overseas. Often his wife, daughter and son-in-law would accompany him.

His successors are following suit. Premier Kosygin brought his daughter with him to Paris. And on a recent visit to Austria President Podgorny was also accompanied by a daughter.

Family solidarity such as this is encouraging. We may well conclude that Mr. Kosygin is no sabre-rattler when he decides that a visit to Paris would not be complete without his daughter. But then, it is just possible that daughter Ludmila herself made the decision!

In any event, from such charming signs and portents as these it may be deduced there is a new spirit of understanding among some at least of the world's leaders, and that peace and progress are taking more precedence in their thinking than are war and conquest.

To Your Good Health

Doctor Can Aid Woman Terrified of Dentist

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: My problem is more dental than medical but perhaps you can help me anyway. I am a 20-year-old mother of four with an incredible and admittedly unreasonable fear of the dentist.

I have not been to see a dentist in 12 years. My teeth were never good and as you can imagine the neglect has taken its toll.

No amount of discussion or argument seem to dent this awful fear. Yet, I really very much want to have my teeth taken care of. I have even made appointments and then not been able to keep them.

Do you have any ideas that might help me get over this panic? Do dentists ever do such work in a hospital under general anesthesia?

Mrs. H. B.

Here's an idea for you to try. Ask both your doctor and dentist to help. Most hospitals do not have equipment other than your dentist has, and a general anaesthetic may not be feasible. Short of extensive surgery, which you would not need anyway, I strongly doubt that hospitalization would be either needed or advisable.

However, your doctor, once you explain your problem to him, might be able to get you over the first hump — getting to the dentist's office — with the aid of tranquillizers.

Your dentist can then institute a slow, quick which will prevent pain from either drilling or extraction. Modern dental technique has been constantly improving, and that includes the last 12 years. High speed drills and cooling methods make ordinary drilling very close to painless, and pain can be lessened by the novocaine or other procedures if they are required.

I strongly suspect that after your first visit you will have your problem well under control. Let me know, will you?

* * *

Dear Dr. Molner: I had a missed abortion, and had conflicting advice on the advisability of a D. and C. immediately. I did not have this done, and now wonder what effect this could have on future pregnancies.

Also could you enlighten me as to what happens physically when a missed abortion occurs? Does the afterbirth remain in the uterus?

Mrs. N. C.

Abortion applies to termination of a pregnancy before the 16th week. In a missed abortion, the products of conception have not been expelled from the uterus, and may remain for a long time. There may or may not be subsequent bleeding to indicate trouble.

When such a condition occurs, a D. C. (dilation and curettage) ultimately is necessary to remove the retained tissue. If this is not done, a future pregnancy may not occur, and your health is likely to be impaired.

* * *

Dear Dr. Molner: I have diabetes and regularly test my urine for sugar. Usually the test is negative but sometimes the color changes to orange, indicating sugar. How can the sample be both negative and show sugar?

N. S.

I don't know, what test you use, but most of them specify a time limit, a minute or so. It is quite possible after expiration of the limit for further chemical reactions to occur, thus causing a change in color even without the presence of sugar. So follow instructions carefully, with attention to the time specified. Note the result of the test within that time, and disregard whatever happens later.

Note to A. B. R.: Wheat germ is a nourishing food; expecting it to be a medicine or to make any particular change in your health is futile.

Bed-wetting is a distressing problem. If your child has the habit, write Dr. Molner in care of this newspaper for a copy of his helpful booklet, "Enuresis — Ten Ways To Stop Bed-Wetting." Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 20c in coin to cover the cost of printing and handling.

Dr. Molner is delighted to receive letters from his readers, but regrets that because of the great number received daily he cannot answer them individually. Wherever possible, Dr. Molner uses readers' questions in his column.

Uniforms for The Schools?

Letter In Hamilton Spectator

With all this recent talk of the rising cost of living I am surprised there has been no mention of a money - saving idea that seems quite obvious to me. I am referring to the wearing of a school uniform.

I believe that certain Hamilton private schools insist on the wearing of a uniform, but no mention of this is made in the state schools. For girls you could have a navy blue pleated skirt or jumper, white blouse and tie for winter wear; a cotton dress of a certain pattern for summer.

It is only necessary to have two changes of each type of garment, and English mothers have appreciated the advantages of this money - saving arrangement for decades.

A similar type of outfit can be made to apply to boys of course. The children themselves are usually very proud to wear the uniform of their own particular school.

What can we Hamilton mothers do to start a scheme like this in our state schools?

Interested Mother, Ancaster.

Long Winter In the Cards

Boston Herald

In August the countryman begins to look for them. Now the list is complete and rarely have they been more ominous. The signs all indicate we are in for one of those old-fashioned winters that grandfather likes to talk about.

This does not imply that we do not respect the professional meteorologists with their charts, slide rules, graphs and learned comments on upstairs jet streams. These add a patina of authenticity to their discussions. But countryman around the pot bellied stoves in general s ers give their opinions without equivocation or mental reservation.

Unanimity of the signs indicate deep snow and long periods of cold. Make sure the woodshed is filled and that you have long ears ready when winter weather hits.

NDP President Replies

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

In your editorial of Nov. 30, "NDP Theories" you suggest that the New Democratic Party intends to nationalize every thing in sight. You state that the New Democratic Party would take the profit motive out of all enterprise in this country. You then imply that farmers should not support the NDP. I am sure that when Mr. MacDonald is here in January to address the Quinte NDP he will be dealing with these points, but in the meantime I would like to point out a few facts.

Mr. MacDonald, as you say, stated that "it was not NDP policy to nationalize all over the place," and "that nationalization is only a means to an end to achieve what we think is a necessary purpose." But contrary to your statement "as to what end and what purpose Mr. MacDonald did not say," I would point out that Mr. MacDonald "did say," and had been seen at the meeting you would have heard him say it.

Mr. MacDonald said "that if private enterprise were not acting in the public interest then it would be necessary for the government to act, either by regulatory board or nationalization." He said in the case of Bell Telephone, the Board of Transport could keep proper control even now by widening up at times other than to increase the basis of profit that Bell could earn. He pointed out that one of the best operated utilities is the government-operated Ontario Hydro.

Auto insurance, Mr. MacDonald said, is one area which, it is now proven, can be operated by the government more effectively than by private companies.

Mr. MacDonald answered a question from the floor of the meeting about making the profit motive out of everything," by pointing out that companies would soon learn to get along on acceptable and reasonable profit levels rather than on the profiteering returns of today.

The farmers would do well not to heed your advice until they look at profiteering in their own industry and how it adversely affects them. The farmers were demanding a roll back of farm machinery price increases and are getting nowhere in their demands, while companies like Massey-Ferguson have had profit increases over the last three years of 130%.

I would like to invite you, Sir, to attend the next meeting of the Quinte NDP on Jan. 9 and put your questions to Mr. MacDonald personally as he will be the speaker at that time.

Ian R. Reilly,
President,
Quinte New Democratic Party,
44 Wallbridge Crescent.

"Axe Gimmicks" Reader Urges

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

May I respond to your Editorial on NDP Theories with the following reply:

Wide - spread protests being made over the high costs of living are undeniable, and surely show the desperation of many ordinary folk, who, against increasing odds try to put adequate food on the family table.

The housewife can well do without the costly gimmickry and without having to accumulate compulsory toys. Her work of feeding and clothing is no game to be played in view of the realities and hardship of economic facts today.

Fickle Politicians

Windsor Star

Mr. Roberts has said he will not be a candidate for the federal Conservative leadership and this may now be his attitude. Politicians, however, are like women in their penchant for changing their minds. An overwhelming victory in Ontario would give Mr. Roberts a head start in the leadership contest if he did change his mind.

Lines on Life

Inter-actor or Re-actor

By Dr. Stuart E. Rosenberg

Better take care, even if you're not a public speaker, to know the difference between being "impromptu" and "spontaneous."

Most often we can tell when public speakers, performers or actors are well-prepared. That's when they can afford the joy of being spontaneous — they can concentrate on the way they speak and can interact with the audience and personal feeling. This is so because they do not have to think and speak at the same time. They have taken the time, expended the effort to prepare.

Many people think that it is more enjoyable to go through life without planning too much. Better, they say, to savour the moments, to react to the days as they come, to live spontaneously without becoming enslaved to schedule, program or calendar. Yet even those who speak this way need to plan: the artist in search of ecstatic moments, has to search; the writer, rising to occasions of deep insight, must first read and meditate, before he can write. The art of the artist is to make spontaneity seem artless, unplanned, uncalculated. But that's an art, and it takes planning!

A spontaneous reaction is different from an impromptu or inter-action to life. Even though we respond quickly and adroitly to situations we meet, to enter such moments spontaneously is no sign that we have not already carefully thought out our attitudes. When a man "knows what he likes" and then sees what he likes, he can react with spontaneity, and experience unabashed, unalloyed enjoyment. This is because he has already taken the trouble to think about what he likes—in people, ideas, art or politics. Of course, he cannot know everything, and often, he will meet up with novelty in people, ideas, art or politics. His reaction will be ready to enjoy these new things as well; but his enjoyment of these will be in his own patterns, his own style.

A spontaneous person is an inner-directed person, whose world has been made ready,

Attending the bride were Mrs. Judy Decker of Kingston as matron of honor, Miss Marilyn Corbin of Cloyne and Mrs. Dorothy Pullock, Morven as bridesmaids. They were gowned alike in green peau de soie floor length gowns and carried cascades of tangerine carnations.

The Misses Judy Allen niece of the bride and Robin McKeown sister of the bridegroom were flower girls, dressed in bouffant floor length soft gold colored dresses and carried bosegays of Zorian rosettes and brown - eyed daisies.

Mr. Robert Way of Kingston attended the bridegroom and the ushers were Mr. Bradley Brummel, Belleville and Mr. David Kish, Cataraqui.

A reception was held in the church hall where guests were received by the bride's mother who wore a double knit beige dress with jacket, brown accessories and a corsage of orange delight roses. The bridegroom's mother assisted dressed in green cut - velvet suit with matching hat and black accessories and corsage of gold rosebuds.

Women's Institutes

CANNIFTON-CORBYVILLE W. I.

A demonstration of liquid embroidery was the feature of the December meeting of Cannifton - Corbyville Women's Institute.

Mrs. P. Meale, president, was in charge of the meeting. Mrs. A. Boyd and Mrs. F. Reid were named to attend the senior training school for leaders in January. Course topic is block printing.

Mrs. Boyd, program convener, conducted a contest, won by Mrs. G. Wilson, and gave a reading.

Mrs. K. F. Wormald was in charge of tickets and Mrs. I. Ives and Mrs. H. C. McGee staffed the nursery during the afternoon.

The silver, red and green theme was repeated in the tea room. The tea table, covered with a lace cloth, was centred with a large silver tinsel tree trimmed with Christmas balls. Red tapers in silver holders and silver tea services completed the decor. Individual tables were also centred with fat silver tinsel trees set on frilly red net doilies. White table cloths and red serviettes continued the Christmas theme.

From the ceiling of the tea room were suspended silver mobiles trimmed with green and red glittery Christmas tree and cut-outs. The walls were decorated with holly branches against silver backgrounds.

Mrs. G. S. Martin played selections on the electric organ during the afternoon. Tea room conveners during the afternoon were Mrs. L. W. Lantz and Mrs. R. O. Clarke. During the evening Mrs. R. A. Harrison and Mrs. S. R. Armstrong were in charge.

Those pouring were Mrs. E. Bell, Mrs. R. C. Ellis, Mrs. J. W. Flatt, Mrs. G. B. Smith, Mrs. E. W. Boulton, Mrs. A. Greatrix, Mrs. C. W. Mellreath, and Mrs. H. F. Swann.

PORT ARTHUR, Ont. (CP)—A veteran Finnish bush worker wants a sauna bath included in the model bush camp at Centennial Park. She Has Morning Sickness, Her Husband Nauseated-Too

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am 28 and the mother of two children. I am now pregnant with my third child. I sailed through my first two pregnancies with no trouble. This time, the first 3 am experiencing morning nausea and I can't eat anything until noon.

Is it possible for my husband to be sick on account of this, also? He actually throws up when I do and neither one of us can figure it out.

I told him I'd ask my doctor and he gave me orders to keep quiet about it. He suggested I write to you and sign a phony name which I am doing. Please reply in the paper? Thank you. —MRS. SMITH.

DEAR MRS. SMITH: Your husband should get a physical check-up and learn if there is something organically wrong with him.

Don't be surprised if he gets a clean bill of health. It is not uncommon for the husband to take on a wife's symptoms. Some men have actually had "labor pains" when their wives delivered.

When you get to feeling better (soon, I hope) I'll bet he will be better too.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I teach in an elementary school in Baltimore. It rained today and I came home completely exhausted from snapping 25 raincoats and struggling with almost as many pairs of boots.

In the dead of winter it's worse. There are leggings, sweaters, galoshes, storm coats and hats.

Please, Ann Landers, tell mothers through your column that by the time their children are old enough to go to school they should be able to dress themselves and put on their own boots. This means better lessons in hooking, tying, buttoning, snapping and buckling should begin at age three. Much obliged. — POOPED.

DEAR POOPED: It's not only better for the teacher when the small fry can manage for themselves, it's better for the kids. Youngsters who are taught self-reliance are more capable. Mental daily begins in infancy. Independence and a sense of achievement are important cornerstones.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our daughter is approaching dating age and I'm terrified. I believe children should be trusted, but in today's society can't too much trust be dangerous?

Celeste says double-dating is a good safeguard against getting into trouble, but I don't think it means anything anymore. From what I read, heavy petting is so commonplace that there is no longer safety in numbers.

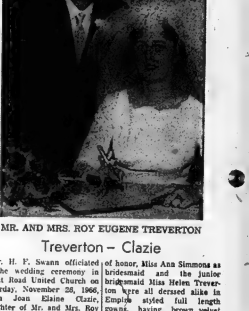
Don't you think parents should go to the movies with a daughter and her date? They don't have to sit together but they could be somewhere around. Also, don't you think parents should encourage their teen-age girls to entertain boy friends in the house so they won't park in cars and go to out of the way places? I'd like your opinion. — DREAMING OF A BETTER WORLD.

DEAR DREAMING: Wake up, Dear, and accept the fact that early training — and not policing — will determine how your daughter conducts herself.

I am in favor of girls entertaining their boy friends in the living room, but they must have privacy. Forget about tagging along to the movies with your daughter and her date. Teens who feel they are under constant surveillance will make a game of outsmarting their captors and they will win, eventually.

Yule Cookie Fair Held At Eastminster Church

The glitter of silver, garnished with Christmas red and green accented the Cookie Fair and bazaar held Friday afternoon and evening at Eastminster United Church, Belleville.



Rev. A. McDowell welcomed patrons, who were received at the door by Mrs. A. McDowell, Mrs. H. Edey, Mrs. A. Glover and Mrs. N. D. Henderson.

The entrance was guarded with a green Christmas tree decorated with colored lights. Located here were the home bake table convened by Mrs. L. D. Reid and Mrs. R. Booth and the holiday cookie table convened by Mrs. A. Glover and Mrs. J. Locke. The bake table was centred with a cookie castle trimmed with gumdrops and ice-cream cone trimmings. Decorated Christmas cookies, tree-shaped rolls and gingerbread men were spread in profusion on the long table, together with the conventional preserves, breads and baked goods.

The girls of the church operated a booth where stuffed clowns, crackers, Christmas stockings and nuts were for sale. Hi-C girls assisted at the self-serve table in the evening.

Innovations at the craft table were "sticky fingers", pencils, made to tie on the refrigerator door. Aprons, Christmas decorations and stockings were also sold by the conveners, Mrs. H. R. Varcoe and Mrs. R. C. Lovering.

A kiddies' corner, where children could purchase 25c gifts for people on their Christmas list, was convened by Mrs. S. Choma and Mrs. E. Smith.

Allowance Can Be Used to Teach Children Proper Handling of Money

DEAR DORIS: This message comes to our reader-mothers and fathers from a skilled child care worker:

"Hey, Mom, can I have $5c for a set of baseball cards? All the other kids are getting them."

DORIS CLARE

How many of you have heard this plaintive plea or one like it? And more important, what did you do about it?

If you have a child old enough to receive an allowance, this kind of situation provides a golden opportunity to help your child grow towards becoming a more responsible individual. "Growing up" means many things, but mainly it means growing more independent of parent figures. Receiving an allowance, being trained in how to use it wisely, and then being entrusted with the responsibility of handling it, can help a child to become more independent.

Handling his own allowance helps him to learn to make decisions on his own; and if his parents are strong enough to say "no" to the request for additional money apart from the allowance, it can help him to learn to accept the consequences of his decisions.

If he decides to spend all his allowance on candy the day he gets it, he will have to do without for baseball cards for the first time, who is spending money in all directions. I tremble for the consequence time when he begins to wonder where all the money goes.

His father just never limited his spending. Now he thoroughly believes the green stuff grows on trees.

* * *

DEAR DORIS: I am a 16-year-old, also I am to become, in four months' time, an unwed mother. You may think this very silly but I just can't find a way to tell my parents, and they are under the impression I am going to school. I leave each morning and return at 3:45 p.m., pretending to be at school.

Doris, I can't hide it any longer. Both of my sisters were married because of being pregnant, and I've been warned by my mother time and time against this. She is the "I told you so" type, and, although I'm ashamed of it, she and I have never been close.

I love my parents and hate to hurt them, but you see we are quite poor financially, and I would like to go to an unwed mothers' home. I have not been to a doctor yet, as I'm afraid of them finding out in such a small town.

Could you please advise me on how I might tell them (my folks); also where I might find an inexpensive home? The baby's father refused to help me financially and every other way, and I have no idea where he is now. — TERRIFIED.

DEAR TERRIFIED: I'm sorry. Your alarm is bad enough punishment, without your family's censure. But it just isn't realistic to try to hide the facts from your parents one more day.

Since you anticipate the "I told you so," you can steel yourself for that. Could you write a note your mother would find on the table while you were out? This might give her a chance to regain her composure before your return.

Write that you hate to distress her, but that you need her help now more than ever you did. Ask her to go with you to the child care agency to make plans for yourself and your baby. The worker will know about homes. Where are the agency is: Children's Aid Society of Belleville and Hastings County, 53 Moira Street West, Belleville;

I'm sending you my ten-cent leaflet "Unwed Mothers and Their Babies." This situation does not have to ruin your life if you take matters in hand and get the help which is there for you.

* * *

(Doris cannot begin to answer all your questions in the column. To make sure of your reply, remember to enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

"Get your pliers, wrench, hammer, hat and coat—I just loaned you out to Mrs. Finchly next door."

BELLEVILLE'S BUSINESS COLLEGE

"A Commercial College is judged by the business success of its graduates . . . O.B.C. has enjoyed an almost world-wide reputation for nearly a century." —Mrs. O. A. Brown, Principal of Ontario Business College.

* * *

"1968 will be our school's centennial year, and we are looking forward to it," affirms Mrs. O. Annetta Brown, efficient principal and owner of the Ontario Business College, 54 Victoria Avenue, as she smilingly places before us a file of clippings concerning the college's early days.

What treasures of interest are gathered here!

One clipping from "The Daily Intelligencer" dated August 1, 1925, written by a former O.B.C. principal, Mr. I. L. Moore captures our attention. It reads in part:

" . . . in 1869, two well educated, capable and experienced young business men of Belleville (George Wallbridge and Samuel Beatty by name) established the Ontario Business College here.

One week after the opening of the college, the Daily Intelligencer ran an article of which the following is part:

It is with pleasure we record the opening of the Ontario Commercial College. Although but one week has passed since the opening day, many students have entered.

Visiting the college on Friday last, we saw middle - aged and young men working away with eagerness and energy that augured well for their success.

"About ten years later, (Dec. 14, 1871)," Mr. Moore writes on, "the Intelligencer, made the following reference to the College: 'Ontario Commercial College is the most popular Business College in the Province. Students are coming in rapidly from far and near . . . '

"In 1871," Mr. Moore continues, "Mr. Wallbridge retired and Mr. Beatty secured the assistance of Mr. W. B. Robinson, who continued as one of the Principals until 1904, when ill health compelled his retirement.

"Mr. Beatty withdrew from active connection with the College in 1877 and Mr. J. W. Johnson came in as partner and co - principal with Mr. Robinson. The partnership of Messrs. Robinson and Johnson continued for 27 years, after which Mr. Johnson remained as head of the institution until his death on March 1910, completing 60 years as principal.

"The Montreal Daily Star on January 26, 1878 commented: 'Ontario Business College at Belleville, Ontario, is admitted to be the most thorough Business College in Canada . . . We have pleasure in recommending the Ontario Business College which has trained hundreds of young men for business, who are now filling good positions.'

"Ten years after the College was founded," Mr. Moore writes "students began to come from the Maritime Provinces; this was shortly after the completion of the Intercolonial Railway. An editorial in the Intelligencer of May 4, 1878 said:

'The value of the Intercolonial Railway from a national point of view and its great utility to the commercial interest of the Dominion is being proved daily. 'Locally we are beginning to reap its benefits. Among the students attending Ontario Business College are young men from Nova Scotia and New Brunswick attracted hither by the national reputation which the College has attained.

'Another local newspaper referred to the fact that students from the Maritime Provinces stated "it would have been impossible for them to enjoy the superior advantages of Ontario Business College but for the facilities offered by the Intercolonial Railway.'"

Method for Making Brown Gravy

LETTER: You're so good with your recipes. I wondered if you ever thought of writing one on "how to make gravy". One lady told me she had looked in all her cook books and there was nothing on how to make gravy. I know a woman who had a big family and cooked all they ate or years and always put flour in a bottle with cold water and shook that up and put it into the water in the pan. I just put 1 tablespoon flour to one of fat in pan and stir it together and add boiling water. There's so many young brides these days who know little of cooking plain things. I'm sure your gravy recipe would help many. But suit yourself. Mrs. E.M.S.

Answer: Thank you. My young secretary could not agree more with you. She coaxed me to do your bidding so here goes.

BROWN MEAT GRAVY-
(2 cups)

Remove roast from roasting pan. Tip off all fat. Leave brown sediment in pan. Measure ¼ cup fat. Return it to pan and add 1-3 cups hot water (or potato water). Mix together in a small bowl 3 tablespoons cornstarch and 1-3 cup cold water. Stirring constantly add cornstarch paste to pan gravy until thick, working all the time to loosen brown sediment sticking to pan. NOTES: If desired this gravy may be strained, but we never do.

(2) If gravy is not brown enough add a beef bouillon cube when you add the hot water.

(3) Double above amounts to make Turkey Gravy but add about 1 cup chopped cooked giblets.

BROWN GRAVY (Without meat)

There are several ways to make gravy without meat but all call for beef extract or bouillon cubes or brown gravy powder. To make 1½ cups, melt 3 tablespoons beef or chicken or pork drippings or butter or margarine and stir in 3 tablespoons flour or cornstarch. You could let this cook to brown a little, stirring. Stir in 1½ cups boiling hot liquid until thick. This may be liquid in which vegetables are cooked such as potatoes, peas, carrots, beans or boiling water or it may be broth leftover from boiling chicken or beef or veal. Or it may be half milk and half some of the above mentioned liquids. Now to flavor and color it add 1 or 2 or more beef bouillon cubes, or 1 or 2 or more teaspoons beef extract or brown gravy powder. When these are dissolved taste it for salt and pepper and add what is needed.

next time you blow a fuse remember these facts before you blow your top

1 When a fuse blows it is a signal that you have overloaded part of your electrical system . . . a circuit.

2 If your home's electrical system is not adequate to serve all your needs you'll notice other symptoms. Lights may dim from time to time, your toaster will take longer to toast, and appliances with motors may appear sluggish.

3 If your home is more than 10 years old, the chances are your electrical system requires up-dating to take care of today's requirements. There are now more than twice the number of appliances used in the home than ten years ago.

SOLUTION

It is not necessary to put up with the inconvenience caused by an out-dated electrical system.

Have your household wiring examined soon. See how easily your home can be modernized electrically.

BENEFITS

1 You can use as many appliances as you wish at the same time . . . without giving fuses a second thought.

2 You can add any number of new time-saving appliances to your home.

3 Your appliances will operate more efficiently and with less strain on motors.

4 You can enjoy the convenience of having all the electrical outlets you desire. You will avoid the inconvenience of unsightly extension cords and the attendant risk of overloading the outlet.

5 Additional comforts such as electric heating and air-conditioning can be easily accommodated.

6 Modernizing your wiring system will make an important difference to the safety and resale value of your home.

Re-wiring can be handled with little disturbance to your home and at a cost far less than you may think. Contact a qualified electrical contractor, soon. Or call your Hydro.

Employment News

BY J. R. STAVELEY
EMPLOYER RELATIONS OFFICER

The following factors contributed to the local employment trend during the past week which showed a stronger labor demand for the female worker than for men.

The labor demand from the construction and allied fields is also as sensitive as a good barometer of weather conditions. With the advent of winter weather, it was noticeable during the week that an appreciable number of construction machinery operators and unskilled construction laborers were registering for em[illegible] In many cases, th[illegible] been work[illegible] the [illegible]ville area. In [illegible] wor[illegible] their work [illegible]ed completed [illegible] or closed [illegible] for the winter months and [illegible] had returned to their home [illegible]rket to seek further employment opportunities. Locally, there has been a slackening off in the labor construction demand this week.

It is, therefore, opportune at this time, to emphasize the necessity of everyone to support the 1966 - 67 winter employment campaign whose objective is to alleviate the seasonal winter unemployment. Admittedly, the community has enjoyed good employment conditions together with fine autumn weather. However, seasonal lay - offs will affect everyone and in a fiercely competitive modern world, no country can compete successfully unless it has a smooth running economy operating on a twelve month basis. The slogan is - "Wise Birds are Winter Planning Now" to provide those additional jobs during the coming winter months to not only help themselves, their community, but Canada as a whole.

The following job opportunities are now available at the Canada Manpower Centre.

In the male division locally, still required is a saleswoman having the aptitude for customer contact selling. A carrier is a necessity and the position carries both a salary and a commission on sales. A reliable person is needed to act as a companion for a lady. Living in accommodation is provided. The duties entail only light housekeeping and preparation of meals. The successful applicant, if she so desired, could be free to work elsewhere during the day. There is another position available for a capable housekeeper who will live - in and take full charge of the house.

In a neighboring town, a travel agency requires a travel consultant and ticket agent to arrange airline, steamship and railway reservations. It is essential to have travel agency experience for this position which has a good starting salary. Other out-of-town positions require persons to manage a large cafeteria and supervise a working staff of up to 20 persons. Some cafeteria or restaurant experience would be helpful but not essential. Ability to cook would be an asset and at least a Grade X education is required for this position. In addition to the monthly salary there is also a yearly incentive bonus. In conjunction with this type of position, assistant managers are required for the larger cafeterias.

In the male division locally, an experienced laundry man is required for a vacancy as assistant manager of an institution's laundry department. Bricklayers are urgently required by a local contractor.

There are career openings in the retail, banking, industrial and consumer credit fields for young men possessing a Grade XII or better education. In the motel and hotel activity, employment opportunities are available for qualified bartenders, waiters and dishwashers. In addition, there are positions yet unfilled for insurance and investment salesmen, stock clerks and a survey instrument trainee. Industrial opportunities are for a machinist and a machinist helper, an estimator and expeditor, in addition to steamfitters and a structural steel layout man.

Anyone interested in any of these positions, seeking other employment or thinking of re-entering the labor market, is invited to contact the Canada Manpower Centre at 324 Church Street, Belleville or telephone 962-8681.

Mortgage Money Available To Purchase Older Homes

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians who want to buy older homes under new federal mortgage arrangements now can put in their applications, the Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. announced Friday.

The corporation said in a statement it has set up services to handle requests for this type of mortgage and for applications on three other changes recently announced in the National Housing Act.

Buyers of existing homes now may borrow up to $10,000 if they pledge to use at least $1,000 of the money for repairs or improvements.

The regulations apply to single dwellings, one unit of a semi-detached or duplex dwelling, or one unit in a row-housing project.

IMPOSE CHECKS

Buyers cannot later rent the homes or obtain the loans with the intention of later selling the property.

CMHC will insure loans made by approved lenders or make direct loans if the private lenders do not meet the demand.

Another NHA revision permits CMHA to make loans for student residences at vocational and training schools, training hospitals and schools for special groups of handicapped people.

A third change in the act increases loans available for rental housing projects to 90 per cent of the value from 85 per cent, with a dollar maximum per unit of $18,000. In the case of apartment multiple - family dwellings the maximum per unit is $12,000.

Finally, the forgiveness period for loans on sewage treatment projects has been extended to March 31, 1970 from March 31, 1967.

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor Minister Nicholson told the Commons Friday no change is contemplated in the maximum amount of National Housing Act loans or in the proportion of a home's cost for which a loan may be obtained.

He told George Chatterton (PC—Esquimalt - Saanich) the government also does not plan to increase the amounts of direct NHA loans—as opposed to those the government guarantees from private lenders.

Barbara Leaves Cheques

NEW YORK (AP)—The New York Daily News says in a Paris dispatch that Woolworth heiress Barbara Hutton left $4,000,000 in cheques when she walked out on her seventh husband last month and announced her plans for a divorce.

The news story by Bernard Valery quotes reliable sources as saying there were two cheques—one for $3,000,000 for her husband, Laotian Prince Raymond Doan Vinh, 49, and one for $1,000,000 for his brother, Ronald.

The American heiress, 54, walked out on the prince Nov. 23 at a luxury hotel on the outskirts of the south Moroccan city of Taroudan, the News says, and later announced plans to divorce him.

The couple was married April 8, 1966, in Mexico.

MUSHMOUTH REPORTS

Dear Boss: —

NEW YORK: — I'm down here on a lone junket in an effort to discover why a gaggle of my ancestors years ago said this village is a cesey of palefaces on the premise the Dodgers would not play any other place than Brooklyn.

You told me once that in New York, bartenders, bell-hops, bums and taxi-drivers are the best sources of information. You're so right.

They know New York better than the tax collectors. But I found out what they know about Canada you can stick in a butterfly's ear.

My favorite hack was the Murphin-ski, a Jewish boy born in Dublin of Arab-Italian parentage. He spoke with a Cockney accent. He charged me $5.40 fare from Kennedy Airport to Times Square and $4.50 from Times Square to the airport.

I asked why the difference. He said it's shorter going back.

But I got an interpreter as you suggested and went to Brooklyn. Over there I found the natives restless, mostly from shock over the LA Dodgers being shunked off in the "weak" series.

I went into Freddie Livingstone's Bar just a drink away from your beloved Ebbet's Field. I ran into one of these "Schlfer" gals, — you know the type if they fell on their face the best they can do is a two-point landing.

You wouldn't know Ebbet's Field, boss. The former home of Jackie Robinson, Sal Maglie, the "Dook," Gil, and the rest of those valiant bums has changed to the point where Uncle Willie Robinson is turning over in his grave.

The high-rises there now loft to the "pernt" (excuse the dialect) where the pent-house populace have eternal sunlight. They're that high above the clouds.

Over in Manhattan, He told me, they're razing a lot of the famous old hotels like the Statler, and the building program is reaching 600 million per year. That's a lot of hay, boss and if they keep that up the guys down Pedal Anse way will be working for the next fifty years.

But there's other building going on too. Up in a suite in a Fifth Avenue building three or four guys are sitting around trying to construct a baseball "high-rise" out of the debris that was the New York Yankees of last year.

Mike Burke the Columbia Broadcasting System boss, who runs the networks baseball venture; Lee MacPhail, son of a former Yankee boss, and Ralph Houk veteran of 27 campaigns as Yankee farmhand, player, general manager and field manager are the builders.

And the chuckles you hear come from Shea Stadium where the Mets, the best loss-winners in baseball history, are doing a bit of constructing themselves.

The Yankees brass job? To breathe new life into an aging infirm club that has plummeted from top to bottom in two short seasons. And to keep people coming to Yankee stadium after the football season is over.

More chuckles from the Shea and the Mets. Says Ike, boss and Ike's a former "Bronx" fan. "Lestum bring he who. As long as the Mets keep losin' we'll pack 'em in."

But the Yankee management is not predicting a one-season miracle. To create a winner, ers will take five years says MacPhail. The veterans Mantle, Ford, Howard, Maris (if around) have aged another years. The younger stars Pepitone, Tresh, Downing, Boston have yet realised their full potential. New Yankees are an unknown quantity.

Says Ike, boss. "The trouble with the Yankees they have run out of feed boxes. Their farm system has been depleted and right now they're in the market to trade two or three former stars for younger potential, owned by other clubs. Dean Tresh and Stottlemyer are mentioned in trade deals."

Perhaps it's a sign of the times. The once proud Yankees who dominated the American League and winning a world series became a sour loss hearing habit, have seen their former "high rise" demolished under the destruction hammers of opposition.

It's a case of history repeating itself. Empires have come and gone. Eras open and close. Somewhere along the line the fire of emulation has fueled other foremen to aspire to the top.

The Baltimore Orioles did it last year. The Saskatchewan Roughriders did it this year. Who knows what will happen? The Montreal Canadiens, the National Hockey League champions and the pick of the experts are in the doldrums. Other teams are picking up the slack.

Tis a strange sporta world we live in, boss.

Who knows, some of these days even you will get your signals crossed and pick a winner.

Habs' Pollock Fishing In Minors!

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Montreal Canadiens lack of success this season is worrying the club's brass.

The Canadiens, defending National Hockey League and Stanley Cup champions, have won seven, lost eight and tied one in 16 games this year and are deadlocked for fourth place with Boston Bruins.

The situation is grim enough in the eyes of the club's brass to send general manager Sam Pollock on a road trip for a good look at Montreal bands in the minor leagues.

Should this weekend turn out to be another "lost weekend" some of the club's players may be on the road as well—travelling by bus in the minors.

The Canadiens play host to league - leading Chicago Black Hawks tonight while Detroit Red Wings visit Toronto Maple Leafs and New York Rangers travel to Boston.

BLAME INJURIES

So far, Montreal coach The Blake and the club brass have refused to push the panic button. They point to injuries as a major factor in the club's poor start.

Pollock will take in tonights Quebec - Cleveland AHL game and will then move on to St. Louis and Houston of the Central Professional Hockey League. His objective is to get a first-hand rating on players who did well during the Canadiens' training camp.

Tonight's game will be the third meeting between the Chicago and Montreal. Chicago has won two previous games -5-3 and 5-0.

SAM POLLOCK

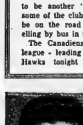
The Canadiens will face Stan Mikita, who is off in a rush for his third scoring title with 11 goals and 17 assists, seven points better than team-mate Bobby Hull's pace when he had a record 97 points last season.

Dennis Hull, Bobby's 22-year-old brother, is also going at a fast pace with eight goals and 10 assists and is tied for fourth place in the scoring race with Bernie (Boom Boom) Geoffrion of New York.

The Rangers will be looking for their fifth victory in a row and 10th in 11 games when they take on the Bruins. The Rangers are tied for second place with the Maple Leafs.



New York netminder Ed Giacomin hasn't allowed a goal against him in two hours, 46 minutes and nine seconds of hockey. That isn't an NHL record, but it means a lot to Rangers fans.

The playoff-starved New York fans are jumping for joy at the team's current second - place standing and they also seem to be jumping the gun.

A club spokesman said Thursday the club received two telephone calls Thursday morning asking when playoff tickets would be on sale.

The regular season doesn't end until April 2. The Rangers have qualified for Stanley Cup competition only once in the last eight years.

Boston's Murray Oliver is a doubtful starter for tive game. He suffered a broken toe last Sunday in Boston's 5-4 loss to the Hawks when he was hit by a Bobby Hull shot.

Drop 6-5 Decision

Mo-Hawks Late Bid Falls Short

By GARRY ALEXANDER
Staff Sportswriter

COLLINGWOOD—A three-goal comeback bid in the final nine minutes fell one short of success for the Belleville Mo-Hawks here last night.

They dropped a close 6-5 decision to the OHA Senior loop's front-running Georgian Chimas in a game that saw much of the action in the late going.

Just over 800 fans braved the cold and a near-blizzard snowstorm to see a contest lacking in color and excitement.

Only one minor penalty, shot to the winners, was assessed. The clubs played a scoreless first period and for much of the game, attacks were isolated with neither club able to sustain a dangerous blitz.

Belleville makes the long haul up this way again tomorrow for a 2:30 battle with the Barrie Flyers.

The Mo-Hawks never led in last night's affair but twice they overcame leads and in coach Floyd Crawford's words, "at least we didn't fold when the opposition struck ahead initially."

It was 3-3 in Collingwood's favor after two periods and the locals headed threatened to run away with it by opening a 5-2 spread mid-way through the third.

But the Mo-Hawks fought back.

Brown rattled a slap shot past Chuck Jewell from just inside the blueline at 11:28. Taylor netted it into a tight match again at 14:15. He took Greshlah's headman pass in the slot and hooked the puck around Jewell just as he was hauled down for a 5-4 game.

Fern St. Onge shoved the homesters two up shortly after when Ludger Doucet appeared to have trouble following a quick around-the-net play.

Again the Mo-Hawks stormed back and Menard punched the disc home from a goal-mouth pileup, almost leading to the Belleville goal judge being attacked in his cage by irate Collingwood fans.

The goal was allowed, however, but several close calls, two with Doucet out in front of a ninth attacker, failed to produce the equalizer.

McComb's high shot and John Lumley's ice-bugger beat Doucet earlier in the third for the three-goal margin.

Dave McComb, the league's top scorer, also opened the scoring at 1.40 of the second heat when he broke in and trickled a shot off Doucet's pads.

Darling got that back, snapping his scoring slump, little over a minute later with a 20-footer but Bill Abbott converted a quick pleasout from Smith at 5.30.

Menard made it 2-2 at 14.24, lping a shot by Baker past Jewell with the puck still in mio-air.

Ray Garipey intercepted a clearing attempt and passed it nctward at 17.50. St. Onge was tied up in front of the net but the puck hit a body and deflected home for the goal that put the Chimas ahead to stay.

Both Doucet and Jewell have had better nights. The winners held a 31-26 shooting margin but the Mo-Hawks had a 12-8 edge in the third.

The clubs missed one great opportunity each in the dull first. Brown's pass put Bob McAlpine in alone around 16.00 but the puck bounced away from him. "Hec" Barinard failed to beat Doucet after breaking in along on the return rush.

Minnie Menard led Belleville's point-getters for the second consecutive game. He scored two goals and helped on another. Gary Darling and Bob Taylor each had a goal and assist and Wayne "Weiner" Brown the other goal. John "Shaker" Baker, with two, Eddie Marineau, Lionel Boily, Floyd Crawford, Rick Bradford and Gary Greshlah drew assists.

Varsity Sinks Marlins

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hank Monteith scored three consecutive second-period goals Friday night to lead University of Toronto Blues to a 9-1 trouncing of McMaster University Marlins in an Ontario - Quebec Athletic Association hockey game.

The Marlins trailed the powerful Blues by only 3-1 after the first period.

The win put the Blues alone in first place with a 4-0 record, a point ahead of University of Montreal Carabins.

In other games Friday, University of Western Ontario Mustangs mounted a 51-shot attack to shutout Laval Rouge et Or 6-0 and University of Waterloo Warriors gained a 3-3 tie with McGill University Redmen.

Football Twain Meets

NEW YORK (AP)—The National and American football leagues met in joint session for the first time Friday to discuss pre-season exhibition games between teams in the two circuits.

Although no games nor dates were announced, commissioner Pete Rozelle of the two leagues said: "We found that it was not as difficult to arrange games as had been feared."

Rozelle said all nine AFL teams will play at least one game with an NFL team, however, not all NFL teams will be able to fit an AFL team into their schedules.

Among the games that are expected to be played are Houston-Dallas, San Diego-Los Angeles and Oakland-San Francisco.

There was no announcement on the mechanics of operating a common playoff bowl. Rozelle said there were no serious problems and he hoped the matter could be resolved by telephone and without another meeting.

As the two leagues adjourned their meeting and officials headed home, there still was no firm date for the Super Bowl between the two league champions to be played at the Los Angeles Coliseum. It probably will be played Sunday, Jan. 15.

Junior "A" Cutup

Hawks, Marlies In Stitches

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The needle and thread played almost as big a role as goals Friday night when Toronto Marlboros tangled with St. Catharines Black Hawks in an Ontario Hockey Association Junior A game.

The Marlboros won it 5-3, but not before four players left the ice at various times to have head and face gashes stitched.

Al Osborne, who got two Marlboro goals, also suffered two facial cuts—one for five stitches and the other for seven.

St. Catharines goalie Larry Holmes needed seven stitches to close a cut on his forehead. And Toronto's Chris Evans and Tom Martin also had head cuts stitched.

That made the action in other games tame by comparison. Kitchener Rangers got two unanswered goals in the third period for a 3-3 victory over Hamilton Red Wings and London Nationals dumped Niagara Falls Flyers 7-4 on the strength of three goals by John Mercer.

In Toronto, Mike Byers joined the wounded Osborne with a two-goal performance as the Marlboros outshot St. Catharines 34-24.

Just A Formality

Brewer Now A National--Almost

WINNIPEG (CP)—Only a formality stands between former all - star defenceman Carl Brewer and the amateur status he has been seeking for more than three months.

The break in his stalemate with the National Hockey League came Friday when NHL president Clarence Campbell announced the way for Brewer's return to amateur ranks came through a liberalization of regulations.

Brewer, who ended a seven-year career with Toronto Maple Leafs in the spring of 1965, had gone into voluntary retirement but decided this year to seek amateur status and a berth on Canada's national team.

Friday's decision clears the way for Brewer to be placed on the voluntary retirement list, the only roster from which he can seek reinstatement and amateur status.

The 28-year-old player's counsel, Hal Eagleson, said in Toronto that he could be "in the Nationals' colors by Monday."

CARL BREWER

★ ★ ★

His formal application for reinstatement must be countersigned by Maple Leaf Gardens and sent on to the NHL central registry.

Eagleson says: "Twenty-four hours after the central registry receives his application, he should have clearance."

Brewer was attending a Nationals' practice Friday when the first informed. He was dubious at first. Later, when the information was confirmed, he said: "I am grateful to the people who have given me so much help."

"Above all, I am indebted to my attorney and friend, Allan Eagleson."

During his lengthy battle with the NHL for reinstatement, Brewer was selling tickets for the CAHA centennial hockey tournament here Jan. 1-6 and working two days a week as an Indian affairs officer at Kenora, Ont.

He dressed for a Nationals' practice Friday night and said: "This is a great team—a great team. I am proud to be a member of it.

"I have left the Maple Leafs —for personal reasons" — he turned his back on a $20,000-plus NHL contract. At that time, he said, he fully intended never to play hockey again.

Minnesota Twins Take A Chance

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Dean Chance and Bo Belinsky, once the most notorious off-field duo in baseball, have had one more fling — but only through the drafting and dealing at the annual meetings.

California Angels completed the link as the meetings neared an end Friday when they traded Chance, the Cy Young Award winner in 1964, to Minnesota Twins for first baseman Don Mincher, outfielder Jimmie Hall and pitcher Pete Cimino. Houston Astros triggered the fling at the start of the meetings by drafting Belinsky from the minor leagues.

The Angels ended the Hollywood high links of the dashing duo exactly two years ago when they traded Belinsky to Philadelphia Phillies.

Chance's turn came Friday.

NOTES LOSS

"That's a fine pitcher we gave up," Angels' manager Bill Rigney said. "He has the finest arm in the American League. I can't replace that arm. There's no way I ever could do that.

"I'm reluctant to lose him, but we had to get nine men on the field, so to speak. We didn't have a first baseman, and we needed some punch."

Chance, a 6-foot baseball's best pitcher three seasons ago when he compiled a 20-9 mark, a 1.65 earned run average and 11 shutouts, followed Maury Wills and Tommy Davis in one of the most similar trading markets in recent years.

Wills went from Los Angeles to Pittsburgh and Davis from Los Angeles to New York Mets during the meetings that saw 10 teams make six deals involving 19 players.

Rigney was hopeful Chance's departure could pave the way for his younger pitchers to come through.

"This will give some of our younger pitchers a chance," he said. "I'm hoping Jorge Rubio will step in and say 'I'm It.' He has the best curve in our organization. His 15 strikeouts against Cleveland on the last day of the season impressed me.

"We're hoping he can join Marcelino Lopez, George Brunet and Fred Newman as our fourth starter.

"I also hope Cimino is the sleeper in the deal. I like him. I feel he's going to be a good part of our bullpen this year."

Cimino, a 24-year-old right-hander, was 2-5 as a rookie last season. Hall, who hit 33 homers as a rookie in 1963, hasn't reached that figure again. Mincher hit 16 homers last season.

Macs Whip Trenton, Take Over Second

By GEORGE H. CARVER
Sports Editor

A PYRRY - size goalie held the opposing "giants" almost at bay here last night when the Quinte McFarlands turned back the Trenton Apple Kings' bid for their first victory. The city kids won the Eastern Ontario Junior "B" League title 6-2.

Fourteen - year - old Gary Hunt playing with the aplomb and poise of a veteran in the Trenton nets, stole the star thunder from both crews with an outstanding performance.

Not for behind Hunt was the McFarlands net guardian Bob Forrester who was robbed of a shutout midway through the third period when the Kings made their comeback bid. Forrester, too kicked out 43 drives.

The Macs racked up a four-goal lead in the first period and were held to a single count in the second. They upped the count to five 40 seconds after the final frame started when Trenton suddenly came to life and pushed home two goals in a little more than a minute.

The Junior Macs polled into undisputed second place in the standings when the Cobourg Cougars turned back Oshawa by a 6-2 score.

Fi was scrambly hockey for two periods with the Macs four first - frame goals interesting a rout. Young Mr. Hunt kicked out 18 shots while his mates potted six at the other end. The Kings were outshot 20-16 in the second frame but edged the winners 10-9 in the final period in a desperate bid to cut the margin.

The Kings were almost woefully inadequate in front of the nets except for the last period. Three times they had a two - man advantage and twice they failed to beat Forrester. They lacked organized power playa.

But they checked hard and several times cut off dangerous city forays.

But in the third frame with the Quinte's Potts and Townsend in the hosegow, Dan Dixons blazing rebreaking slapshot from 30 feet out gave them a new lease of life. Three minutes later Jim Flemin poked Chuck Howards goalmouth pass past Forester to cut the gap to 6-2.

Steve White opened the scoring after eight minutes of the first period - slipping the puck under Hunt for the tally. Four minutes later Billy Hopkins slashed home Sharpe's right boards goalmouth pass to up the count to 2-0 and 63 seconds later White took Ray Stewarts pass to make it 3-0.

With Erickson in the sin-bin Ron Riley popped the score to 4-0 on a foray with Sharpe and Hopkins.

Trenton showed better drive at this time and Forrester came up with some sensational saves from incoming attackers most of them in the clear.

After five minutes of the second frame Hunt had no chance on Riley's blazing corner - high drive, the puck blasting in and out of the net before the light went on.

Hopkins combined with Riley and Sharpe to make it 6-0 after 27 seconds of the third period had elapsed.

Then came The Kings desperate bid that resulted in two goals in three minutes— and that was that.

White, Hopkins and Riley shared the Mac goals with Sharpe getting four assists. Also helping were Townsend, Fleming, Neil, and Stewart. Hopkins had a pair with Riley getting a single.

Dixon and Plumb scored for the Kings with Howard getting two assists. The Macs had nine minors with Trenton amassed four.

Hornets Win Six In Row

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sid Abel's shuffle appears to have produced two winning hands for Detroit Red Wings hockey organization.

Abel, who dropped a number of players from his Detroit club earlier this week, won his first National Hockey League game in seven starts Thursday night.

Goals by Ted Taylor, Billy Harris and Parker MacDonald gave the Hornets a first-place tie in the Western Division with Rochester Americans.

Dennis Kassian scored the Buffalo goal.

Stanley, Bower

Leafs Senior Citizens!

TORONTO (CP) — A lot of people are looking forward to pipe, slippers and fireside when it comes time to collect that pension.

But not everyone—there are two oldsters in Toronto who could still be skating, swinging sticks and shooting pucks.

Allan (Sam) Stanley will be 41 in three months and could still be around when he becomes eligible for National Hockey League pension payments at age 45.

The other is Stanley's teammate, goalie Johnny Bower, who is listed on Toronto Maple Leaf records as 42.

Stanley, queried on the possibility of becoming the first NHL player to hit pension age while still active, replied:

"I might be second. I think Bower may be the first."

With a grin, he added:

"Bower may even be drawing it now."

CITES MAIN AIM

Stanley, in his 19th NHL year as a defenceman that was him in the colors of Providence, New York, Vancouver, Chicago and Boston as well as Toronto, says his first objective is to make the exclusive 20-year club.

Of the 10 who have served 20 years in the NHL, only two are still active—Gordie Howe of Detroit and Andy Bathgate. Dit Clapper and Bill Gadsby have retired.

Stanley believes that the chances of people like himself and Bower making pension age in the last league will be enhanced by next year's expansion.

With the league going from six teams to 12, present teams will be required to supply players to the newcomers.

Stratton Collects 6 Assists

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Art Stratton set a Central Hockey League record for most assists in one game by collecting six Friday night as St. Louis Braves downed Memphis Wings 11-5.

In the other CHL game, Ken Campbell scored three goals to spark Tulsa Oilers to a 5-2 victory over Houston, snapping the Apollos' three - game winning streak.

Stratton had shared the old record of five assists in one game with five others.

Oscar Gaudet scored three goals and three other players collected two each as the Braves hit their season high and took over sole possession of third place, breaking a tie with Idle Omaha Knights.

Real Lemieux and Nick Libett scored for Memphis.

Henry's Had It

Camille; Tout Fini!

QUEBEC (CP) — Camille Henry, the little centre who has spent a dozen years in the National Hockey League with New York Rangers and Chicago Black Hawks, said Friday he is finished with hockey for good.

Henry, who has been under suspension and on the reserve list of St. Louis Flyers of the Central Pro League since October, made the announcement in a statement he writes for L'Evenement.

St. Louis is a farm team of Chicago Black Hawks of the NHL and Henry says he doesn't want to see Tommy Ivan, Chicago general manager, him to another club for next year's NHL expansion program.

Henry says he believes any such deal could net the Hawks $75,000.

In addition he says he has a persistent sore back, picked up while playing with Chicago.

Earlier this year he had attempted to gain his release to play with Quebec Aces of the American Hockey League.

The year the diminutive centre broke in with the Rangers —1953-54—he won the Calder Memorial Trophy of the skipar with 24 goals and 19 assists in 66 games.

In the 1957-58 season he won the Lady Byng Award for his combined fine play and good conduct on the ice.

Larks Flying Early

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Alouettes of the Eastern Football Conference are off to an early start in their recruiting program for the 1967 season.

Benny Russell, a highly recommended quarterback from the University of Louisville, is due here this weekend for contract talks with the Montreal brass.

Bob Weber, Als' offensive coach, said Friday that Russell's record last season placed him in the top six in total offence in the Missouri Valley Conference and among the top 10 in the passing department.

Two others are Ron Edwards of Utah State and Rick Egloff of Wyoming.

Meanwhile, Darrell Mudra, Als' head coach, has been touring England, where he is said to have found two rugger players who will be given a football tryout here.

Tiger-Cats Interested In Young

HAMILTON (CP) — The Canadian rights to Jim Young, Hamilton halfback who runs back punts for Minnesota Vikings of the National Football League, have gone to British Columbia Lions—but his home town is still interested.

Toronto Argonauts gave up the rights to Young Friday in a deal which brought them defensive end Dick Thornton and halfback Bill Symons.

Jake Gaudaur, president of Hamilton Tiger-Cats, said his club was "interested in him in so far as he came from Hamilton."

"But we never had any valid claim to him. He went to Queen's and Toronto drafted him. We approached Toronto on a couple of occasions, going back a couple of years.

"As things stand, we'd still be interested in talking to whoever has the rights to him if the situation presented itself."

Outdoor Tips And Tricks

BY BOB BLAIND

Some fishing seasons closed on November 30th, that is to say bass, musky and trout.

Pike and pickerel are open in the Quinte area all winter long and the die hard pickerel fishermen are still fishing at Number One Dam at the Trent River with slim results.

I see they have finally come out with a portable, ice hut made of canvas with a folding frame. This but will hold two fishermen comfortably. Just the thing we have been looking for, something light and small, handy to pack into some of those northern lakes.

Still lots of ducks in the lake, if you are brave enough to go out in the cold and snow we have had the last couple of days.

Lake Ontario is an angry lake in the fall and is not to be trifled with, usually rough and very cold. Use extreme care when hunting the big lake.

Partridge, duck and pheasant season is open until December 15th so still have a little time yet to do some bird hunting.

We are being invaded again by many out of town hunters mostly from the Toronto-Oshawa area.

These so-called hunters are trespassing all along the line from their home towns to Napanee, breaking down fences, leaving gates open, letting cattle out. They shoot anything that moves from chipmunks on up.

The farmer-hunter relation is straining to the point that most farmers are posting their land and not even allowing neighbors to hunt on it.

The local game wardens and the Provincial Police are busy every weekend checking these people and making arrests, but there seems to be no end to the numbers of these fellows coming down this way to hunt.

This year we seem to have a bumper crop of rabbits of all kinds and there's lots of hunting for every one but if we have too many more of the outsiders coming into the area the rabbits will be no place for anyone to hunt.

I think the answer is still a special county hunting licence.

Christmas is just a few weeks away but it should be no problem to pick out a nice gift for the outdoors men.

There are many nice gift items for the hunter, the fisherman and the camper. In fact the women and children of these outdoor fraternities would enjoy a new fishing outfit or a sleeping bag or a new rifle or maybe a sticdoo this Christmas.

Speaking about skidoos the Belleville Fish and Game Club are planning skidoo races this winter. All you snow machine fans get lots of practice and join the fun.

All fish and game such as bear and deer should be entered in the local competition month as the prizes for the biggest fish of most categories and the largest bear, deer and moose, will be presented at the January dinner meeting of the Belleville Fish and Game Club. Date to be announced at a later time.

Well it's supposed to freeze up tonight with some snow, the ducks should be flying in the morning, here we go again.

Curling Cues By Hec Gervais

The Situation: You are trailing in the game, playing a good deal. The score is either up the front, the more you will have to draw behind.

The Strategy: This is the time to play short rocks, out in front of the rings, hoping the opponents will either miss, or be forced to hit the nose and stick, and then you can draw behind and count more than one on the end. The more you clutter up have to draw behind.

Today's Tip: Concentration is the key to shot making. Concentrate on hitting the broom. Concentrate on the proper weight.

Nicholson Arrives In West

VANCOUVER (CP) — Labor Minister Nicholson and Mr. Justice G. F. Gregory of the British Columbia Supreme Court were expected to fill key roles today in a labor dispute that has halted longshore activity on the Pacific coast from Vancouver to Prince Rupert.

Mr. Nicholson arrived Friday night from Ottawa with Deputy Labor Minister Bernard Wilson and arranged meetings for today with the B.C. Maritime Employers Association and with the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union.

He promised to remain in B.C. for several days, at least. If he must return to Ottawa later next week, he said, Mr. Wilson would remain here "as long as necessary."

Mr. Justice Gregory, meanwhile, said Friday night he would announce his decision today on a bid by importers for an injunction that would compel the waterfront employers to call longshore gangs back to work to unload mandarin oranges from Japan. He heard argument from both sides until 11 p.m. Friday.

FRUIT MAY SPOIL

The importers said the oranges were perishable, would have little value if they missed the Christmas trade and that the banks and other employers and longshoremen did not concern either the importers or the public.

The waterfront dispute began Nov. 17 when about 30 longshore foremen walked off the docks to back up demands for bargaining recognition by the employers. They set up picket lines the following day, which the 4,000 B.C. longshoremen refused to cross.

The lines were removed Nov. 21 on a court injunction, but the foremen stayed out. Longshoremen returned to work and were accused by employers of staging a deliberate slowdown.

After a week of day-to-day hiring and firing of longshore gangs, the employers said Wednesday they would call no more longshoremen to work until the union gave an assurance in advance of a day's work or a day's pay.

The union has refused to do this, claiming that any slowdown was because of the lack of efficient supervisory personnel—namely the striking foremen. It said employer complaints were being processed through normal grievance channels as outlined in the contract.

More than 75 ships now are idle along the B.C. coast, including 25 in Vancouver waiting to take on grain cargoes and three waiting to unload mandarin oranges. Some freighters have sailed from Vancouver with Christmas cargo still in their holds. Two more sailed without taking on expected cargo and two shiploads of oranges from Japan were diverted to Seattle for trucking to Vancouver.

At least 2,000 loaded boxcars of grain are waiting to be unloaded. The CPR and the CNR have placed embargoes on further grain shipments from the Prairies to the West Coast.

Max Hurren, president of the unrecognized foremen's local of the British Columbia Maritime Employers Association, said the strike of foremen would end the strike

No Recession Seen for U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government predicts a slowdown in the rate of growth of U.S. business spending for new plants and equipment next year —a key economic factor certain to be weighed by President Johnson as he ponders the possibility of a tax increase.

Johnson received a report on the subject Friday as well as a glowing forecast for the country's economy in 1967. Gardner Ackley, chairman of the president's council of economic advisers, said prosperity will continue next year, no recession is in sight and prices should level off.

As Ackley was conferring with Johnson, the labor department reported unemployment in November dipped to 3.7 per cent for the third month this year—the lowest level since 1953—a key economic factor certain to be weighed by President Johnson as he ponders the possibility of a tax increase.

The commerce department said the securities and exchange commission predicted plant and equipment spending by business will increase at a rate of seven per cent in the first half of 1967, compared with the 16.5 per cent rate of growth projected for all of 1966.

Johnson has said he hopes to decide around the first of the year on whether to ask Congress for a tax increase to help finance the Viet Nam war and fight inflation.

New York State Storm Abates

BUFFALO, N.Y (AP) — A storm that howled over western New York Friday abated today, to the relief of about 300 persons who had been trapped in makeshift accommodations.

Many sought refuge Friday in the Buffalo Armory as the storm, described as overnight homes for more than 250 men, women and children.

Pro Teams Like Redmen

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Alouettes of the Eastern Football Conference and Montreal Beavers of the Continental Football League have expressed interest in Peter Howlett, a fullback with McGill Redmen of the Ontario-Quebec Athletic Association for several seasons.

The Alouettes would appear to have the upper hand as head coach Darrell Mudra has already had one negotiation meeting with the Montreal product, named the most valuable player at McGill for the last two seasons.

Howlett, also the most valuable player of the senior intercollegiate league in 1965, says he is undecided about playing professional football but is ready to listen to offers.

Safe Driving Week Cuts Toll But 50 Canadians To Die

By MAURICE SWITZER

Barring a miracle, at least 50 persons will die on Canadian highways during Safe Driving Week, which began Thursday. That is, if the recent trend continues true to form. There is some consolation in the fact that an average of 50 per cent fewer deaths occur during the week designated as traffic safety week than in the other 51 weeks of the year. But not much. Last year, almost 5,000 Canadians died in traffic mishaps, and the total economic loss from 295,000 road accidents was estimated at $250 million.

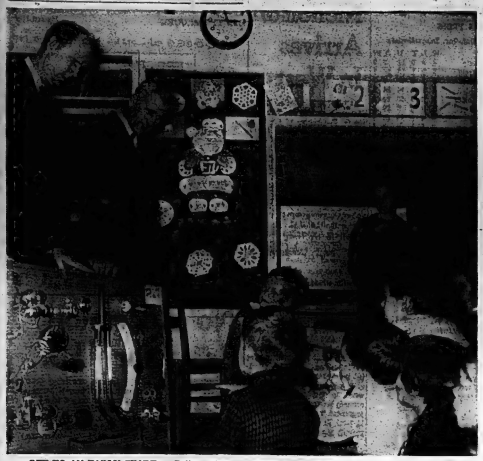
It is estimated that some 20 per cent of all licensed drivers in this country are involved in accidents or brushes with the law each year, exclusive of minor offences such as parking tickets. Statistics like these confirm police suspicions that the most unsafe component in a vehicle involved in an accident is "the nut behind the wheel."

Safe Driving Week is not an annual contest to bring the number of traffic fatalities below an estimated figure. It is designed to focus the national attention of drivers and pedestrians on the necessity of reducing the occurrence of tragedy on the highways.

Everyone agrees that every week should be Safe-Driving Week. Police throughout the country devote many hours weekly in a dogged effort to reduce Canada's road-death score. Much of their work in this regard is concentrated in schools ,where young minds are often surprisingly receptive to common sense.

Safety co-ordinators Bob Hall and Gord Oliver, of the local city and provincial police departments, visited some 11,000 Quinte area elementary school children this year in an effort to make traffic safety education something that every person should grow up with.

Using informal lectures, films, and displays, children are shown that observing safe practices while riding a bicycle or walking along the road are contributions they can make in rendering Canada's highways less dangerous. The "Elmer the Safety Elephant" program in public schools is just one way in which Constables Hall and Oliver can bring home to children the importance of cautious and sensible traffic behavior.



Addresses given to home and school groups, service clubs, and other organizations are also part and parcel of the informative program presented by police authorities in the public interest.

A great deal has been said of late on so-called "defensive driving," as a possible remedy for many of our highway maladies. A Canadian Highway Safety Council official has said that defensive driving implies "little more than common sense. Simply, it means learning how to recognize potentially dangerous situations, and how to avoid them." The very existence of Canadian winter conditions should be a tremendous incentive for operating a motor vehicle in this manner.

Unfortunately, as if driving did not carry with it almost inherent potential hazards, motorists are often lax enough to introduce danger factors of their own concoction. Prime Minister Pearson this week said: "We all recognize that alcohol and gasoline are too often the blend for disaster behind a steering wheel. Further our streets and highways should not be used as lethal outlets for repressed emotions of aggression nor for disastrous displays of rudeness and defiance."

Most drivers would do well to heed the Prime Minister's call for what he termed "more mature, motorized maturity" on Canadian highways.

Police realize that Safe Driving Week will not convert every motorist or pedestrian into ideal drivers or walkers in seven days. A more readily attainable goal involves the attempt to prove to the Canadian public that much of the highway tragedy that befalls Canadians each year could be avoided.

OFF TO AN EARLY START — Police safety co-ordinators, Constable Robert Hall and Gordon Oliver, hold safety lessons with some 11,000 Quinte area public school children each year. They are seen in informal session with pupils at Harry J. Clarke School.

Thirteen Lives Lost

Traffic accidents claimed at least seven lives across Canada Friday, the second day of Safe-Driving Week.

A Canadian Press survey to midnight local times Friday night showed four deaths in Ontario and one each in New Brunswick, Quebec and Alberta, bringing the two-day total to 13, three fewer than for the two-day period last year. A total of 76 died Dec. 2-7, 1965.

The Canadian Highway Safety Council, which sponsors Safe-Driving Week, made no prediction on the possible toll this year.

and the accidents continue

Statistics show that many people don't drive safely. People just like you. Some people lose a few dollars after an accident, some lose their health and some lose their lives.

Car insurance rates continue to increase. This is caused by more accidents, higher repair costs, higher Court awards, more expensive automobiles and increased medical costs. BUT, if accidents go down, insurance rates go down.

In Canada, a person is killed on the highways every 2 hours, a person is injured every 4 minutes and some time of accident occurs every 90 seconds. Do your part and don't become a statistic.

Britain Kicks Away Dollar Prop

LONDON (Reuters) — Britain has kicked away a multi-million-dollar prop that has been supporting the pound sterling for the last two years.

The British government told the United States Friday it no longer needs access to the $250,000,000 that was earmarked as emergency backing for the pound—and never touched—since November, 1964.

Following soon after an announcement that Britain's gold and currency reserves had increased for the third straight month, the move signified the British government's confidence in the ability of the pound to stand on its own feet.

The finance ministry announcement of a £23,000,000 ($69,000,000) rise in November brought the total gain in the nation's reserves during the three-month period to £46,000,000 ($138,000,000).

Britain has had to pay a premium of one-quarter of one per cent on the emergency backing of $250,000,000. This outlay now will be saved.

Freiman Arts Centre Chairman

OTTAWA (CP) — An Ottawa department store president, Lawrence Freiman, 57, Friday was named chairman of the first board of trustees of the National Arts Centre by State Secretary Judy LaMarsh.

A member of the Canadian Stratford Shakespearean Festival Foundation board of governors, Mr. Freiman also is chairman of the Canadian Festival of the Arts.

Among those named to four-year terms as trustees was Willam Teron, 34, an Ottawa contractor and president of the National Capital Arts Alliance.

Three-year trustees included: Miss Madeleine Gobeil, 29, a professor of French at Carleton University, Ottawa, and Dr. Robertson Davies, 53, editor and publisher of the Peterborough Examiner and master of Massey College, University of Toronto.

Daryl Duke Claims Show "Exciting"

TORONTO (CP) — Daryl Duke, executive producer of the controversial CBC-TV program Sunday, said Friday he has "no reason to defend" an item on his last program which showed a couple in bed answering questions about making love.

"I think it was a good show, an exciting show, and I have no quarrel with anyone," he said. "I think people have every right to phone in and say they don't like it."

U.S. Outlook: Expansion in '67

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — President Johnson received from his chief economic adviser Friday a prediction of continued U.S. prosperity in 1967 and an easing in inflationary pressures.

Johnson and Gardner Ackley, then chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, interrupted a Texas conference on various economic and budget measures to conduct a joint press conference.

The president also announced that 150,000 tons of copper will be released from government stocks in the first two quarters of 1967 for use in defence and defence-supporting industries.

He said, in reply to a question, this could affect current high prices for copper but that was not the purpose.

Johnson stressed that the copper is being released in view of the present tight supply situation.

There still will be 259,000 tons of copper remaining in the stockpile.

As he has earlier, Johnson said he will review all factors involved before reaching a decision on a tax increase.

Johnson estimated income for the ordinary operations of the government at around $117,000,000,000 in the fiscal year which ends June 30. Some government experts have estimated spending in the area of $127,000,000,000 to $130,000,000,000. That would leave a deficit of around $13,000,000,000.

Ackley said it would be impossible to say flatly there will be no recession next year, but he said the outlook is for a continued expansion of the economy at a more orderly rate.

Ackley said one factor in his prediction of a lessening of inflationary pressures was the outlook for farm prices. He said he doesn't expect food prices will increase as they did this year.

And, he said, the growth of the economy should, be at a more moderate rate.

Tight Money Slows U.S. House Starts

NEW YORK (AP) — Construction of new houses across the United States has been largely this year as interest rates climb.

"Many families are having trouble getting money to buy new homes.

"Home building has all but been shattered by tight money," said Burton E. Smith, president of the California Real Estate Association. "I never have seen it so tight, so bad. If and when building starts up again, it will take the builders two years to catch up with the demand."

"Mortgage money isn't available," said Norman McIntosh, senior mortgage and loan officer at the Prudential Institution for Savings in Boston. "I'm just sitting there twiddling my thumbs."

An Associated Press survey of major cities found:

Housing starts in southern California this year have been the lowest since 1944.

In Dallas, they are the lowest in six years, with apartment construction down 39 per cent and houses off 17 per cent.

In Minneapolis, sales of houses have been down and rentals up.

In Seattle, new housing construction has been down, but there are up 30 per cent since 1965 in the midst of an economic boom.

In Chicago, George Arquilla Jr., Burnside Construction Co. president, said tight money had hurt most of the builders and put some out of business.

FEDERAL RATE UP

In Kansas City, Mo., Dale Thompson, president of City Bond and Mortgage, estimated the decline in new starts at 25 to 30 per cent. The flow of mortgage money for one - family houses has slowed to a trickle, Kansas City builders reported.

The builders blame tight money — the difficulty they have in obtaining loans to finance construction of houses and the problems families have in obtaining mortgages to buy the houses.

Lending institutions have been putting their money in other types of loans on which interest rates are higher.

In a move to attract more funds, the government recently increased the interest rate on federally - insured mortgages for veterans and others to six per cent from 5¾.

It was the third increase this fiscal year. The rate was 5¼ per cent last February.

The increase makes the rate of return on federally - insured mortgages close to the prevailing rates on conventional mortgages, which have averaged about 6.35 per cent.

Robert C. Weaver, secretary of housing and urban development, said he hoped the higher rate would reduce the discounts, or points, that lenders have been charging on federally-backed mortgages, which were used in finance about 40 per cent of all new homes built in the United States last year.

TOURIST ATTRACTION—The Soviet tourist liner Alexandre Pushkin, at dock in Montreal harbor, looms large in Soviet plans to boost the tourist trade between Canada and Russia. Intourist, the Soviet state travel agency, says an "all-time record" number of Canadian tourists visited Russia this year. (CP Photo)

Growing Number of Canadians Visiting Russia as Tourists

MOSCOW (CP) — Increasing numbers of Canadians are coming to the Soviet Union as tourists, says the Soviet state travel agency Intourist.

Leonid Khodorkov, vice president of the big travel monopoly, is quoted as saying Canadian tourists to U.S.S.R. this year were "an all-time record."

Intourist says about 4,000 Canadians visited the Soviet Union last year and about 3,000 the year before. Final figures for this year won't be available until February or March. However, the Soviet embassy in Ottawa says it issued more than 3,000 visas to Canadians by mid-November.

The new passenger steamship service between Montreal and Leningrad looms large in Soviet plans to boost tourist trade from Canada and North America in general.

In its first season, however, the new Soviet - owned liner Alexandre Pushkin carried only a little more than 2,000 passengers on six round-trips. This works out to a bit more than 350 a sailing, and many passengers didn't go all the way but left the ship at Helsinki, Copenhagen, London or Quebec City.

The 19,000-ton Pushkin's capacity is 668 passengers.

THERE'S BEEN NO LOSS'

"In my opinion this is not such a bad result," says Capt. Nikolai Malakhov, head of the passenger fleet department of the Soviet merchant marine ministry. "Remember it was our first year of service."

Asked about the final results of the season's operations, Capt. Malakhov said they haven't been precisely calculated yet "but there's no loss."

Noting that many lines operating in the fiercely competitive North Atlantic market are in dire financial straits, he said "we are in better condition."

Malakhov was not being whimsical. Profit-and-loss considerations of the kind that make or break an enterprise under capitalism have little application to similar Communist enterprises.

Politics and economics are inextricably interwoven in any venture such as the Pushkin so that it could be a flop financially by Western accounting methods and still be a success in the eyes of its Soviet sponsors. It probably enjoys unlimited state subsidies.

Malakhov predicted that business will be better next year when the Pushkin again makes six round-trips.

It will encounter new competition, however. Air Canada and Aeroflot have just inaugurated a Montreal-Moscow service in which each airline makes one round-trip a week.

Soviet efforts to attract more Canadian tourists are part of a wider program to expand its tourist business generally. A government official estimates that the country will receive 1,500,000 tourists this year, most of them from Communist countries.

Fight Against TV

RUDDINGTON, England (CP)— Company director Cyril Greenway, worried that television is ruining the social life of his community, has founded an anti-television club to get people away from their sets. Plead Guilty To Picket Line Offences

NAPANEE — Last dumblings of the storm created by the C.I.L. strike in Millhaven last summer have died away.

Thursday the last of those charged with a variety of offences pleaded guilty before Magistrate James Garvin and were sentenced. Most of them concerned incidents arising when workers attempted to cross the picket line.

Clifford Young of Bath, Reginald Thompson of RR 1 Napanee and Richard Franklin of RR 3, Collins Bay, pleaded guilty to obstructing the highway.

Pleading guilty either to damaging motor vehicles or attempting to do so were Donald Edward Cassell of Kingston, Kenneth Brooks of RR 2 Napanee, Horst Rilling of RR 1 Bath, Albert Hosier of Napanee, Charles Lyons of Napanee, Douglas Burns of Amherstview and Robert Eaton of Sydenham, who pleaded guilty to damaging two cars.

Andrew Berga of Sydenham pleaded guilty to having obstructed Corporal Wallace Martin in the execution of his duty, and Harvey Dahm of the same place to assaulting Austin Straw.

In each case the sentence was the same: a fine of $15 plus the costs of the court for each offence.

Samuel Sweet of Napanee was fined $50 and Margitrazie Garvin on two charges of uttering. He had submitted two old age pension cheques issued to Adam Sweet and had collected money on them, knowing the signature was forged. One was for October and the second for November. He was sentenced to five months in jail on each charge, the two sentences to run concurrently.

An Oshawa resident, Stanley Scoville, pleaded not guilty to a charge of careless driving, but was found guilty on the evidence. He was fined $10 and costs.

Two Cars Demolished

NAPANEE — Within 24 hours the Napanee detachment of the O.P.P. investigated two serious accidents which sent three people to hospital and demolished two cars. Total damage is estimated at $4,300.

Tuesday evening a native of India, five years in Canada, lost control of his car on Highway 401 just east of the Camden East Road, and smashed into a rock cut in the median. Dr. Sreenivas Ashlatha was returning from Montreal, where he had visited his family, to his apartment in Weston, near his place of employment. His car dropped on to the shoulder on the north side of the road, and went out of control when he attempted to bring it back to the highway.

He was taken to the Lennox and Addington County Hospital with cuts on his face and left hand. There is a possibility that he may be able to be moved to Montreal within a few days. Damage to the two - year - old car is estimated at $1,200. The accident occurred at 10.45 p.m.

Dr. Ashlatha taught engineering in Toronto on first coming to Toronto, but is now employed as an engineer.

A charge of careless driving has been laid against George Charles Boucher of Kingston whose late model car left the road, went into a field and turned over three times. The accident occurred at 6.45 p.m. Wednesday on the Hazzburg Road south of Roseboy Dairy Farm. He and his passenger, Gordon Dickson, also of Kingston, were taken to the Lennox and Addington County General Hospital where they were seen by a doctor and ordered transferred to Kingston General hospital. Dickson who apparently had chest injuries, is still in hospital. Boucher has been discharged. Damage to the car is estimated at $2,500.

Set Up Extra Parcel Depot In Armouries

NAPANEE — Due to the lack of space in the Napanee Post Office, it will be necessary this year to establish a Parcel Post Office to handle the incoming Parcel Post mail during the Christmas season, C. C. Charlebois, district director of Postal Services has announced.

The Parcel Post Depot will be set up in the Armouries and will be in operation from Dec. 8 to Dec. 24 inclusive, and will open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. each day except Sundays.

When a person receives a parcel post card, either in his lock box or at general delivery, he must present this card to the Parcel Post Depot in the Armouries in order to receive his parcel. No parcels will be given unless the card is presented.

Patrons mailing outgoing parcels are to mail them at the Parcel Post wicket at the Napanee Post Office as at present, the district director advises.

The Napanee Post Office has long been outgrown. Even at normal times, the employees have difficulty working in cramped quarters. A new Federal Building is planned for the town on the site of the present Armouries. It will house the Post Office as well as all other Federal offices.

This is the second year that a Parcel Post Depot has been set up in the Armouries for the Christmas season.

Medicare Stalled; Turn to Pensions

OTTAWA (CP)—The government's medical care insurance bill, after another buffeting in the Commons Friday, rests on the shelf temporarily as MPs turn Monday to consideration of supplementing old age security payments.

Health Minister MacEachen, steering both measures through the House, was committed to the Monday start on the proposed boost in payments to the needy elderly.

He had hoped for passage of the medical care bill first. At Friday's House adjournment he had five consecutive days of debate on the bill behind him, had batted down some dozen proposed opposition amendments and had gained passage for a couple of his own.

But he still needed committee approval for about half the bill.

The measure was approved in principle last July. It provides that the federal government pay half the cost of approved provincial insurance schemes.

The proposed change in the Old Age Security Act would provide additional payments of up to $30 a month above the present $75, provided need can be shown. The change would be effective in January.

DEBATE TIEUP

MPs also spent about two hours on an emergency debate on the West Coast shipping dispute.

Howard Johnston (SC—Okanagan-Revelstoke) drew unanimous agreement when he proposed the debate, including support from Labor Minister Nicholson who left later in the afternoon for Vancouver in an attempt to help settle the ports tieup.

Mr. Johnston said some 10,000 forestry workers will be made idle by next week if the dispute isn't settled, and the B.C. fruit industry is facing intolerable losses.

The B.C. Maritime Employers' Association has stopped calling well longshoremen because of alleged slowdown tactics by the men. Longshoremen say loading delays have been caused by a strike of 190 foremen who want certification of their union local.

The Canada Labor Relations Board has ruled the foremen aren't entitled to bargaining rights because they are supervisory personnel.

Mr. Nicholson said the only solution may be to am..nd the Industrial Relations and Disputes Investigation Act. Opposition Leader Diefenbaker said his party would support such an amendment. He felt the minister's trip would prove ineffective.

On the medical care bill, Mr. MacEachen introduced an amendment that would give provinces the option of excluding basic vision tests by optometrists as a service qualifying for federal contributions.

The amendment, which didn't come to a vote before adjournment, would change the present provision which covers almost all services by physicians. The move was designed to avoid any discrimination against optometrists.

Opposition MPs have already said they feel this amendment is a backward step and the measure is sure to face a tough test when the House returns to study of the bill.

Earlier Friday, Conservative and Social Credit MPs tried unsuccessfully to change the bill's requirement for "universal" coverage of all provincial plans qualifying for federal assistance.

New Democrats lost out on that in their attempt to have private insurance companies ruled out as possible agencies designated by provincial authorities for such purposes as collection of premiums and premiums.

A foreign policy issue was appeared in Friday's session as Finance Minister Sharp reported the United States government has sent Canada two notes protesting proposed Bank Act changes that would have growth of the U.S.-owned Castle Bank of Canada.

Mr. Sharp said final decision on the act amendments would be made in the Canadian interest and it wasn't uncommon for governments to exchange notes on legislation affecting their banks.

Question: We enjoy your travel column ever so much, particularly Items pertaining to Florida. As we are considering a new mermaid show and a new star garden with top notch setting for color photographs.

Between Sarasota and Venice, one of the most urbane areas of the gulf coast, a new amusement park called Floridiand offers a boat town, gardens, an Indian village, deer park and porpoise pool at $1.25 for adults and $1.25 for children.

Fort Meyers newest attraction another trip to Florida this year, could you tell us what new places of interest we might visit? — R. H., Belleville.

Answer: Anyone who stays from the beach long enough will find a new array of tourist attractions competing for his attention this winter in Florida.

One of the most interesting additions is at Tampa's free Busch Gardens. A 1.3 mile monorail will take visitors 33 feet high over the beer baron's gardens and over the African animals housed there, including a herd of elephants.

At St. Petersburg, the movie version of the Bounty, from "Mutiny on the Bounty" is on permanent display in a South Seas setting that even includes a breed-fruit tree. It costs adults 90c and children 50c.

Newest recreation area in the state is Deredin Beach on the Gulf Coast. Formerly known as Caladesi Island, it has been joined to the mainland by a $2,000,000 causeway. It features three miles of the best beach in Florida and it's half a mile wide.

A new sightseeing float, La Carrosa, will take visitors to Tampa on a tour of Ybor City, an old-best Latin Quarter. It'll stop at 12 cigar factories, a Cuban bakeries and social clubs. Tour starts at 10 a.m. daily except Sundays and costs $1.50 for adults.

Fort Lodge, patterned after Matt Dillon's TV home town, is 50 miles west Dee to U.S. 19, six miles north of Weeki Wachee Springs. Weeki-Wachee is a Museum of Science built on the Thomas Edison estate. It will house many of the famous inventor's creations, including a fine collection of the first talking machines. Ocean World, a new marine attraction near Pier 66 in Fort Lauderdale, has a porpoise and a sea lion show, which is as yet not a match for the Seaquarium at Miami or Marineland.

Jacksonville is featuring a new marina and park on the south bank of the St. Johns River, right downtown. There's a new Jungle Prada there which is claimed to be the world's largest.

If you're a first-time visitor, however, don't let any of the new attractions stop you from seeing the Cypress Gardens at Winter Haven. It's probably the best of the State's many attractions and the water show is superb.

AAA WARNING

The American Automobile Association last week issued a warning that a garage racket has been flourishing in the eastern part of Georgia.

"Ludowici, which until recent years, was the centre of vicious speed trap operations, is the focal point of the trouble," says John de Lorenzi, AAA's managing director of public and government relations. "The racket involves car-tampering, phony repairs and exorbitant charges. Also further examination indicate that no repair work was done—for example in one of the cases a starter was removed, sprayed with paint and replaced. Charges are quite high, in the neighborhood of $90."

The AAA's file of complaints was turned over to the Georgia Bureau of Investigation. In a warning to all affiliated clubs, AAA said: "Georgia officials state that steps have been taken to put an end to this vicious racket. If further complaints are received, they will post state troopers at all places complained against.

"Meanwhile, however, we suggest you urge your members travelling U.S. 301 in Georgia to buy their pecans and gasoline in places other than the Ludowici-Long County Area."

Car Engine Needs Heat For Health

By Eugene B. Milmoe

Not all the old cars that slip along like late models are souped up. Many are powered by their original engines — engines that were kept young and healthy by frequent operation at hot running temperatures.

Good operating heat is vital to engine life. Slow speed, short trip, stop-and-go driving doesn't provide this. That's why many engines never really get a chance to warm up properly for any length of time, and engine deposits plus rapid wear are encouraged. Heat is needed to help efficient lubrication and carburetion. It's also needed to burn off combustion by-products —water, carbon and other contaminants. Without this heat, sludge can form and spread gradually throughout the ensine. That's what happens to cars that are constantly operated at subnormal temperatures.

Heartened Thant Starts New Term

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Heartened by a resounding vote of confidence from the General Assembly, U Thant set forth today on another five-year term as secretary - general of the United Nations.

He told the assembly he would "make every effort on a personal basis" to bring peace to war-torn Viet Nam.

Applause rang through the blue and gold assembly hall Friday night as the member states unanimously approved a second term for the former Burmese schoolmaster.

Flashily affected by the ovation, the 57-year-old diplomat told the packed chamber he had been "deeply touched" by the warm praise he had been receiving from the delegates.

"I am confronted by an overwhelming weight of opinion that my continuance as secretary general for another term would serve the higher interests of the organization and thus represent a positive factor in the current situation."

HAS HOPE

Thant expressed keen disappointment over failure to bring peace to Viet Nam, but held hope for the future.

"The threats to peace in many parts of the world, and more particularly in Viet Nam, are for me a continuing source of anxiety and even anguish," he said.

He was pleased there would be Christmas and New Year's truces in Viet Nam.

"I shall seize every occasion to recall that this war must be ended and I will continue to regard it as my duty to make every effort on a personal basis to help promote a solution which will bring peace and justice to the' people of Viet Nam."

Thant's formal acceptance of a new term in the $65,000-a-year post ended 11 months of uncertainty brought on by his statement last January that he was considering stepping down after his first term ran out Nov. 3.

In private conversations many UN diplomats agreed that Thant reversed his stand because he was overwhelmed by the support he received and by arguments that the UN needed him.

Many agreed Thant got little more than lip service comments. There is no evidence that he received any assurances on Viet Nam peace or on financial support for United Nations Peacekeeping operations which are problems he cited Sept. 1 in stating he would not offer himself for a second term.

It was obvious he was unhappy about what he considered the failure of the big powers to make proper use of the UN for resolving disputes.

Most UN diplomats had never accepted his decision as final, but they felt that, with the proper amount of work pressure and of with an appeal to his sense of duty, he would put aside his personal preference to retire. Diplomats told him that the search for a successor would be extremely difficult at a critical time and warned that the result at best might be the choice of a man of mediocre stature. Thant mentioned his sense of frustration to the assembly.

He added: "Although little has happened to brighten the outlook of the months ahead my conviction stands undiminished that the United Nations remains the best instrument by which nations may co-operate for the development and the peace of their people."

Several hours before the assembly acted, Thant accepted a unanimous recommendation of the 15-country Security Council that he serve another term.

Cold, clear weather covered most of Canada Sunday but Ontario and the Prairies braced today for an intense storm moving east from British Columbia

Temperatures around freezing today are forecast in Manitoba and Ontario and heavy snow will hit the northern region. Freezing rain and snowflurries will cover most of southern Ontario.

The Maritimes was the one part of Canada that reported a break—in the sunshine Sunday. Clouds and scattered snowflurries shrouded Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia and freezing temperatures were reported in Newfoundland.

A few isolated snowsqualls kicked up in parts of Ontario and two centres recorded lows for the day. At London it was nine below, breaking the mark of five below set in 1935.

Wiarton registered zero, 10 degrees colder than the record set in 1957.

Cold, windy weather swept across the Prairies Sunday but chinook winds around Lethbridge, Alta., boosted temperatures to the mid 30s. Elsewhere it was zero.

SPONTANEOUS SKATING SCHOOL — Weekend freeze-over in Quinte district saw winter's first chance for outdoor skating. It brought out scores of youngsters like those above, giving their friend Karen Gibeon, 7, Wallbridge Crescent, (centre), an impromptu skating lesson on creek outside West Moira Street fire hall.

Rhodesia Fails To Give Answer

LONDON (CP) — The Commonwealth sanctions committee today began considering Britain's proposed United Nations action against Rhodesia as Ian Smith regime in Salisbury failed to reach a decision on a crisis compromise hours after the deadline had reached.

Canadian High Commissioner Lloyd Cherrier, committee chairman called the representatives into Marlborough House promptly at 3 p.m. to hear Britain's Commonwealth Secretary Herbert Bowden outline a draft sanctions resolution.

Bowden also is expected to throw some light on the so-called "working document" which was to form the basis for a Salisbury settlement, providing Rhodesian Premier Smith's cabinet accepted.

While Prime Minister Wilson agreed to an "hour or two" extension to the 10 a.m. GMT (5 a.m. EST) deadline for acceptance of the document, there was evidence of disappointment in Whitehall quarters as the hours ticked by and the Smith cabinet continued to deliberate in Salisbury.

There were questions in London whether Smith and his group were deliberately stalling or whether Smith had suddenly encountered cabinet opposition to the compromise which would bring some relaxation in the Smith regime's anti-Negro policies.

Officials were concerned that Smith, before meeting with his cabinet, agreed with a reporter's question that the 10 a.m. GMT (5 a.m. EST) deadline could be described as a British ultimatum. Wilson, on returning from his weekend rendezvous with Smith, said that both sides had agreed to decide on the document by 10 a.m.

Meanwhile, in Salisbury, Smith's private secretary said the cabinet meeting discussing the document drawn up by Smith and Wilson in conferences off Gibraltar might last until early evening.

The cabinet met early this morning, went past the deadline, took a brief respite, then went back into session three hours later.

Len Thompson, Smith's secretary, told reporters at: "The prime minister has seen you all wailing out here and has asked me to tell you he will not be finished until at least 7 p.m."

It is understood the working document would return Rhodesia to constitutional rule, but that Smith would retain power as head of a new Rhodesian government which would be responsible, at least temporarily, to British-appointed Governor Sir Humphrey Gibbs.

Constitutional changes then would be made to increase gradually the voting power of the 4,000,000 Rhodesian Negroes who outnumber the controlling whites by 20 to 1.

The draft resolution on sanctions is understood to call for a United Nations order banning trade in major Rhodesian exports, but without the threat of force or a blockade. It makes no mention of oil, a vital Rhodesian import. Some of the African representatives on the sanctions committee are demanding that oil be included.

When the Rhodesians requested an extension of the deadline Wilson said he must have his answer "within an hour or two."

Chinese Factions Clash

MACAO (Reuters) — Portuguese authorities today briefly lifted a curfew clamped on this tiny enclave in South China after two days of bloody pro-Chinese clashes between leftist Chinese and security forces in which unofficial reports said seven persons were killed.

The curfew was lifted from 5 a.m. to noon local time in order to let residents do essential shopping.

Thirty-five persons were unofficially reported severely injured in rioting which started with protests by Chinese residents against alleged police brutality. The authorities have not yet released official figures.

The authorities appealed to parents not to send children to school this morning and to keep them indoors.

Sunday rioters, screaming "kill the Portuguese devils," ransacked government property and uprooted traffic signs.

Quinte's Temperatures Rise After 3-day Siege

Temperatures began skating up to the thermometer last night — bringing relief from an arctic air cold snap freezing the Quinte district.

The move upwards started about 7 p.m. when it was 19 above, reported the duty forecaster at Canadian Forces Base Trenton.

By 9 a.m. today it had climbed a fraction above freezing at 32.5 degrees.

The prediction was for a high of 35 today and an overnight low of 28.

"After that," said the forecaster, "it may begin cooling off."

However brief, the respite was welcomed in the district, which had shivered from Friday in zero weather.

An immediate result was a freezeover of ponds and small lakes through the Quinte district, sending the smaller fry scrambling for their first skating session of the winter.

One of the coldest spots in the district was Bancroft where the mercury dropped to 13 below Saturday morning.

At Tweed it went down to 3 below — the earliest below - zero reading for December since the Department of Lands and Forests radio station began keeping weather records in 1948.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: A southerly flow of milder air across Ontario has now ended the cold snap of the past few days but it is accompanied by an extensive area of rain, freezing rain and snow extending from Missouri through the western Great Lakes. The area of precipitation will move off into Quebec by this evening, leaving cloudy, mild weather in most areas with sunny and colder weather in the north. Another disturbance will bring snow to Northern Ontario Tuesday. . . .

TORONTO (CP) — A car driven by Dennis Marlborough, Ontario leader of the new Democratic Party, crossed a median strip on the Metropolitan Toronto Expressway Sunday night and collided head-on with another car, killing Mrs. Mary Doddato, 47, of nearby Rexdale.

Mr. MacDonald, 52, and the woman's husband, Andrew Doddato, 50, are both in hospital.

The NDP leader was unconscious for an hour after the accident and suffered a possible fracture in the neck and a chip in spine, head injuries which required 27 stitches and massive bruises on the upper part of one leg.

A hospital spokesman said he is likely to be in hospital for a week.

25 Ocean Ships Still On Lakes and in Seaway

MONTREAL (CP) — Twenty-five ocean-going vessels, only two of them above the Welland Canal, remained in the St. Lawrence Seaway and Great Lakes at 10 a.m. today, a seaway spokesman said.

The water temperature at the Lasalle Locks, the eastern end of the seaway, was 36 degrees, one-half degree above the temperature on the corresponding date last year.

The official closing of the seaway was scheduled for Saturday but it was extended to Tuesday and it will remain open on a day-to-day basis after Tuesday as long as weather permits.

At midnight Sunday there were 32 ocean ships in the system. At midnight on the corresponding date last year when the seaway shut down Dec. 13, there were 30 ships above St. Lambert.

India Grateful

DELHI (Reuters)—Members of Parliament cheered today as Food Minister Chidambaram Subramaniam thanked Canada for its "generous and timely assistance" to help tide over India's food crisis.

Robt. Nixon Will Seek Leadership of Liberals

TORONTO (CP) — Robert Nixon, Liberal house leader in the Ontario legislature, announced today he will be a candidate for leadership of the party at a convention here Jan. 6-7.

The member for Brant became the first candidate for the post vacated Nov. 16 by Andrew Thompson because of ill health. Mr. Nixon was named house leader the next day.

Mr. Nixon, 38, whose father in 1943 was Ontario's last Liberal premier, said he feels "that as leader of the party I could unify it and make it a real alternative to the present Conservative administration.

"Our province has been governed for nearly a quarter of a century by the same party," Mr. Nixon told a news conference. "After that length of time a government — any government — tends to get out of touch with the real desires of the people. . . .

"I want to open a few windows. In a very real sense what this province needs is a breath of fresh air.

"As a leader my concerns would be a clearly - stated sound, progressive platform, good candidates and a strong organization."

LBJ Promises Thant To Study Peace Plans

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — President Johnson, in a letter to U Thant congratulating him on his re - election as UN secretary-general, said he will give "closest personal attention" to peace problems.

Meanwhile, Thant told a Newsweek magazine interviewer that Washington rebuked him when he tried to arrange with North Viet Nam in 1964-65, saying it feared even the rumor of a meeting might topple the Saigon government.

There is no apparent connection between Johnson's letter and Thant's interview. A state department spokesman said there would be no immediate comment on the Newsweek article.

The Newsweek article reported that high American officials confirm privately that President Johnson was "largely unaware of the essential facts of Thant's peacemaking efforts" until he visited Thant at the United Nations last month on the eve of his tour of Asian countries.

Goldwater Says Haiphong To Be Bombed

DAIREN, Conn. (AP)—Barry Goldwater says the Johnson administration may soon announce stronger measures in the Viet Nam war.

Speaking Saturday at a symposium of the International Order of Characters, a pilots' organization, the 1964 Republican presidential nominee said the announcement could come in three or four days.

"We may be making a turn that will win the war," he said.

"We will see bombing of the port of Haiphong. Perhaps the blocking of the harbor by sinking some ships in port."

Man Rescues Three Boys

OTTAWA (CP)—A 26-year-old carpenter twice leaped into the frozen Ottawa River Sunday to rescue two children who had plunged through thin ice.

Arthur Lanthier, of Ottawa, saved three boys out on the ice the first time to rescue Vicki Petrovitch, 11, who was stretched out on cracking ice at the edge of a hole where her brother George, 9, and Perry Sunchuck, 8, had fallen in.

After bringing Vicki safely to shore, Mr. Lanthier twice plunged into the water to haul out the two boys. The temperature was 10 degrees.

The young heroine was floating unconscious, face-down, in the water when Mr. Lanthier reached her. He gathered the limp child and ran almost two blocks to the child's home. During the run he admired tered mouth-to-mouth resuscitation and by the time he gained shelter the boy was regaining consciousness.

Rail Yards Bombed First Time

SAIGON (CP)—U.S. fighter-bombers for the first time attacked and heavily damaged one of North Viet Nam's six major railway marshalling yards near Hanoi today and struck again at the big oil storage depot near the North Vietnamese capital, a U.S. spokesman announced today.

North Vietnamese fighter planes challenged the American fighter-bombers while they were dive-bombing the oil depot and for the first time of the Communist jet war, one was shot and another probably destroyed, the spokesman said.

American pilots reported that they left the Yen Vien railway yards six miles northeast of Hanoi in flames while they silenced 10,000 feet. They said they triggered a large secondary explosion and that a 30-foot fireball erupted in the key centre for marshalling supplies from Communist China.

Saskatoon Pair Survive 11 Days on Peak in U.S.

COLVILLE, Wash. (AP) — A heard a cry for help as he was car stuck in the snow led to the rescue of a Canadian couple who survived 11 days after their plane crashed on a northeastern Washington peak.

Roy Brown, 31, of Saskatoon and his wife, Betty, 32, were reported in good condition today at Mount Carmel Hospital here.

Mr. and Mrs. Brown, the parents of six children, had been the object of a wide search in Canada and northeastern Washington since their single engined plane vanished Nov. 24.

They were flying to Vancouver to join relatives at the Grey Cup game Nov. 26.

There was no sign of them until late Sunday afternoon when Ron Buhle of Colville trying to dig his car out of the snow.

Buhle looked up and saw Mrs. Brown floundering through waist-deep snow.

"Wait for us," she cried. "Our plane crashed."

"We'll wait," said Buhle. "We're stuck."

Mrs. Brown helped free the car, saying, "I'll use this shoulder; it's the other one that feels like it's broken."

A few minutes later her husband, who had been following her down a logging road, reached the highway. Buhle, who had got stuck while taking his wife and 18-months-old son on a sightseeing ride, drove the Browns to Colville.

Doctors at hospital said they did not believe the Browns had any broken bones.

Brown said he had headed south across the Washington border after running into a heavy fog bank over Canada. He crashed about 200 feet from the top of 7,132 - foot Copper Butte, about 30 miles northwest of here.

He said he banged up his forehead in the crash and his eyes were swollen shut for three days. He and his wife stayed in the cockpit of their Cessna 175 until last Thursday. Then they started hiking out, with Brown using two pieces of wood for crutches because of an injured foot. It took them four days to go about eight miles.

Picketing Housewives Persuade Two U.S. Chains to Drop Games

Some others indicate they may follow suit when their current promotions end, an Associated Press survey showed.

In Kansas City, games may be on the way out altogether. Three supermarket groups there have dropped games in which customers win prizes.

Safeway Stores Inc., second-largest supermarket operation in the United States, announced this week it would get out of the game business in January—although its bonus bingo was credited for half of the chain's 1966 sales increase.

"They've run their course," said Robert Magowan, Safeway chairman. "We don't think they have raised prices, but if the housewives thinks that, we won't fight her."

Purity Stores Inc., an 84-store chain in northern California, dropped its sweepstakes games earlier, and offered a choice of blue stamps or a bonus rebate of slightly more than 11 cents on $10.

"It has become abundantly clear to us that games have lost their popularity," said Harold Ward, Purity president.

The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co., which operates the largest U.S. chain, said in New York last week it was "neither adding nor dropping promotional games now."

"But that doesn't mean tomorrow or next week we won't change," an A and P spokesman said.

"It is something always under study, and we leave it to our five divisions to work out their own promotions to fit local situations."

Then in Kansas City, A and P joined Kroger Co. and Milgram Food, a Kansas City chain, in dropping games.

Currently A and P doesn't have games in any of its seven division, from northern New Jersey to New England, but has become abundantly clear to us that games have lost their popularity," said Harold Ward, Purity president.

Kroger Co. in Cincinnati, Ohio, third-largest chain, issues trading stamps and runs an spokesman said.

"We consider games and contests normal promotional programs, designed to generate the high volume supermarkets must have in order to merchandise at low prices," a Kroger spokesman said, before the Kansas City announcement was made.

The games such as Bonus Bingo and Sweepstakes have proven to be very successful, housewives protesting that they added to food prices.

Safeway probably would have continued running a bingo or similar game if it hadn't been for the housewives' protests, he said.

One firm, Strategic Merchandising Corp. of New York, has sold Bonus Bingo and other games to 4,900 supermarkets—including Safeway, A and P and National Tea.

It estimates the games paid nearly $40,000 in cash to 1,900,000 winners in the year ended Sept. 30—before the boycott began.

In Portland, Ore., a spokesman for Fred Meyer Inc., which has Let's Go Ice Cube Races, said a decision on the game's future was being left to customers.

"If the customers don't want them, we will be happy to pass the savings along," a spokesman said.

Doctors at hospital said they did not believe the Browns had any broken bones.

Brown said he had headed south across the Washington border after running into a heavy fog bank over Canada. He crashed about 200 feet from the top of 7,132 - foot Copper Butte, about 30 miles northwest of here.

He said he banged up his forehead in the crash and his eyes were swollen shut for three days. He and his wife stayed in the cockpit of their Cessna 175 until last Thursday. Then they started hiking out, with Brown using two pieces of wood for crutches because of an injured foot. It took them four days to go about eight miles.

Picketing Housewives Persuade Two U.S. Chains to Drop Games

Some others indicate they may follow suit when their current promotions end, an Associated Press survey showed.

In Kansas City, games may be on the way out altogether. Three supermarket groups there have dropped games in which customers win prizes.

Safeway Stores Inc., second-largest supermarket operation in the United States, announced this week it would get out of the game business in January — although its bonus bingo was credited for half of the chain's 1966 sales increase.

"They've run their course," said Robert Magowan, Safeway chairman. "We don't think they have raised prices, but if the public thinks that, we won't fight her."

Purity Stores Inc., an 84-store chain in northern California, dropped its sweepstakes games earlier, and offered a choice of trade stamps or a bank cash rebate of slightly more than 1% cents on $10.

"It has become abundantly clear to us that games have lost their popularity," said Harold Ward, Purity president.

The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co., which operates the largest U.S. chain, said in New York last week it was neither adding nor dropping promotional games now.

"But that doesn't mean tomorrow or next week we won't change," an A and P spokesman said.

"It is something always under study, and we leave it to our divisions to work out their own promotions to fit local situations."

Then in Kansas City, A and P joined Kroger Co. and Milgram Food, a Kansas City chain, in dropping games.

Currently A and P doesn't have games in its vast Eastern division, from northern New Jersey to New England, but still has them in other parts of the country.

Kroger Co. in Cincinnati, Ohio, third-largest chain issues trading stamps and runs an assortment of games.

"We consider games and contests to be promotional programs, designed to generate the high volume supermarkets must have in order to merchandise at low prices," a Kroger spokesman said, before the Kansas City announcement was made.

The games such as Bonus Bingo and Weekend horse races became under fire this fall from housewives protesting that they added to food prices.

Safeway probably would have dropped Bonus Bingo or started a new game if it hadn't heard housewives' protests, Magowan said.

One firm, Strategic Merchandising Corp. of New York, has sold Bonus Bingo and other games to 4,800 supermarkets — including Safeway, A and P and National Tea.

It estimates the games paid nearly $90,000,000 in cash to 1,900,000 winners in the year ended Sept. 30—before the boycott began.

In Portland, Ore., a spokesman for Fred Meyer Inc., which has Let's Go to the Races, said a decision on the game's future was being left to customers.

"If the customers don't want them, we will be happy to pass the savings along," a spokesman said.

Knights Templar Observe Christmas Ceremonies

Christmas observance ceremonies were presented at the Masonic Temple yesterday by the Knights Templar of the King Baldwin Preceptory No. 6. The ceremony was conducted by the Supreme Grand Master of Sovereign Great Priory of Canada, Most Eminent Sir Knight Walter E. Montgomery with assistance from Eminent Preceptor, Em. Sir Kt. W. Allan Dempsey.

Among the visitors were Deputy Grand Master Dr. C. A. Bell of Fort Stanley, Provincial Grand Prior, Kingston-Ottawa District R. E. Sir Knight W. D. Taylor and Grand Marshal R. Matthews of Peterborough. Mrs. Ethel Kiesekamp of Port Colborne was the guest soloist in two selections. William Connor acted as accompanist to Mrs. Hendry besides being guest organist for the entire program.

Rev. George Asbury was the speaker taking as his subject God's Word for the World for his Christmas message. He stressed the importance of Christmas in its true religious meaning as opposed to a more materialistic and commercial way.

Christmas greetings were given by the Supreme Grand Master with his text being based upon the Biblical phrase of "casting bread upon the waters and planting the seed".

Audience participation was forthcoming in the singing of various familiar Christmas hymns during the ceremonies.

The Albury choir under the direction of H. Carl Reid and accompanied by Mrs. June Bird at the piano was heard in well loved Christmas Canols.

Vacancy Filled

PICTON (Staff) — The remaining vacancy in South Marysburgh Township Council has been filled by acclamation.

The new member is Arthur Ford of R.R. 2 Milford, a retired serviceman.

South Marysburgh was the only municipality in the county which wound up with a vacancy after the regular nomination meetings were held. A second nomination meeting was held Friday noon hour and Mr. Ford was nominated and qualified.

Warm Weather in Area May Boost Vote Totals

Warmer weather may improves the voting turnout as Quinte district voters go to the municipal polls today.

However, it still is one of the quietest elections on record — for two reasons:

Belleville, generator of much election-time electricity as the key population point — now elects its city fathers on a two-year basis, and this is the off-year.

In other municipalities most of the top leadership posts have gone by acclamation to mayors and reeves — leaving the campaigns to councils and school board candidates and without a central figure of possible controversy.

In North Hastings the combined township of Bangor, Wicklow, Limerick and Wollaston Saturday rather than the traditional first Monday in December. Cause of the change was blamed for a light turnout at the polls.

Elected to council were Walter Watson, 167; Jack Williams, 133; Floyd Brethour, 100; Jack Donaldson, 87.

They defeated Edward Bargar and John Burkitt.

Elected to the North Hastings School Area were E. A. Simmons with 117 votes, defeating Vern Mayhew and William Morgan.

Reeve Delmont Card was acclaimed earlier.

French Students Mob Kosygin

TOULOUSE, France (Reuters) Hundreds of shouting, cheering students mobbed Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin today when he visited the science faculty of the University of Toulouse.

French and Russian security men were pushed aside by the students in their eagerness for a close-up look at the Soviet leader.

He arrived here this morning from Paris on the first stop of a three-day visit to southern France. During his visit to Toulouse, he was scheduled to see the prototypes of the Franco-British Concorde supersonic airliner.

Christmas Brings Headaches for Post Office But Return Addresses Would Help

Bellville Post Office employees are bracing themselves for the annual Christmas card onslaught.

If no schedule it will begin this week and bring with it a bigger pack of troubles than in other years.

"Our big problem this year is the mix-up in people's minds about the new postal rates," said a post office spokesman.

A 5c stamp takes an unsealed card any place in the Western Hemisphere. That means North America, Central America, South America and the West Indies. For the rest of the world the cost is 4c.

Cards mailed in unsealed envelopes may carry five or less words of written greeting exclusive of signature.

For speedier delivery the Post Office advises first class rates. These are 4c on letters mailed to any address in the same city, including rural routes; 5c any place in the Western Hemisphere, the British Commonwealth, France and Spain. For mail sent to any other country the rate is 10c.

Last year Belleville Post Office handled out over 20,000 letters and cards to the dead letter office. Wrongly addressed cards with no return address and blank envelopes, accounted for most of them.

"We urge everyone to put a return address on mail," the spokesman said. "A lot of post-Christmas headaches and longings between friends would be avoided if the return address were written at the upper left hand corner of every envelope. Getting her mis-addressed card back would let Christmas gives the sender a chance to apologize for her unfeeling greeting."

Blank envelopes are the result of the season's domestic confusion.

"It happens dozens of times over, every year," said the spokesman. "A woman addresses a few cards and leaves them on top of a pile of 30 or more unaddressed envelopes. Without looking, her husband fumbles up the pile, blanks and all, and drops them in the mail. When their friends don't receive anyone greetings, both partners blame the post office."

The return address advice applies to parcels too. The forwarding address goes on the lower right corner, the return address on the upper left corner of both large adoe of the package.

Don't be like the man who reversed the position of the return and forwarding address. His frustration was shared by mail sorters when his parcel was delivered three times to his house. The fourth time he was persuaded to reposition the address labels and the parcel finally got off to its destination.

"Heavy corrugated cardboard boxes with top flaps, not half - boxes or dress boxes, make the only satisfactory mailing cartons," said the spokesman.

"Gift wrap paper and sticky tape disintegrate in transit. Use Kraft paper and heavy cord for wrapping. If sending glass or china articles, have the store pack them for mailing. Remember, the post office never insures against breakage, only complete loss."

"If you get into a last-minute panic, remember special delivery service is good only in areas with letter carrier delivery. Mail sent to the city cities it takes with special zones — Montreal, Toronto, Ottawa, Winnipeg, Vancouver and Quebec City — will be delivered a day or two sooner if zone numbers are included."

Mail delivery is still the cheapest service the Canadian consumer can buy," said the Post Office spokesman, "but sorters and carriers aren't mind readers."

"Don't let the woman who mailed a letter in Belleville to a New York State address. She included her return address but left a blank where the name of the recipient city should have been. When we telephoned her she was indignant.

"The letter is going to Schenectady," she said. 'But I don't know how to spell it and I know you do. I thought you would write it in for me."

Ex-chief Resigns Force

NAPANEE — After 21 years with the Napanee Police Department, including 14 years as chief, Harry Benn has retired from the force.

His resignation is said to have been for personal reasons.

Last July Mr. Benn submitted his resignation as police chief following a survey of the department by town council and the police administration came under criticism.

The report said paper work in the police office could not be kept up, and recommended more office space and the hiring of a female stenographer to increase efficiency.

After resigning as chief, Mr. Benn was rehired as a first class constable filling the vacancy caused by the retirement of Constable Thomas McCrae.

Mr. Benn's appointment was approved by almost all council members.

On December 1st, Cons. Bowyer of Gravenhurst, took up duties as the new Napanee police chief at a salary of $6,500.

A former Chief Benn received a salary of $5,200, increased last January to $5,400.

"I believe Chief Bowyer to be efficient. He has my best wishes and will receive my support in his work as chief in Napanee," he said.

Former Chief Benn was popular with the town people and with the constables on the force under him.

"I never in my life was used better than by Harry Benn in the years I worked under him," said retired constable Thomas McCrae.

Sidney Township Waterfront Site Proposed Location for College

Belleville and Trenton — the Quinte district's two major municipalities — have buried community rivalry in a bid to attract the proposed provincial Eastern Ontario College of Applied Arts and Technology to the area.

The mayors of both municipalities signified the mutual effort in a joint announcement this morning. It reveals they are proposing a site for the college midway between both centres in the bayshore area of Sidney township.

Mayors Jack Ellis of Belleville, and D. J. MacDonald, Trenton, said a "definite stand" should now be taken by municipalities in the area to emphasize "the unanimity of our desire to have this facility in the Quinte district."

"To this end we have booked at a site halfway between Belleville and Trenton.

The property which both municipalities will propose to the board of governors charged with finding a location for the college, totals about 200 acres running north from a thousand-foot shoreline on the Bay of Quinte. It slopes gradually for one mile to a wooded hill.

"Useful building land," said the mutual mayoralty statement, "consists of a piece about one-quarter mile by a half-mile with a number of large trees."

"Sidney Reeve Ernest Kells has agreed to assist us in an approach to the owners for a resolution agreeing to sell to the board of governors.

Both mayors hoped that the co - operative effort might draw a satisfactory reaction from the board.

"We feel that this attempt to overcome partisan, parochial sentiment will indicate our sincerity to the board and materially assist them in their decision."

The Ontario council of regents, the parent body guiding Ontario's new colleges, earlier stated it wished an institute ready to start in Eastern Ontario by next September. An initial enrolment of 700 students has been forecast.

Growth to 1,000 students would mean an estimated expenditure in its area by students and staff and the college itself of probably $3,000,000.

Recently viewing its economic and social potential or the Quinte district Mayor Ellis said:

"No one can over - estimate the importance of this institution . . . not only industrially, but in all phases of the lives of the young people emerging from the secondary schools in the area."

Rainbow Greets Early Riser

A rainbow in December? Admittedly this may be a bit unusual but at least a few persons saw one this morning if they happened to be out just after sunrise.

Heavy black clouds were rolling in from the west as the sun poked its nose over the horizon. Almost immediately clouds covered the sun and the rainbow disappeared.

Wright Family Record Is 400 Years in Ministry

A total of 400 years in the Anglican Church ministry is the record of the Wright family who down through the years have done their fair share in seeing that the Church is perpetuated.

The founder of the 400 years of clerical tradition was Rev. William Wright who came to Ontario from Northern Ireland.

The clerical tradition was established by the family either directly as Wrights or who through marriage became part of the family.

The founder Rev. William Wright had two sons in the ministry, Rev. S. B. Gillard Wright and Canon John Depencier Wright.

Canon R. B. DeBlois Wright, now of Christ Church, is the son of Rev. Gillard Wright. Canon John Depencier Wright had two sons in the ministry, Most Rev. William L. Wright and Canon Joseph DePencier Wright.

Through marriage others joined the Wright family tradition in the person of The Most Rev. Adam Urias Depencier, Canon Theo Depencier, an uncle of Mr. Wright in Belleville; three cousins, Rev. Leodore DeBlois, Rev. Thomas Des Brissac, and Rev. Father R. C. Cotton, SSJE, and an aunt, Miss Audrey De Blois, deaconess.

Of the 12 Wright family members that have served the church full time, four are still active.

They are The Most Rev. William Lockridge Wright, Archbishop of Ontario; Canon Joseph Depencier Wright, rector of St. Cathbert's Leaside, Toronto; Canon Theo Depencier of New Westminster, and Canon Wright in Belleville.

They with 10 great grandsons coming forward, the founder of the Wright clerical tradition may rest assured that at least in some areas, the church will continue to survive.

Shoots Self, Boy Injured Critically

A 13-year-old boy was critically injured Sunday when he is believed to have fallen on a .22 - calibre rifle while shooting pigeons on the family farm at Plainfield.

Provincial police said Dennis Robert Sharpe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Sharpe, suffered lung injuries and slight heart damage when the bullet passed through his chest.

Doctors worked to repair the damage, for more than two two hours at Belleville General Hospital after donors in the youth's blood group had been called to the hospital for help.

Today he was in the hospital's intensive care unit.

The boy went shooting in a building near the barn Sunday afternoon, returning about 4.15 p.m. to inquire about supper.

When told by his mother it wasn't ready, police quoted him as saying: "I guess I'll go out – I've got one more bullet."

About 30 minutes later Mr. Sharpe went to call his son and found him lying near the barn. No shot had been heard.

However, said police, the boy was still conscious and told his father he had fallen on the rifle.

Speaker's Topic To Be Phenolics

The Engineering Institute of Canada invites the general public to hear guest speaker Carlo Martino of the Union Carbide Corporation, Bound Brook, New Jersey, Thursday at 8 p.m. at the Ontario Hydro building.

Mr. Martino will address the meeting on the role of phenolic moulding materials, expected to be of considerable interest to representatives of several local manufacturing firms.

Ratepayers To Discuss College Site

The Park Dale Ratepayers' Association of Belleville will decide whether to support a campaign to locate the proposed course of Applied Arts and Technology at the Quinte area at a regular monthly meeting this Wednesday.

Ratepayers' president William Rutherford, 27 Auburn St., stated yesterday that an association member had given him verbal notice of motion that a proposed supporting local location will be presented at the meeting.

"I have been advised that the motion will stress public support by the association including letters to City Council and local parliamentary representatives.

"The ratepayers' member proposing this motion also declared," added Mr. Rutherford, "that he is convinced this new college would be ideally located in Belleville which, as Queen of the Quinte, is the hub of the area."

Nurses Join Carol Service

PICTON (Staff) — The Community carol service being held in Picton United Church Tuesday night Dec. 6 promises, once again, to be an outstanding event. Ten choirs from town and throughout the county will contribute numbers and eight carols will be sung by the congregation.

Two more features have been added this year by the Kiwanis Club, sponsors of this annual event. The Philippine Nurses from P.E.C. Memorial Hospital will sing two numbers, one in their native language, and they will be wearing their native costumes.

Also a twenty-piece band, The Kiwanis Men of Brass under the direction of Kiwanian Chris Lockyer, will provide music and accompany carol singing. This program is an interdenominational service with everyone invited.

Final Session Next Week For Hastings Council

Hastings county council will hold its final session of the year next week with Warden Clayton Hall calling for the session to get underway on Monday, Dec. 12.

Also at the session will be a presentation relating to county welfare with J. G. Anderson of the Ontario Department of Welfare and Grant Harvey welfare administrator for the county of Prince Edward scheduled to speak.

Two special committees established at the last session, one to investigate the feasibility of a land titles office and the other the establishment of an ARDA committee, will be reporting.

Eleven Cars in Accidents In Tweed on Weekend

Eleven cars were involved in four separate accidents in the Tweed area over the weekend.

Saturday around 5.30, six vehicles, including four parked cars, were damaged after cars driven by Russell Whitelock and Raymond Bean collided at the Jamieson-Victoria intersection.

Total damage was estimated by police chief J. Paquette at $3,000.

At 8.30 a car driven by Wayne Thomas of Tweed went off the Sulphide Road three miles east of the village. Extensive damage was caused to the vehicle. Thomas was treated for minor injuries.

An accident Saturday on Highway 37 north of Chapman's Corners resulted in damages to cars driven by Everett Prindle of Thomasburg, John Provost of Sulphide and Bernard Davis of Oshawa. In the fourth accident, Edward O'Coin of Tweed was uninjured when his car left the Stoco-Bogart Road.

Ameliasburgh Barn Is Burned This Morning

A number of pogs in the barn were driven to safety before the fire went out of con.rol but about 20 chickens were lost in the blaze.

Belleville firemen pumped water from the farm well to keep the flames from spreading to nearby buildings.

Cause of the blaze, first discovered at 9:30 a.m., was not known. There was no power cutted to the barn, said firemen.

Beyond Expo

From an estimated operating deficit Expo 67 is expected to generate at least $80 million in business and trade for Canada.

Much of this revenue will come in the form of spending by tourists and to facilitate them it is planned to abolish (as from March 1) the requirement that non-residents entering the country be issued vehicle permits.

Revenue Minister Benson points out this move will "greatly speed up the entry procedures of tourists visiting Canada." This means, presumably, that a visitor will be able to operate a car provided he is licensed at home.

Still on the Expo theme, Trade Minister Winters wants Canadian business to capitalize on the tremendous opportunities Expo is affording. He suggests Canadian companies have not responded well thus far. One notable exception is a Toronto-based farm implements firm which will bring 500 of its principal dealers in France to the big fair in Montreal.

Despite the air of confidence surrounding Expo, and the revenue, goodwill and business that will accrue from it, no one in authority has yet had the temerity to forecast what lies beyond the climactic point of the exhibition. On paper that would be Expo's final day in the fall of the year, but it could come earlier depending on the degree of interest that is maintained. After such a build-up there is bound to be a letdown when it is all over.

Some at least are looking beyond Expo. One is I. C. Pollack, president of the Canadian Tourist Association, who has called on the government to do a lot of planning to meet requirements during the next 10 years. He says if such an assessment is not made there will be a "vast national letdown" after the boom in tourist business expected next year.

Some, but not enough, are getting down to it. The "Bonnerets" Holway of this city is playing hockey with the Kingston Intermediates this season and according to the Kingston paper, he is "delivering the goods."

Raising Standards

The Company of Young Canadians, after a slow start, is feeling its way in the complex task of evaluating the needs of Canada's underprivileged groups and taking steps to improve their standards of living.

Not much has been written of this country's equivalent of the U.S. Peace Corps, but it is known that volunteers from it are working on five Indian Reserves across the country. Members are also being trained to work overseas with little is known of this sphere of their activities.

The work of the CYC on Indian Reserves is a notable example of the opportunities afforded to render service within Canada itself. The Indians do not want charity and other such intrusions of the white man. However, the more practical and understanding among them do realize their progress in the world depends on adoption of at least some of the white man's ways and know-how.

Edward Lavallee, of the Department of Indian Affairs in Ottawa, put it succinctly when he spoke to Belleville Rotarians recently. "The Indians themselves know what is wrong," he said, "but it is perhaps the—means of interpreting it that they do not fully like. What the CYC does is to "interpret," in the sense of helping the Indians to help themselves.

The statement of aims and principles of the CYC is a thoughtful document which we might mention in passing. "People," it notes in one passage, "are always talking about the invisible 'they,' and find it difficult to pinpoint ways in which they can effectively change the way things are around them . . . a fatalistic view that things will happen regardless of an individual's intervention. Often with justification, people in countless numbers of communities throughout Canada feel that other people do not understand them and their problems. Such feelings are common among so-called disadvantaged groups in relation to those who express concern about them and try to help them.

"We believe this lack of understanding stems from two factors: first, many seem tend to be rather insensitive to others and consequently relationships of trust and understanding are rare indeed. There seems to be a number of social forces, imposed through childhood and adolescence, which make it difficult for people to be honest with each other. We are not sure why this happens, although the increasing complexity of the modern world and its "compartmentization" seem to be important factors . ."

The brief goes on to refer to problem groups such as high school dropouts and to their alienation from society. As we have noted, CYC brief is thoughtful without being ... us: The company is making a genuine ... ctical contribution not only toward ... human relations, but also toward ... living standards.

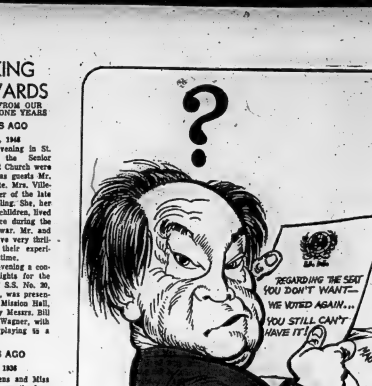
Norman Carter Says Farewell

Editor,
The Intelligencer,

I would like, through the medium of your newspaper, to sincerely thank all those people, young and old, in the City of Belleville who have been so kind as to give a operating word my period of employment with the city.

Certainly these people are too numerous to single out but I would like them all to know I have sincerely appreciated their assistance and understanding. Without them my job would have been a difficult one but instead it has been made easy.



I don't relish leaving the many friends I have made during these years, but I guess we must all look to the future and this is why I have decided to make this move.

I would be very remiss if I did not single out two institutions which have given me invaluable assistance during this period. Many thanks to The Intelligencer for their assistance in ensuring I have asked of them, also many thanks to radio station CJBQ for their terre - ording co - operation.

Any of the citizens who may ever in Oakville, and would wish to look me up or call, I can assure you will be gracious ly received.

May I wish you all, all you wish yourselves, for the coming festive season.

Teens Hooked by Cigarettes

Christian Science Monitor

Recent studies indicate that if cigarette smoking in America is to diminish, greater effort is going to have to be made to persuade children of the fallacy of taking up the habit in the first place.

Although a six-year study of more than half a million adults showed a noteworthy decline, national per capita cigarette consumption is continuing to rise. A probable explanation of this may be found in another study which showed over the same period a sharp jump in the percentage of members among students who were only 13 when the investigation began.

Given the very early age at which many children take up smoking these days a recommendation that "anti-smoking programs might be more effective if conducted before the age of 15" makes sense.

Possible harmful physiological consequences are neither the only nor even the chief reason for not starting to smoke. And an appeal to the impressionable thought of youth, based on fear and descriptive symptoms, is no more satisfactory than would be a program of driver education limited to a description of auto accidents.

Federal officials responsible for preventing and controlling tuberculosis have recognized this and deplore the use of scare tactics. Judging by some of them "hate" materials, those conducting anti-cigarette campaigns in the schools have yet to learn this important fact.

A more constructive, mature approach could point out that smoking is a wholly needless habit, which, it may be deduced from cigarette advertisements themselves, brings no lasting satisfaction. It is also an expensive habit, not easily broken. At the rate of a pack a day, in ten years over $1,000 has gone up in smoke — not including interest. Pointing out some alternative uses for that sum could help some children to see that it just isn't worth it.

Especially needed is a program to educate young people to detect and unmask the propaganda which is constantly bombarding the teen-age market and, in some cases, victimizing it.

UK Gourmets Cross Swords

Sunday Telegraph (London)

Voices have been raised in horror at the suggestion that we should broaden our fish diet to include some currently unfashionable types. As for encouraging the British housewife to adopt "fish sausage," the idea has been laughed out of the kitchen. In our view, these mockers and scoffers only show their gastronomical illiteracy.

What, for example, is that most delectable French dish known as Brochet," made from the much despised pike, but a fish sausage? And "Raie au Beurre Noir," which takes pride of place on many a smart French menu, is only common skate cooked to burnt butter.

So let the scoffers and mockers eat their words, since they so clearly know little about eating anything else.

The Language of Science

Cornwall Standard-Freeholder

Recently in Toronto some 360 architects, consulting engineers and professors held a meeting called the 1966 American-Standard Symposium. The purpose of the sessions was to consider the problems created by the high-speed, complex environment (and we're really moving these days) man, is creating for himself. At such a symposium, many outstanding professional men dealt with diverse problems.

For example, here's a list of what speaker panels dealt with: medicine, psychology, sociology, biology, , psychiatry, architecture, education, electronics, industrial engineering and computer programming. Each speaker, of course, used some of his own jargon. For instance one introduced the word "homeostatic." This means the tendency of human internal systems, like the body temperature, to regulate themselves automatically. The term proved useful to other speakers, engineers, scientists, etc., since it helped them explain how their machines work. It was said that "homeostatic" worked so efficiently inside man that it should be studied so mechanical system can be able to approach this state. What a revelation!

Here are a few more of the words heard about during the discussions; systematic, cybernetics, inter - disciplinary semantics, and about 200 others whose meanings undoubtedly could be found in standard and scientific dictionaries.

Reporters assigned to the meeting must have fallen asleep listening to the outpouring of words, with which they were entirely unfamiliar. Nevertheless, it was agreed that "if man is to solve his great environment problems before it is too late, all sciences and professions must work together and share their knowledge." Dr. Daniel Thompson, a consulting engineer from Vancouver who summarized the symposium said: "Man, if you're going to argue with me you must define your terms." Well said, old boy!

Advertising Techniques

St. Catharines Standard

Humorists used to have a lot of fun ridding advertising and writers about their use of "the incompisite comparative." The ad men would write that their client's beans, or beer, or beans were "better," but they were careful to avoid going out on a limb and saying just what competitive product theirs was better than.

This style of writing hasn't been around much lately, but a variation of it has turned up in a campaign by the Japanese Quality Apparel Promotion Institute. This ad campaign tells Canadian women who are buying clothes for themselves and their children to look for a particular symbol. "Look for this symbol . . . It identifies the finest in fabrics and workmanship, specially styled for quality - conscious Canadians. It's the best seal of approval — and it's not easily earned."

What the ad writer does not say is who makes the award and under what conditions. It's a variation of the "My beans are better" school of writing — a sort of self-awarded Oscar.

Today in History

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Dec. 5, 1966 . . .

Montreal was put under martial law 129 years ago today—in 1837 — although Louis Joseph Papineau, leader of the rebellion, had already fled to the United States. He had served in the Lower Canada legislature for 22 years and led the "patriote" party but deserted his colleagues when a warrant for his arrest was made out. Papineau's rebellion came to nothing as did that of Mackenzie in Toronto. Their aims were different, Papineau being a republican and Mackenzie an advocate of constitutional monarchy.

Mouth Infection Caused by Fungus

By JOSEPH C. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: My son had thrush month at the age of five weeks. The doctor gave me a prescription for him, but he still has this trouble, his mouth is just white inside. What causes it and is there a cure? Can it reinure? Is it painful for him? — Mrs. M. G.

Thrush is an infection of the mouth membrane caused by a yeast-like fungus, Candida albicans. It causes a white membrane which, if peeled away, causes bleeding.

The fungus is quite common but seems to affect principally newborn children whose nutrition is deficient, or who are not very strong.

If any question arises as to whether a case is thrush, microscopic examination of scrapings of the tissue will settle it.

You do not give me enough information to know what medication you are using, or how you administer it. One treatment which has been found to be usually effective is swabbing twice a day with one or two percent solution of gentian violet, but I know that other treatments are used.

I hesitate to say that the ailment is "painful" to the baby, but it certainly can be irritating and it sometimes makes feeding difficult. Since nutrition is very important to a very small child, this aspect must be watched closely.

Yes, thrush can recur (and it also can be stubborn, too) and once you get it under control it is wise to watch for any sign of recurrence and stop it promptly, the fungus can be present in the normal environment, and can survive indefinitely in dust.

Dear Dr. Molner: Can you give me some information about fistula and fissures? I have had two operations and there is still a drainage. — M.Y.

Both are explained in my booklet, "Hemorrhoids", so I suggest you read it. (For a copy, send 20 cents in coin and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Molner in care of The Chicago Sun Times Syndicate, P.O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill.)

Particularly with a fistula, healing takes time and once you understand the basic problem involved, I suspect that a discussion with your surgeon will give you a more accurate understanding of how you are progressing and what further treatment will help you.

Dear Dr. Molner: Some time ago I noticed that my palms are always very red. I am middle-aged. Is this a symptom of anything serious? — Mrs. R. W.

It may or may not be. It may result from a blood vessel disorder wherein vessels close to the surface are dilated. Liver disease can cause red palms; so can irritation from soaps, chemicals or detergents. Have the condition checked.

Dear Dr. Molner: I want to know about pills named Stilbestrol: what they are for. My doctor has prescribed them for me. — Mrs. L. B.

Stilbestrol is a chemical, not a hormone but with properties similar to one of the steroid hormones. It is used in easing a number of "female symptoms", and for various other purposes, and the only way to know why you are having it is to ask your own doctor.

Folks often get the idea that a medicine is given for a single purpose. This isn't necessarily so. Many are used for multiple purposes, and sometimes given just to ease a subsidiary symptom of some ailment.

Strictly Personal

Reasons Behind the Vote

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Herewith my analysis of the recent election returns, and my diagnosis of the reasons people voted as they did:

Because they want the war stepped up in Viet Nam.

Because they want the war de - escalated in Viet Nam.

Because it was a resurgence of conservatism in the country.

Because the ethnic groups in the cities exploded the myth of "backlash" and voted against inflation and Federal spending.

Because the winning candidates appealed to the common sense and basic shrewdness of the voters.

Because the winning candidates appealed to the greed, bigotry and short - sightedness of the voters.

Because many of the incumbents had been in office too long.

Because it is time for a change against the Democratic machines.

Because Lyndon Johnson hasn't pushed his program hard enough and decisively enough, losing the liberals.

Because the weather on Election Day was bad in the South, too cold in the North, and in some places it rained.

An Economic Injustice

Maclean's Magazine

More than a million married women are now at work in Canada's factories and offices. They and their families are the victims of an economic injustice which is a relic of the Victorian era. It should be changed.

We refer to the income-tax regulation that refuses credit for a working wife for the expense of household help — without which she cannot hold down her job. The regulation is outdated, uneconomic, and unfair. It is based on the attitudes and customs of the 19th century, when male lawmakers believed a woman's place was in the kitchen or the nursery.

In the 19th century, that's where most women were. But today's ads today there are 1,100,000 wives in the working force. More than one quarter of all married women between 20 and 64 have jobs.

Social attitudes have changed. The numbers of educated and professionally trained women who are competent to do a job, runs house and raise a family have vastly increased.

We are facing a serious shortage of teachers, nurses, doctors. We have great numbers of women, trained at public expense, who are not using their skills and their most potentially productive years. Right now we have to pour huge sums into education development to provide for twice as many students during the next decade. We will need the services of the women graduates in our whole field, particularly in medicine and education.

Most of them will get married, and most of them will have children. Many of them could also work at their chosen professions and would like to do so — but for nothing.

When a woman works, she pays income tax. Her husband's income tax is reduced by the exemption as a married man. If in addition the must pay a housekeeper, nursing home or baby-sitter, there is little left of her pay cheque and little incentive to work.

The working wives should organize and raise a row over this absurd discrimination against them. Our lawmakers would be wise to remember that working women and their husbands — have votes.

Fees "Excessive"

U.S. Mutual Fund Experts Taken to Task

NEW YORK (AP)—Attacked by the U.S. government for charging "excessive" fees, certain members of the mutual fund industry are going to court like fat cats that have just been swatted.

Mutual funds are a volume business, so a slight change in fees can amount to millions of dollars. The funds have pegged their fees high because they believe their professional advice and management are worth a good price.

Since the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission feels the funds' services are worth a bit less, some members of the industry are taking the exchange report as a serious threat.

Information, opinion, judgment, decision are some of the ingredients that contribute to the give and take that makes an auction market in any product. It is particularly true in the securities market.

The funds offer "professional" understanding of this mixture of fact and fancy. The assumption is that fund management is far more informed and abis than the individual. And for this it takes a fee.

The exchange says this fee averages out to a figure many times larger than that charged by banks for comparable services. It totals over a year's time about $130,000,000.

Two other studies in the last few years have reached similar conclusions that also pained the advice and management business.

First in 1962 the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania found that mutual funds in a certain period did no better for their customers, despite the fee, than mere chance could have done.

Last year the University of Chicago found that if you had chosen a stock at random in the 1926-1960 period the chances are that you would have made a profit 78.3 per cent of the time —merely by closing your eyes and choosing.

Naturally, the mutual fund industry disputes some of the university findings, just as it will dispute the exchange report. The exchange findings contain a bigger wallop, though, because they might form the basis for action by the U.S. Congress.

U.S. Crime Soars

WASHINGTON (AP) — Crime in the United States rose 10 per cent during the first nine months of this year, compared with the same period last year, the FBI reported Sunday. Suburban areas continued to lead the upward trend with crime surging 13 per cent. The figures show a nine-per-cent increase in all crimes in cities with more than 100,000 population and a nine-per-cent upswing in rural areas.

Two Talkative Presidents Make Rusk Reticent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reticent Rusk, he could be called.

Dean Rusk, secretary of state since 1961, has had a couple of good reasons, including two talkative presidents, for not saying much, although this may be his natural condition.

Such talking as he does — speeches, testimony before Congress, press conferences occasionally — has the monotony of an echo. He avoids revelations and simply repeats the already well-known policies of the administration.

He does the same thing, hard as this may be to believe, at those so-called deep-deep background luncheons and dinners with certain Washington reporters where the ground rules could keep him completely anonymous.

Nothing he says can be attributed to him, directly or indirectly, or to any official of government, even though left unnamed. It might seem that there, although he is pretty bald, he could let his hair down. He doesn't.

At one of these recent lunches one reporter shoved a note across the table to another after listening to Rusk for 15 minutes: "More ancient history."

It would be no wonder if Rusk made up his mind, when John F. Kennedy named him secretary of state, to be just the opposite of John Foster Dulles, secretary for most of Dwight D. Eisenhower's presidency.

Dulles talked almost incessantly, was allowed by Eisenhower to make major foreign policy pronouncements, and had such a flamboyant streak that his statements sometimes caused more controversy than they settled.

But what he did he did deliberately. He used speeches, testimony before Congress and press conferences to get out his views on American foreign policy.

He not only was the main spokesman for that policy in Eisenhower's day but much of the time seemed to be making it, with Eisenhower blessing him from the background.

The Eisenhower - Dulles relationship was a happy arrangement. As president, Eisenhower had to make himself heard from time to time but he never appeared to have a compulsion to be heard. Dulles did.

Rusk happened to be secretary under two presidents — Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson — who took over the major pronouncements themselves, foreign and domestic, and relished being seen and heard.

Almost certainly neither of these two men could or would have tolerated Dulles.

It is understandable that Rusk gets along well with Johnson who insists upon the centre of the stage in his administration.

But Rusk's reticence and comparative invisibility, no matter how valuable his contributions may turn out to be, have left him a rather negative figure in the public eye, hardly more than a name to many.

If he resigned tomorrow, or was fired, few Americans would be in a position to be angered, distressed or delighted.

In 20 years, this piece of property will be worth more money — or less. For a long-term risk-free investment, London Life has a suggestion.

Why buying a London Life policy is as good as buying a piece of property (perhaps better)

The value of London Life permanent insurance is not in the lap of the gods. It is guaranteed. You don't need a large down payment. You can borrow money on it. And all the while it protects your family more completely than any other investment.

YOU MAY LIFT YOUR EYEBROWS when we compare a London Life Jubilee policy with a piece of property. But consider these facts:

(1) Investment in a piece of property usually involves some risk. A London Life Jubilee policy avoids the hazards of investment risk. The cash values of your policy are guaranteed in writing.

(2) Start modestly. $13.09 a month isn't very big league in the investment world. But invested in a London Life Jubilee whole life policy it provides protection and builds substantial savings. If you start at age 25, by the time you reach age 65 you will have had $10,000 life insurance protection for your family for 40 years—and you will have built up savings of about $14,170, more than twice as much as you have paid in premiums. This is made up of $5,580 in guaranteed cash value, and $8,590 in accumulated dividends.

(3) The dividends above are based on London Life's current dividend rate. Since the amount allotted to dividends is based on the Company's earnings, dividends cannot be guaranteed. However for many years, London Life's record of earnings has been outstanding, so the return on profit-sharing policies has been excellent.

(4) When you're ready to retire, what other form of property offers you all these choices: at age 65 you can keep right on with your London Life insurance protection; you may stop paying premiums and take a paid-up policy for an adjusted amount; you may take the cash value, plus dividends that have built up—take it in a lump sum, as an income guaranteed for life or as an income for so many years. No other property is so versatile.

(5) With your first premium you create an immediate estate. If you die, the value of your London Life policy is greatly increased—worth much more than you have paid in premiums. Many other properties must be sacrificed when the owner dies.

(6) You can borrow from London Life on the cash value of your policy. Just call the local London Life office or your representative. No credit check. And all the while your policy continues to protect your family.

(7) When you borrow from London Life, the interest rate is comparable with banks' regular lending rates and much lower than personal loan companies'.

(8) A London Life Jubilee policy is a good investment in other ways. It is just as safe as high-grade bonds and much safer than most common stocks. It is particularly attractive because while it earns you money it protects your family.

(9) Property values may rise or fall. But a London Life Jubilee policy grows with dividends and guaranteed values. Dividends are declared each year. Dividends allotted to owners of London Life profit-sharing policies for 1966 exceed $30 million.

(10) One reason London Life premiums are low is because Canadians, on the average, are long lived. Dividends to policyowners are high because, among other things, the London Life Insurance Company invests wisely and profitably. (In 1965, the Company earned 5.75% on its investments—after investment expenses.)

(11) No two men have the same insurance needs. That's why your London Life representative has been schooled to tailor insurance to fit your needs. He is trained to give you efficient service for many years to come.

Son Thinks Postmen Really Have A 'Blast'

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our 18 year-old son wants to be a postman during the Christmas rush so he can make some extra money. He says his friends who worked as postmen last year had a blast. The "blast" part has me worried.

ANN LANDERS

Some time ago I heard a news story about West German postmen. It seems they are having trouble holding young, unmarried fellows on the job over there because the housewives keep pulling the boys into their homes.

One postman quit because a woman on his route kept hollering for him to bring the mail upstairs to her bedroom. Another young man quit because a woman insisted on inviting him at the door wearing only the bottom of a bikini. Two other women on his route did their housework in the nude.

Because of the column you write, Ann, you get in on some strange happenings that most people never hear about. Do the postmen in the U.S. have these problems? — NAIVE OR STUPID.

* * *

DEAR N. OR S.: I don't know about the postmen, but the metro readers have had their troubles.

Let the boy take the job if he wants it. He's bound to run into all types of women sooner or later and perhaps if he runs into them sooner it will save him some trouble later.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Fourteen years ago I married a widower with two sons. I couldn't love these boys more if they were my own flesh and blood.

Last month our elder son was married to a wonderful girl. There were several parties before the wedding and the boys' maternal grandmother attended every party, which was of course proper.

Every time I turned around I heard grandmother telling someone that I was not the groom's real mother — that her daughter was the real mother — that I came into the family after the real mother had been done.

At the wedding reception, grandmother was in the receiving line. Her voice could be heard above everyone's. She kept shouting, "This is not the groom's mother you know. She is a stepmother. My daughter was the real mother.

If I have to go through another ordeal like this one when our second son marries, I'll have a nervous breakdown. Please tell me what you think of her incredible behavior.—TENSION IN TULSA.

* * *

DEAR TULSA: Grandmother's lack of tact is inexcusable, and I would not attempt to defend her. You can understand, however, that the poor woman was deeply grieved because her own daughter did not live to see the boy marry. Since this thought was weighing heavily on her mind and her heart, she couldn't keep from expressing it and I hope you will forgive her.

Successful Living

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS: My neighbor had a nervous breakdown. She was doing well in the hospital; then her husband brought her home for a week end and she has been home ever since. Didn't want to go back for any more treatments.

Now she is in my way all the time. Brings in her two children who tear my place apart; and she stands there crying for help. Her husband doesn't try hard enough to get her to go back.

I help all I can and I don't want to be rude; but to take care of two little devils is too much for me. I am an old widow living alone. They are new Canadians and they speak my language. — VERY ANNOYED.

Special Care Needed for Mentally Ill

DEAR ANNOYED: With all the good will in the world, you simply must not try to pinch hit for the medical and psychiatric treatment your upset neighbor needs.

It is nothing new for a patient to prefer home to hospital; yet she is sick right now, and unhappy wherever she is. You speak their language. Send the husband back to the social service worker at the hospital, for help in re-admitting his sick wife and making arrangements for the children.

You'll do a great kindness by being firm about this.

* * *

DEAR DORIS: I have decided this year to put a Christmas greeting in our local paper, instead of sending out cards, and give the money I would spend in cards and postage to the rewarded children's fund or other worthy project.

I hope others may like the idea and do likewise. — AUNT MATTIE.

DEAR AUNT MATTIE: Well, fine. People who read your local paper will know you wish them well; and you probably see them anyway. But what about those precious friends who live at a distance?

The warm messages I get from kindred spirits hundreds of miles away are in some instances my only word from them. To me this is the prime reason for cards; to send loving good wishes over the miles —also a worthy project.

* * *

DEAR DORIS: What do you think of a 22-year-old boy, and a woman in her middle 30's, who claim they are in love with each other? —WONDERING.

DEAR WONDERING: They might be in love. If the boy, as you call him, has carried a family load early and grown mature, and if the lady is youthful in spirit, they might just click.

One case worker points out that keeping up with a youthful husband gets tougher when middle age slows one down. Such a pair should take plenty of time in making up their minds.

Confidential to SELF-CONSCIOUS: Your weight is perfect, so ignore the teasing, and don't, for goodness' sake, cut down on what you eat. You need good nourishing food to develop a healthy constitution, and this is extra important at 13.

* * *

Don't just muddle along. Do something about what's troubling you. A letter to Doris can put you on the way to more Successful Living.)

Santa Claus Holiday Cake

As you know it is my great delight to entertain my grandchildren in Germany. So last Christmastime when I was there, with the help of all four of them, I made a Santa Claus cake.

The high point of the whole operation was Marianne carrying in the cake for dessert. Each one called out for the part of Santa Claus' face he wanted — a piece of his white beard (cocoanut sprinkled).

This Santa Claus cake must be baked in a 13 x 9 x 2" pan. Use Beater Batter Cake (given here Nov. 12, 1966) or two 8 oz. pouch pak white or yellow cake mixes or a batter big enough to fill two layer cake tins.

MONDAY

Dinner Menu

Baked Sausages; Fried Apple Rings; Creamed Carrots; Brussels Sprouts; Celery Hearts; Pineapple Upside Down Cake; Tea.

To Shape Santa Claus Cake: Cut a 4¾" wide oblong from one end of cake for Santa's face. From remaining portion measure with ruler and cut two triangles; one for Santa's hat should be exactly 7¼" on two sides so it will be about 9" at its base to fit one long edge of first oblong. The remaining larger triangle is Santa's beard. Assemble cake pieces on a board on which it may be carried to the table. I covered ours with foil. So to recap (no pun intended:) small triangle "hat" at top with wide side touching oblong "face", which joins cut side of large triangle which is a protruding - at - sides "beard."

To Decorate Santa Claus Cake: Make up a bowl of plain butter icing; turn half into another bowl. Leave half white for beard and hatband. Color other half bright pink or red for face and hat. Frost beard and hatband area white but extend white icing in a shallower triangle onto Santa's face section with tip ending under where Santa's nose will be. Make a white tassel on top of hat. Frost face and hat with bright pink or red icing making embossed swirls of cing for round rosy cheeks. Now carefully and generously sprinkle beard and hatband and tassel with shredded cocoanut. Carefully sprinkle hat with red sugar crystals. Use a whole red maraschino cherry for Santa's nose. Use two thick slices from a green gumdrop for his eyes; use about ten cinnamon drop candies to shape his smiling mouth, over the cocoanut covered beard, under his nose.

Susanna's Family Fair

Dear Susanna: Did you ever think about shopping for unusual, party place mats and table cloths in the drapery department?

The choice of colors and materials is glorious. There are usually metallics of every description from burnished golds to pastel greens, confidential colors and checks and old-world paisleys. Just try standing in the midst of it all, and I'm sure 100 ideas will present themselves.

One extremely talented hostess we know makes table scarves instead of mats—how beautiful they are!

For an intimate candle-lit tete a tete, only one scarf is needed for two people who are sitting on opposite sides of the table. Compromise? "Mais oui!" and "Oo, la, la!"

At a more formal luncheon for six, my hostess used three scarves. They were made from a most effective avocado green, linen-like material with four cranberry tassels per scarf—one at each corner.

Do look into it. The whole idea is well worth investigating.—Mrs. Chas. Taylor.

* * *

Cover top and bottom of each box with a tiny square of felt and glue two or three felt flower cut-outs onto the top. Such combinations as fuchsia on pink and lime green on purple are extremely attractive. Or tone into the time of year and apply red Christmas berried or a sprig of green to a white felt background.

Refreshing and practical for individual table favors too.—Susannah.

Black Is Popular This Season Especially in After-dark Wear

NEW YORK (CP)—Black and glitter are key words for after-dark clothes this season.

Black is staging a return to cocktail and evening popularity. As far back as last July, fashion authority Eleanor Lambert told the fashion press at the fall showings here that "all black is coming back." And at the later Paris shows, Yves St. Laurent set his seal of approval on black. It's been in and out of favor ever since Jean Patou introduced it to high fashion in the 1930s.

Gaston Berthelot, who designs for Christian Dior-New York, believes strongly in black for this season, especially in cocktail clothes. He shapes one black wool crepe to flare into a Chantilly lace bemline and to band the long sleeves. Black wool for late day is also a favorite with Mollie Parnis who considers it more chic than black crepe.

Bill Blass, whose designs for Maurice Rentner have been reproduced in Montreal, is a black - for - evening advocate, too. One black silk twill is completely fan pleated. Several fall collections include a "black and bare" look, such as a slim A-line crepe with flat straps crossing in front and back to create a bare neckline and armhole effect.

Black was not unanimous, however, among the designers. Some, like 65-year-old Norman Norell, did not include it at all.

But practically everyone here, except Slavropoulos, agrees on glitter. This Greek-born designer, who now is undoubtedly the kingpin of New York designers, prefers sheer black lace or utterly simple columns of bright-colored chiffon or the shimmer of silver lame.

Silver and gold lame are featured. Lame even appeared in jewelled gold plaid in a slim dress, collared and cuffed in dark ranch mink. Prices can soar, too. A bronze jewel effect on net was quoted as more than $1,000.

HEMLINES SPARKLE

In a less orientalious mood, glitter is woven into material. Threads of gold or silver gleam in brocades and even in wool. Laces are re-embroidered with ribbon and then with glitter.

But all glitter dresses are not completely ablaze. Many designers settle for a jewelled neck or hemline. The new demand for sleeves brings jewelled touches to both the long tight or full versions. One such handsome short formal is Malcolm Starr's blush pink silk gabardine, bordered with pink crystals at the hemline and the flaring long sleeves.

Sometimes the glitter is subdued by a float, as Pat Sandler's green sequinned short formal covered by Chantilly lace or Adele Simpson's green chiffon cape bordered at neck and hemline with large paillettes and then completely veiled. Pauline Trigere introduces a group of dresses embroidered on net in transparent fullness, to be worn over form-fitting slips. TRANSPARENT LOOK

This teasing effect is also found in artful bareness which Kittie Campbell of the New York Couture Business Council describes as "transparently refined." In many cases the short transparent formals are heavily jewelled on nude chiffon, such as Hannah Troy's nude net encrusted with fake topazes and diamonds.

Fabrics, too, are important this season. These include silk twills, blistered or bubbled silks and brocades, and metallic matelasses.

There are metallic ribbon knits and metallic gold or silver cloth. And, of course, wools are always good for cocktail dresses and even for short formals, as a sheer worsted wool in garnet red, jewelled at neck and wrists.

So for your cocktail dresses and short formals you can wear practically any fabric, especially in black, and splash it with beads and jewels.

Jayne Mansfield's Son Develops Meningitis

(AP)—Zoltan Hargitay, 6, lionmauled son of actress Jayne Mansfield, has developed a case of spinal meningitis, doctors reported early today.

Zoltan, under treatment at Coucjo Valley Community Hospital for serious wounds inflicted by an attacking lion a week ago, had been reported recovering after two operations.

The boy was operated on to relieve pressure on the brain caused by a fractured skull and for removal of his spleen.

He was reported in satisfactory condition early today after doctors diagnosed the attack of meningitis.

Zoltan was attacked by the lion Nov. 26 at an animal compound where his mother was posing for the publicity pictures. His father, movie musicman Mickey Hargitay, flew here from Rome last week to be near his son.

"The original head wound was wide open when he was on the ground at the animal compound," a hospital spokesman said. "It apparently picked up foreign matter such as dirt, straw and manure that has infected the spinal fluid."

The spokesman said doctors don't know yet what type of meningitis is involved, "and they won't know for at least 24 hours."

Dean of Westminster Abbey Assailed For Plan for All-religions Service

LONDON (AP)—The dean of Westminster Abbey has brought a storm on his head because he plans a united service for all religions there on Human Rights Day, Saturday.

Christians, Jews, Moslems, Hindus and Buddhists will be represented at the final major event of the abbey's year-long commemoration of its consecration 900 years ago.

Much of the hour's service will be passed in silent prayer but at 10-minute intervals a representative of one of the faiths will read a passage. There will be no spoken prayers, no music; only readings, meditation and silence.

Many Anglican churchmen are far from happy about the invitation to men of all faiths to worship in the abbey, where British monarchs are crowned.

A similar service was held recently in St. Martin - in - the - Fields in Trafalgar Square. The lower house of the Convocation of Canterbury, composed of clergy from all over the northern half of England, passed a resolution condemning such practices.

But Dean Eric Abbott is going ahead with plans for the service, which the abbey clergy approved more than a year ago.

Because of the abbey's situation as "a royal peculiar," the dean is responsible only to the Queen and not to the Archbishop of Canterbury, primate of England.

The Church Times, an Anglican publication, has protested: "The Westminster plan . . . is a decision which must be deplored as certain to give rise to widespread disquiet and dismay in the church."

The Church Times says the service may "convey the impression to the world that one religion is as good as another. . . . At a time when the Church of England is being urged by its leaders to accept officially authorized forms of service in the interests of restoring discipline, it is ironic to find Westminster Abbey indulging in a mingle-mangle of 'religious worship like this.'"

"My house shall be called a house of prayer for all nations," quoted Dean Abbott in reply.

Boxing Day Observance To Vary With Province

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

If you go by the dictionary, Boxing Day is the first weekday after Christmas. And since Christmas falls on Sunday this year, that would make Monday, Dec. 26, Boxing Day.

But where the old English holiday is observed in Canada, it will be Tuesday, Dec. 27, this time. That's because Monday will be the statutory Christmas Day holiday.

The result is a four-day holiday (Saturday to Tuesday) for many provincial and municipal employees and, in some provinces, for other workers as well.

Exceptions are those who work for the federal government and for the provincial governments in Ontario and Quebec. They get three days—Saturday to Monday.

Quebec just doesn't bother with Boxing Day. And while it isn't recognized at the provincial level in Ontario, some municipalities are giving their employees the day off.

In most parts of the country, downtown department stores will be closed Monday and Tuesday to give their employees a rest after the Christmas shopping rush which will end with a last-minute flurry Saturday.

BANKS OPEN SATURDAY

Chartered banks will be open 9 a.m. to noon on the Saturday before Christmas and will be shut Monday and Tuesday. They'll be closed on the Saturday before New Year's Day and on Monday, Jan. 2, a statutory holiday across the country.

A Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press shows that every province except Ontario and Quebec will observe Boxing Day in some way.

Newfoundland makes it a statutory holiday for provincial and municipal employees. It's a holiday for provincial workers in Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick and most cities and towns are expected to follow suit.

Provincial and municipal employees in Manitoba and Saskatchewan will also have a four-day holiday and employees of some private firms will also get Boxing Day.

Some 15,000 Alberta government employees will get the four-day holiday but 10,000 civic employees in Edmonton will have their four-day period running from Friday, Dec. 23, to Monday, Dec. 26. And some Alberta firms will shut down Friday while others will take Tuesday off.

British Columbia makes Boxing Day a holiday for the whole province. The result is that only federal workers and a few others will be required to work.

Cambridge For Prince

LONDON (Reuters) — The Prince of Wales, 18-year-old heir to the British throne, will enter Trinity College, Cambridge University, next October, Buckingham Palace announced Sunday.

Prince Charles, who was 18 last month, now is at Gordonstoun, Scotland, one of Britain's top fee-paying schools.

He is expected to spend at least two years at Cambridge studying history.

His father, Prince Philip, told a court correspondent that Charles had expressed a wish to go to college.

The duke added he has also discussed with his son the possibility of him serving for a period in the army, navy, or air force after university.

There had been talk that Charles might attend McGill University in Montreal.

There Is No Time for Apathy In Busy Life of Belleville Mayor

Story By Harry Mulhall
Pictures By Dick Lumbers

Apathy is municipal affairs is a frequently-recurring theme in local government.

It sprouts irregularly through the year, then, with the first snows of winter, comes in for a ripe harvest of complaint at almost every local election.

The inertia, which draws criticism from politicians, public-spirited citizens and press alike, is that of the voters.

This year, the charge didn't have any foundation in Belleville — the city now elects its mayor and council on a two-year basis.

However, it was a problem elsewhere in the Quinte district, and one noted by Mayor Jack Ellis, himself a veteran of election campaigns since 1957.

Lack-lustre public interest can work against the public good by discouraging even the most ardent of office-holders, warns the mayor.

"He runs for election because he feels he can contribute something to the public. And many of the public don't even take the trouble to come out and mark an X on the ballot to show approval or — just as important — disapproval of what he's doing in office."

When it comes to apathy, the modern municipal scene is a clear-cut study in contrasts.

If, on one hand, the electorate has surrendered much of its active interest, passivity is no part of the pattern for the man named to head its civic administration.

The contemporary complexity of big business applies to local administration and the man named to its leadership can have a full-time job on his hands.

In a city the size of Belleville, the situation is complicated by the fact that she has not warranted making the leadership a full-time job. Neither can the task be controlled and scheduled by part-time attention.

Time is the key element and how it is crucially distributed between a business office and civic office determines the pattern of civic progress in many similar-sized Canadian municipalities today.

One thing is evident. Apathy has no place on the leadership side of the municipal fence.

The mayor first entered municipal politics in 1957, serving a year on Sidney township council, gaining the right of city election with annexation. From 1958 to 1962 he was a city councillor, became mayor in 1964 and now is serving his second term.

In business, he is manager of Wilson Concrete Products Ltd., masonry division. His day begins there after rising at 7.30 a.m. and breakfasting on one glass of milk. (Four years ago while in hospital, his doctor tried to get him to start the day with a meal "but I couldn't catch the habit".)

7.45 a.m.: Arrival at business office. Begins checking out matters needing attention, arranging the pattern of the morning's work.

As manager he heads up all units of the production division including marketing, management, bookkeeping, production.

8.45 a.m.: Meeting with staff members of department units.

"This company is a good example of local initiative. It started from scratch in 1940. Now it's the fourth or fifth largest industry in the city and the products leaving here go all over Ontario."

9.00 a.m.: Back at desk. The switchboard at city hall also is now open and municipal affairs now find a place in the pattern of events. Communications are the key to smooth twinning of both functions at this stage.

From the desk, a line connects with city hall; there is a company phone with direct dialing to Toronto, Trenton and Wide Area Telephone Service, a citizen's band radio hookup in his office and car.

12 noon: Changes desk at plant for one at city hall and a milk-shake while administrative staff take lunch.

"This gives me a quiet hour to go through the mail and all staff reports. I can dictate replies immediately and these are being typed through the afternoon."

1-4:30 p.m.: Set aside for callers and various appointments with city department heads.

"This is the time I'm available or people to come in about everything — from potholes to planning problems. It's the peak office period of the day."

4:30 p.m.: Out of the office and over to a meeting of a municipal committee or commission. There usually is at least one daily.

As mayor, he is a member of the police commission, the industrial commission, the executive committee of district municipalities, public utilities chairman, and ex-officio member of such governing bodies as the parks and recreation commission and the Belleville General Hospital board.

6 p.m.: Return to city hall office. Here, in a desk drawer he keeps such needed utility items as an electric razor and shoe polish.

A quick brushup and then a check of the calendar to make sure where the first evening's event is taking place.

Between these hours is the traditional time — territory of the banquet circuit — when local groups, from political partisans to impartial service organizations, entertain themselves and — more important in this context — guests from out-of-town.

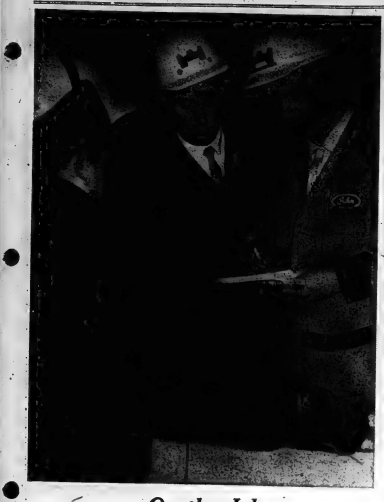
To appear at these night meetings is particularly important for any office-holder, because I think the people of the municipality want to give a good impression to their guests. This is what any host group . . . should make it — as warm and as friendly as possible. It should be an objective to generate a Belleville spirit. You address these groups and try to get across this spirit of the city."

9 P.M.

The objective is to try and return to the night-quiet of the city hall office by this time.

"You can't get all the reports read and all the dictation done by the afternoon. The balance must be dictated for typing in the morning; the items in the reports for council must be put together . . . "

There is still time for one more reflection on apathy — the kind that degenerates into almost compulsive condemnation of everything.



"Recently, politicians at all levels have come into seemingly pretty low regard in the minds of citizens in the cities, the provinces and the country.

"It is practically their (the politicians) own fault at times — but when you elect a man he doesn't automatically become something at which you cast stones.

Belleville Pupils Have Puppet as Mathematics Teacher

Once a week this fall grade 3 and 6 pupils in Belleville classrooms cluster around a TV set to watch a mathematics lesson taught with show biz slickness.

For half an hour the show's star, Double M, a mop-headed puppet resembling Danny Kaye in his more frantic moments, puzzles out magic squares, patterns in the number system and sets of totals.

The math program is part of several educational TV series beamed into Belleville schools this year for the first time. Pupils, delighted with the break in the classroom routine, turn thumbs down on the format.

"That puppet," an 11-year-old viewer declares primly, "it's kid stuff."

Purpose of the Ontario Department of Education's entrance on the TV scene is to introduce some standardization in education throughout the province, says L. A. Kelly, superintendent of Belleville public schools. Another intent is to support and assist teachers having difficulty with new educational concepts. Entertainment value of the program is strictly confidential.

"TV lessons don't make the subjects any easier", Mr. Kelly adds. "They do give every child scope for his imagination and motivation to learn. In teaching that's half the battle."

As Double M puts it: "We have many ways of writing a number," and invites student participation in a numbers game to prove his point.

His invisible human companion, (only his hand, writing on a blackboard, appears on the show), slips in an occasional mention of old-fashioned addition and multiplication.

"TV lessons only supplement day-to-day classroom teaching and drills," says Mr. Kelly. "Teachers report the programs working out very satisfactorily."

Principals agree. Teachers have greeted the TV programs enthusiastically, they say, with no signs of the fears, reported from other centres that puppets and entertainers might replace them in the classroom. For their assistance, the department of education floods preliminary lesson helps to each teacher.

As for that juvenile puppet, principals stress the series is still in the experimental stages. Formats will be adjusted to suit the viewers' degree of sophistication.

Programs seen in Belleville are beamed from Channel 11 in Kingston. During the year pupils in appropriate grades will see series in primary math, junior math, junior social studies and Ontario history.

Last year to carry occasional programs aimed at senior pupils, the Board rented sets from local dealers. In June, when the deputy minister of education announced regular scheduling of educational TV, the local board bought portable sets for each junior public school and one for each class in each grade of the senior schools. Provincial grants pay 25 per cent of the cost.

Lin Strengthens Hand as Ruler of China

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

Defence Minister Lin Piao now is evidently within striking distance of making himself undisputed master of China's 700,000,000 people.

Forces supporting Lin appear to be closing in swiftly on the 68-year-old president, Liu Shao-chi. According to Communist bloc dispatches, Liu's name now is linked with the fallen Peng Chen, once the powerful mayor of Peking.

Young Red Guards, whom the Peking press calls "Little generals of the revolution," recently denounced Liu. If this had official inspiration which seems likely, things look ominous for Liu.

The attacks go well beyond that. They allege Liu was involved in anti-party plotting all the way back to 1954 during the "Kao Kang deviation." Kao, heaved out of leadership of the party in northeast China, killed himself. The guards also accuse Liu of having supported Lo Jui-ching, evicted as army chief of staff in the current purge.

The European and Soviet Communist press says the struggle is not over and nobody can say where it will lead. This could be wishful thinking. The Soviet party would like nothing better than the defeat of Liu by a group more amenable to Soviet leadership.

These dispatches tell of widespread discontent in China. They refer to the breakup of China's 9,000,000-strong Young Communist League, which would have been the source of leadership as the older generation passed on. League members were too mature for the job of violent repression, which was assigned to the teen-age Red Guards.

Lin also, some time ago, made himself the once vice-chairman of the party and thus second in Mao, although in reality he probably is more powerful than the chairman and is perhaps even Mao's master. Previously there had been five vice - chairmen, among them Liu.

The Red Guards in Peking, evidently with blessings from the top of the politburo, are promising to show no mercy to "dogs who are not yet in the water," meaning those opposition party members not yet drowned in the purge.

SPORTS SLICES

By Geo. H. Carver
Sports Editor

The recent NHL all-Hastings county free-for-all championship was by Bobby Hull with a TKO victory over Detroit's Bryan Watson caused quite a furore around the big circuit.

It did not come to this department as a surprise because we are a firm believer in "every beginning must have an end."

The long rope of nine years being held, hooked, butted, slashed, high-sticked, boarded, tripped and kneed without retaliating has come to an apparent end of the tether.

Watson was given a job by Manager Sid Abel to shadow Hull. The Bancroft youngster attached himself to the Point Anne Blonde like a lamprey eel to a lake trout.

Last year he became the pride of the Wings and the Darling of Detroit fandom with a sensational effort in keeping Hull scoreless in schedule and playoffs.

This and the Watsonian tactics apparently caused Hull to decide that the price he must pay for his talents is too high.

Chicago's Dan Moulton writing in the Hockey News says "the word has got around that Hull is starting to dish it out."

The biggest blast came from Abel who ripped Hull verbally for opening an 18-stitch gash in the Watson noggin.

And since when has a managerial pot the right to call a player's kettle black? Abel never won a Lady Byng award, "Scarface" Ted Lindsay didn't get his name sic sewing bees and Gordie Howe never filed a claim for a hole.

So why the castigation of a blonde bomber who decided to delete evasive action and open his bomb bays when a tormentor target came within range?

"Sid told me he didn't think I had a thing like that in me," said Hull, not indicating just "what a thing like that" was.

"So I told him that he probably thought it was great when I was being pushed around for nine years without doing much about it. I also told him that he had guys on his bench who've done a lot worse than I did to Watson," said Hull.

"This isn't my style of play — and never has been," he added. "But I've a living to earn and I have to protect myself."

According to Moulton, "to this several thousand Chicago fans add a loud 'amen.'" Over the years Hull has been bombarded by mail advising him to start employing his considerable muscle in self-defence and the Hawk management has been hoping that he'd begin to strike back before it was too late and a serious injury was suffered."

"So enthusiastic were the 17,000 in attendance at the Watson incident, that Bobby's revenge drew a louder cheer than either of the goals he scored," says the Chicago wring.

"The next night's foes," he says, "the Toronto Maple Leafs never have used any particular man to check Hull, preferring to play hockey against him and let Hawks worry about stopping them."

"But Bobby also delivered a "message" early in the game when he seemed to go out of his way to belt Ken Ellis seconds after the Leafs' right wing had elected him along the boards with a rough but honest check."

"If Hull can continue to menace the men who have been abusing him in the past," says Moulton, "the Hawks' chances of giving Chicago its first league championship have to be improved.

"He was devastating enough while being hounded to set an all-time goals (54) and points (91) record last year."

Habs Dump Slump; Leafs Lead Loop

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto Maple Leafs are having a hard time keeping a full complement of regular players on the ice for a National Hockey League game this season of injuries.

However, with or without a full team, they are knocking off their opponents with regularity to lead in the standings.

The Leafs gained first place during the weekend with a 5-2 victory over the sagging Detroit Red Wings Saturday night and a convincing 8-3 rout of Boston Bruins Sunday night.

Red Kelly, Dave Keon, Jim Pappin, Bob Pulford and George Armstrong scored for the Leafs Saturday. Ted Hampson and Ray Cullen replied for the Red Wings.

Sunday, Keon scored a pair of goals and Pappin, Pulford, Kelly, Brian Conacher, Frank Mahovlich and John Bremner man got the others. Ron Murphy, Wayne Connelly and John McKenzie scored for Boston.

Don Marshall and Arnie Brown scored a goal each in the second period to wipe out a 2-0 Boston lead and earn New York Rangers a 2-2 tie Saturday. Ron Stewart and Connelly scored for Boston.

Claude Larose scored two goals and assisted on John Ferguson's goal as the Canadiens downed the Rangers 3-1 Sunday. Jim Neilson was the lone New York marksman.

In Sunday's other game, the Hawks got a pair of goals from Wharram and one each from defencemen Pierre Pilote and Doug Jarrett to down the Red Wings 4-1. Norm Ullman scored for Detroit.

Toronto's convincing victory Sunday was the Maple Leafs third straight over the slumping Bruins, who have only one tie in their last five outings.

The Bruins suffered a crippling bow when rookie defenceman Bobby Orr, 18, suffered sprained internal ligaments in the left knee and will be sidelined for three weeks.

The Leafs have been beaten only once in their last eight games, giving them a record of nine wins, four losses and seven ties in 20 games this year.

The Leafs hold down first place with 25 points, one more than the Hawks and three more than the Rangers.

Toronto's victory Saturday night ran the club's 8-unbeaten streak on home ice this year to 10 regular-season games.

The Canadiens played up to the form that won them the league championship and Stanley Cup last season as they downed the Hawks and the Rangers in their two weekend outings.

Wharram's two goals against the Red Wings Sunday gave him 11 for the season and moved him into a tie for fourth place with three other players in the individual scoring race. Stan Mikita picked up three assists in the game to open up an 11-point lead in the individual scoring race. Mikita has 32 points on 11 goals and a league-leading 21 assists. He shares the lead in goal scoring with Wharram and New York's Marshall.

The Rangers got some standout netminding from Ed Giacomin Saturday when the Bruins rifled a total of 47 shots at him. However, they could only score two goals and had to settle for the tie. Stewart's goal at 9:15 of the first period snapped Giacomin's shutout string at 178 minutes, 24 seconds.

Two games are scheduled for Wednesday night. The Canadiens will play host to Toronto and the Bruins will clash with the Rangers in New York.

Georgians Dump Grads

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Collingwood Georgians continued their winning ways Sunday in the Ontario Hockey Association senior series, but Barrie Flyers had their three-game victory streak abruptly halted.

The Georgians, in first place with 29 points, downed Toronto Varsity Grads 7-4. Belleville Mohawks ruined the Flyers bid to get out of the series cellar with a 5-3 victory.

In the other Sunday game, Oakville Oaks scored four unanswered goals in the third period to defeat Orillia 7-2. Guelph Regals edged Galt hornets 3-2 Saturday night.

Dave McComb, series scoring leader, and Don Keith scored two goals each to pace the Georgians' attack. Don Cooke, Dave Pitter and Hec Brainard got the others.

Larry Babcock scored two for the Grads and Brian Thompson and Grant Moore got one each.

Obie O'Brien scored a pair to lead the Oaks and Don Currie, Bob Bishop, Doug Hillman, Bill Ford and John Groulx got the others. Don Gibson and George Vail scored for Orillia.

For Guelph, George Ualtabe, Dave Lucisk and Keith Worrall each got one. Fern Belanger Bob Hall scored for Galt.

Mike Was Hot, Called The Shot

MONTREAL (CP) — Prime Minister Lester Pearson called the shot Saturday night.

The prime minister and Mrs. Pearson were the guest of Senator H. de M. Molson of the Canadiens Hockey Club, as the Montrealers trimmed Chicago Black Hawks 3-1 in a National Hockey League game.

Mr. Pearson appeared on the between-periods hockey telecast along with Jean Beliveau, the Canadiens' team captain.

The prime minister told Beliveau he had come to see the centre-ice star score his first season goal and Beliveau said he would do his best to comply.

The words must have inspired the centre, because with just 2:45 elapsed in the final period, he beat Chicago netminder Denis DeGordy, after the little goalie had twice repulsed his thrusts.

The prime minister was escorted to the winners' dressing room by Son. Molson, where he congratulated each player on his performance.

Cowboys Clip Cards In Foggy Corral

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Terry Nofsinger suddenly made St. Louis' offence look like a million dollars but it wasn't worth peanuts in the Dallas fog.

The Cowboys groped their way through the drizzle and the Cardinals Sunday, beating St. Louis 31-17 and grabbing sole possession of first place in the Eastern Conference.

The Cards and Cowboys went into the game tied for the top with identical 8-3-1 records.

Nofsinger won the statistical battle impressively over Don Meredith but lost the points war by almost as much a margin.

He completed 21 passes, gaining 201 yards through the air, and directed a Cardinal offence that chalked up 21 first downs to only 11 for the Cowboys. Meredith, who came out on top on the scoreboard, completed only seven passes for 84 yards.

How then did the Cowboys win by 14 points? Three recovered fumbles and two interceptions did the job.

Johnny Roland fumbled a catch and Dallas' J. D. Smith recovered at the Cardinal 45. Dan Reeves spiraled for the score on the next play.

After Nofsinger had driven St. Louis to a field goal and a touchdown — their first since Nov. 6 when Johnson was injured—Dallas struck again. A pass interference call and a personal foul penalty helped the Cowboys chew up the yardage and Meredith's 25-yard pass to Bob Hayes gave them the touchdown.

Then Mel Renfro returned an intercepted Nofsinger pass 33 yards in the St. Louis' three and Don Perkins slammed in for the score.

Elsewhere, Green Bay Packers clinched at least a tie for the Western Conference crown by beating San Francisco 'down 30-7, Baltimore Colts kept their chances alive with a 21-16 last-minute victory over Chicago Bears.

Cleveland Browns downed New York Giants 49-40, Philadelphia Eagles got by Pittsburgh Steelers 27-23, Atlanta Falcons upset Minnesota Vikings 20-13 and Los Angeles Rams whipped Detroit Lions 23-3.

N. Electric Hockey League

Crawf's Terrors skinned the Bearcats 5-3 and the Crazylegs clipped the Comets 3-1 in a pair of Northern Electric Intersdepartmental Hockey League games Sunday.

Doug Rake had two goals and an assist, Ron Hutchinson two goals, Harry Wardhaugh one of each and Bill Carden three assists for Crawf's.

Ron Smith potted a pair and Bob Totten had a goal and assist for the Bearcats. Ed Barrett and Randy Longhurst each helped on goals.

Stu Craig and Peter Keunigs each collected a goal and assist for the Crazylegs. Doug Shields also scored while Phil Cornell and Larry Carmichael each had an assist.

Charlie Reynolds scored for the Comets, aided by Don Dettler.

WIN WRESTLING MEET

LONDON, Ont. (CP)— Western won its second consecutive dual meet in Ontario-Quebec Athletic Association wrestling beating McMaster Marauders 23-11 Saturday. After six matches, Western held a slim 13-11 lead against McMaster squad. But the Mustangs came on strong at the finish to win the last four matches on pins.

Pete Given 15-Game Suspension

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — Joe Johnston of Peterborough Petes received a 15-game suspension Saturday by the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A sub-committee.

Johnston sat out five games after receiving a match penalty for "deliberate attempt to injure" in a Peterborough-Oshawa Generals game in Peterborough Nov. 17.

He won't be able to play for the club until Jan. 12.

He swung his stick at Oshawa's Bob Black, then "kicked" the Oshawa player while Black was lying on the ice.

Mo-Hawks Clip Flyers' Wings 5-3

By GARRY ALEXANDER
(Staff Sportswriter)

BARRIE — Shortstaffed but long of effort, the Mo-Hawks clipped Barrie Flyers' wings to the tune of 5-3 here yesterday to stay within reach of the OHA Senior "A" puck loop's first division.

Belleville's important win, number three on the road and seventh overall in 14 starts, put an end to Barrie's three-game undefeated streak.

The Flyers had beaten Galt, Kingston and Guelph before meeting the Mo-Hawks, who now have a chance to pick up some ground with four home games in their next five starts. Kingston visits Belleville Tuesday and Orillia comes next Friday.

The line of Ralph Plane, Bob McAlpine and Wayne McConnell led the victors' point parade but it was a strong team effort, from goalie Ludget Doucet out, that produced the victory.

McConnell broke a scoring drought with a pair of goals, twice opening up a two-goal Mo-Hawk lead after Barrie had pulled close. McAlpine triggered the winning markers and assisted on two others while Plane, playing centre in Wayne Brown's spot, earned two assists. Brown was unable to make the trip due to work and the club dressed only 13 men.

Garry Darling collected a goal and assist, John "Shaker" Baker the other goal, and Minnie Menard two assists.

Bob Garner, Al Stitt and Corby Adams scored for Barrie.

Coach Floyd Crawford praised his club following the game: "The boys earned this win. Everybody played well and with any kind of breaks our line of Bob Taylor, Ed Marineau and Gary Gresdahl could have had a few goals. They certainly carried their share of the load."

The Mo-Hawks led 2-0 after one heat and 4-1 going into the third. Each side had 20 shots on goal and the winners drew four of the five minor penalties.

Barrie cut the lead to 4-3 in the third. Stitt got one when his shot from the side deflected in off Bradford. That was at 3.09. Adam's screened shot on a rebound, after several sharp saves, came at 14.02 with Gresdahl off for high sticking.

McConnell lost no time in regaining the two-goal lead. He ripped a backhand home from his right-wing slot, on McAlpine's assist, 35 seconds later and the Mo-Hawks checked steadily over the remainder to protect it.

Al Smith broke in alone and shot wide early in the game and during the period Doucet kicked out at least four loughlins. Plane took him a 1-0 lead at 4:04. Menard's hard drive dropped at McGibbon's feet and Gary rapped it home.

Doucet robbed Nicholishen and Stitt before Baker made it 2-0. Darling did the spade work and "Shaker" whipped home his passout at 12:26.

Garner broke in to put the puck past a sliding Doucet early in the second but it stayed 3-1, with Marineau, McConnell, Darling, Delcourt, Knowles and Weeks coming close, until the 18th minute.

McConnell fired a shot out of the corner that deflected in off McKibbon's leg at 17:30. 15 seconds later it was 4-1 when McAlpine picked a corner perfectly for what proved to be the winner.

The Mo-Hawks, hustling with no letup, got steady work from the three-man defence of Crawford, Lionel Boily and Rick Bradford. The club hopes to have right-winger Lou Smrke, and possibly rearguard Greg Marchen, back in action this week.

Junior 'A' Kitchener Grabs Lead

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Kitchener Rangers are on top in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series after a wild and woolly weekend of play that featured colored hockey sticks and a 15-game suspension to Joe Johnston of Peterborough Petes.

The Rangers defeated Niagara Falls Flyers 5-4 Sunday to extend their winning streak to six games.

Hamilton Red Wings downed Toronto Marlboros 5-1. In the game, televised in color, Toronto used bright blue sticks and the Wings played with crimson-colored sticks.

The idea originated with Hamilton manager-coach Eddie Bush who said he only wanted to add a little more colour to the game.

Oshawa Generals and Montreal Junior Canadiens played a home-and-home series Saturday and Sunday and the Generals, blanked in their last two games, finally broke a scoring famine by downing Montreal 5-1 in the first game.

PLAY TO A TIE

The clubs played to a 2-2 tie Sunday night.

In the other weekend game, Peterborough posted its first win since Nov. 13 by nipping St. Catharines Black Hawks 6-5.

But the Petes will be without Johnston until Jan. 12. An OHA sub-committee Saturday suspended him for "deliberate attempt to injure" Bob Black in a Peterborough-Oshawa game Nov. 17.

Crash Kills Prince

GRANADA, Spain (AP) — Prince Luis Alfonso de Baviera Mesias, 24, was killed Sunday when his car spun off the road during a rally and plunged into a 100-foot ravine near the village of Almuncar.

The car was being driven at the time by Frenchman Bernard Tramont, 28, of Le Mans, who was taken to hospital with badly burned hands and face. The civil guard said the crash occurred after one of the car's front tires burst.

The prince was the youngest son of the late Prince Jose Eugenio de Baviera, president of the Spanish Royal Academy of History.

Miss Haynie overhauled Miss Whitworth on the last three holes of regular play and they both carded 72s. Miss Haynie, 22, collected $1,500 and Miss Whitworth $1,200.

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)— Zip Pecket, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Bostrom in Chicago, set a world record at six furlongs Sunday at Turf Paradise, winning by 15 lengths in 1:07 2-5. Wreck Mars Event

Sets Record At Nassau

NASSAU (AP)—Mark Donahue edged fellow American skip Scott by 4.7 seconds Sunday in the wreck-marred Bahamas Cup auto race at a record speed of 105.684 miles an hour.

Donahue, 29, made only the one mandatory pit stop, covering 7.4 seconds, on his next-to-last lap in covering the 250 miles in two hours, 23 minutes and four seconds.

The old speed record was American Hap Sharp's 103.273 m.p.h. in 1963.

Finishing in order behind Donahue and Scott were Americans Peter Revson, Buck Fulk and Sam Posey.

Donahue won $5,200 of the $16,000 purse, plus enough accessory money to raise his take to about $6,000. It was his third major victory of the year, and in addition he was co-driver of the third-place Ferrier at Le Mans, France, this year.

Rodrigo Dorjas, the Venezuelan road - racing champion, was seriously injured in Sunday's worst wreck. His powerful Ferrari ran off the course and punched through a billboard and against a wire fence, where it burst into flames. The 25-year-old driver was taken to hospital with major burns of his face, arms and legs.

Sharp, last year's winner, was running in third place when his Chaparral prototype went off the course and wrecked on the last lap.

Two other pre-race favorites, Americans A. J. Foyt and Mario Andretti, failed to finish.

Bulldogs Capture Grid Title

PHILADELPHIA (AP)— Philadelphia Bulldogs won the Continental Football League championship by defeating Orlando Panthers 20-17 in sudden-death overtime Sunday.

The winning score came on Jamie Caleb's 10-yard field goal after 9:14 of the 15-minute overtime quarter had elapsed.

The Bulldogs lost the toss following completion of regulation time and were forced to kick to Orlando. Orlando returned the ball to the Panther 28-yard line, but was unable to get a first down and the league's leading punter, Bill Johnson, kicked to the Bulldog 39-yard line.

The Bulldogs marched 57 yards in 12 plays and on the fourth down, with one yard to go, Caleb scored his eighth point of the game to give the Bulldogs their first title in the two-year history of the CFL.

Losing Teams Heat Up Lead Pace

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Springfield Indians and Providence Reds are making things hot around the top of both American Hockey League divisions.

The Indians, whose eight victories this season have left them in fourth place in the Eastern Division, defeated Hershey Bears 8-4 Saturday night, allowing Quebec Aces to take over the division lead.

The Reds, trailing the Eastern Division, lost 7-4 to Pittsburgh Saturday night, allowing the Hornets to maintain their first-place tie in the Western Division with Rochester Americans.

Providence took its second weekend loss Sunday night, losing 3-1 to Baltimore and the Clippers moved to within two points of Quebec and one point of Hershey.

WINTER WHEAT INSURANCE

This insurance may be purchased before December 15th, 1966. Our Agency has been appointed to handle this insurance for the Crop Insurance Commission of Ontario. We suggest farmers wishing to obtain insurance coverage contact us as soon as possible.

Both the Federal Government and the Provincial Government are subsidizing this insurance cost. The coverages include drought, excessive moisture, excessive rainfall, flood, frost, hail, insect infestation, plant disease, wind and winter kill.

An example of a typical insurance policy is as follows: If a farmer planted 10 acres of winter wheat, he might reasonably expect his average yield would be 50 bushels per acre or 500 bushels for ten acres. He could expect to receive $1.50 per bushel or $750, for ten acres of wheat. This wheat can be insured for 60%, 70% or 80%. If the farmer insured his ten acres of winter wheat for 70% of the expected yield, his premium would be $30.98.

Call us today for insurance coverage. December 15th is the deadline.

India Leads Brazil In Davis Cup

CALCUTTA (AP)—India captured a five-set doubles marathon and jumped into a 2-1 lead over Brazil Sunday in the Davis Cup inter-zone tennis finals.

Ramanathan Krishnan, 29, and Jaideep Mukherjea thrilled a highly partisan gallery of 6000 at Calcutta's South Club by outplaying Thomas Koch and Edison Mandarino 7-5, 3-6, 6-3, 3-6, 6-3.

The Indians can clinch the best-of-five match series by winning either of the two remaining singles matches. Mukherjea plays Mandarino and Krishnan faces flashy, left-handed Koch.

The winner qualifies to meet Australia at Melbourne's Kooyong Club Dec. 26-28 in the challenge round.

Santa Claus Parade Tours Napanee

NAPANEE — Santa Claus arrived in Napanee Saturday afternoon, with a retinue even larger than anticipated. Thirty entries were expected in the middle of the week; with four more by Friday night, and two others that were not expected put in an appearance at parade time.

The weather was a bit too crisp for the crowds lining the parade route, but soon forgotten, especially by the children, when the bands and the floats and the clowns and the horses and the pennyfarthings and the majorettes started passing.

Excitement increased with the passing of each wonder, until old Santa himself arrived. Then the stores reaped their harvest. All those who had assisted with the parade were served hot chocolate, coffee, buns, and lollipops at the Prince Charles School.

The Queen of Hearts and her maid, Marjorie Rankin, the county Dairy Queen, as the Snow Queen on parade down front; and Northland and Santa's Workshop, and the Wizard of Oz. Several of the service clubs had floats and several merchants and churches. The Red and Gun Club showed a lion and a lion tamer. The Gayettes majorette group from Belleville glittered and pranced, and the clowns went through their time honored antics. There were four bands, the Army, Navy and Airforce Pipe Band with Napanee's own Ken McMerrin as drum major. Everything was paid for before the day was over, he said Chairman of the event was Wayne Perry.

Hold Social Event at Club House

DESERONTO — A good crowd of members and friends took advantage of the invitation of the Deseronto Boat Club to attend the social evening last Saturday evening. It took place in the neat club house, trim inside and out, with wood panelling, and great picture windows overlooking the magnificent view up the bend. As the building is insulated and kept heated members find it a cosy spot where they can go evenings or weekends to relax, or meet congenial friends, or just admire the view. The club house was opened over a year ago and is now complete with the exception of a bit more furniture.

Two films shown Saturday evening were enjoyed not only for their beauty, but also because they were informative for the fishermen. Those who try for maskinonge or speckled trout in the future may now have better luck than they have had heretofore. The films were obtained from the Department of Lands and Forests. Refreshments were served by members of the social committee.

All the boats belonging to the members are now ready to face the winter. Each of the 13 boat houses shelters from one to three boats, and several are just drawn up on shore.

The summer has not brought as many visitors to the club as usual, one of the members stated. He attributes this to the poor fishing season, with fewer fish because of the pollution of the water.

The Department of Transport notified the club early in the summer that dredging would be done in the vicinity of the club docks. A letter received by the secretary recently confirmed this, saying that the work had been delayed, but is definitely on the program.

Kosygin Visits Lenin Home

PARIS (AP)—Soviet Premier Kosygin, taking time out from the ceremonies of his state visit to France, went sightseeing Sunday.

Kosygin paid a one-hour visit to the Louvre and dropped in at Notre Dame Cathedral for a few minutes after a Roman Catholic mass had ended.

But the highlight of the day was a trip to the apartment in building at No. 4 Rue Marie-Rose where Lenin lived in exile before the First World War.

He stepped out on the balcony, waved to the crowd below and then left the apartment, stopping to shake a few hands in the crowd before he re-entered his car.

Air Canada Layoffs 'Not Fair'

MONTREAL (CP) — Unions representing Air Canada employees have sent a letter to Prime Minister Pearson protesting alleged discrimination by the airline against its unionized employees during the recent machinists' strike.

The committee represents pilots, stewardesses, flight attendants and other union employees who were laid off during the 15-day strike, although they took no part in it.

The letter said union personnel were laid off without pay, but Air Canada kept on all its non-union employees at full pay.

Open Meeting of College Boards Urged

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Open meetings of university boards and senates were urged Saturday at the windup of the University of Western Ontario student-sponsored seminar on university government in Canada.

It was one of five resolutions passed, all aimed at reforming the operation of Canadian universities. Forty delegates from 14 Canadian universities attended the three-day session.

Delegates called for establishment of a network of communication between administrators, faculty, students and the public. They said lack of communication is a cause of many of the problems facing universities.

Agendas and minutes of board and senate meetings should be published and all meetings opened to the press and public, the delegates agreed. They acknowledged that business regarding property and personnel must be conducted in camera.

Greater student role in university government was also advocated.

Postmen Again Ready For Battle

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Canada's postmen are discontent and ready to go to battle again over the "humble settlement" they received last month in wage negotiations, union representatives said Sunday.

More than 50 strike committee members from Windsor, Ont., Hamilton and Owen Sound met in London to thrash out discontentment over their Nov. 15 contract with the federal government and plan future action.

The 16-month contract negotiated Nov. 15 gives the letter carriers a 25-cent-an-hour wage increase. They had sought a $1.00-an-hour increase.

Eighty per cent of the union's membership had voted to strike if contract negotiations failed. Alex Power of Toronto, first vice-president of the Letter Carriers Union of Canada, told the representatives the contract settlement is "humble, but it establishes a precedent. We may not have won much money but we won collective bargaining."

The union is planning to begin bargaining again about April for a new contract.

"Sunday" Poll Biased Claim Irate MPs

OTTAWA (CP)—Three members of Parliament, two Liberals and a Social Credit, ridiculed the "lack of objectivity" of a Sunday night CBC program.

John R. Matheson (L—Leeds), parliamentary secretary to the prime minister, pointed out that seven of the 15 MPs interviewed during the program — called Sunday — were members of the New Democratic Party, a minority group in the House.

Howard R. Johnston (SC—Okanagan-Revelstoke), a member of the Commons broadcasting committee, said the "obvious bias of the poll completely invalidated its effectiveness."

The interviews with MPs concerned their reactions to last week's controversial sex film and the poll came out 8-7 in favor.

Mr. Johnston said the seven NDP members represented one third of that party's strength in the Commons and argued that a fair poll would have had to include 45 Liberals, 32 Progressive Conservatives, two Creditistes and at least one Social Creditor.

He said it was significant that the program had failed to interview Davie Fulton, one of the Tories' most articulate CBC critics.

Mr. Matheson said:

"The shocking thing about the producers' defence of their Sunday sex series was the way, by selected interviews, half of them from the NDP, they conveyed the misleading impression that the Commons generally favored the objectionable item or expressed little concern."

He said the only body of support for the producers came from "the minority NDP group, whereas the House generally expressed strong and spontaneous disgust when the question of this sleazy program was raised."

Mr. Matheson questioned whether the same lack of objectivity applied to the interviews on the street.

Mr. Johnston said his criticism of the CBC, when the broadcasting estimates were before the House, was that the corporation was biased in favor of the NDP.

"Last night's poll just proved it," he said.

Harold Stafford (L — Elgin), said the show's producers "did not deviate from their usual Sunday program posture of leering at Parliament's concern or at anyone's honest concern."

He said the interviews were "an obvious attempt to offset the stinging criticism received in the past week."

Mr. Stafford said none of the 15 MPs interviewed were among those who had spoken out against the program in the Commons.

"They were hardly a cross section of the feeling of MPs in general as seven were New Democrats who mainly agreed with the sex content of the program and four were French-speaking members who gave no indication that they ever watched the program on the English network," he said.

California Bighorns Saved

VICTORIA (CP)—Wildlife experts in British Columbia have achieved a major biological victory, preserving for posterity a species of mountain sheep that was on the brink of extinction.

Instead of sending the last surviving California bighorns to a zoo, the biologists embarked on a transplanting process on an international scale.

A decade later, a spokesman for the B.C. Fish and Wildlife Branch can say: "We have been successful. We have preserved them for posterity."

The California bighorns once ranged from B.C. to Mexico, from the Pacific Coast as far east as the Dakotas. But as man moved west the bighorns were chased from their natural habitat. They fled to areas untouched by man but where survival was more precarious. The animals came close to dying off.

By 1955, the only California bighorns left in the world were in two herds—one in California about which little was known, and between 1,200 and 1,500 which survived west of Williams Lake, B.C.

FUTURE UNCERTAIN-

But biologists were alarmed because the B.C. herd had reached the northern perimeter of the California bighorn's range. One bad winter or a single outbreak of disease could eliminate them.

The experts decided the only way the California bighorns could be preserved would be to get scattered herds back to more southern latitudes. In 1955 game branch officials started trapping bighorn sheep, sending small clusters of the animals to wildlife officials in Oregon, North Dakota, Montana and Washington.

U.S. authorities were also anxious to preserve the species, and set up special preservation areas. These areas were guarded to keep hunters away, and the bighorns were given special diets and even vitamin shots. As a result of such treatment, the nucleus herds of California bighorns have grown into well-established communities.

And 500 acres of land north of Oliver in B.C.'s Okanagan Valley has been set aside as a winter feeding grounds for the estimated 1,500 California bighorns that remain in B.C., further increasing their chances of survival.

New Sound? No, Just Rudy Back

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Because of a crazy contraption he called a Winchester Cathedral, Rudy Vallee finds himself hauling out his megaphone once more.

For the benefit of the new generation that knows him only as the stuffed-shirt magnate of How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying, it should be explained that Vallee was the Bealle of the aspirin age. Through the megaphone years his nasal baritone was heard in ballrooms, theatres and through radios and phonographs.

He was the first of the crooners.

"I never had a very strong voice," he says, "and the only way I could be heard—this was before loudspeakers—was with a megaphone."

The conical cardboard gave his voice a distinctive sound, and it has been reproduced in the curious new record, Winchester Cathedral, by a British outfit called the New Vaudeville Band.

The first Vallee heard about it was when a Hollywood record company called to ask if he was spreading a few weeks ago in St. Paul, Minn. nightspot.

"How would you like to make some records?" he was asked.

REPLIED BLUNTLY

"Are you out of your mind?" said the blunt Vallee. "Some days I can't even talk, much less sing."

He was told about the Winchester Cathedral record, and he said he would listen to it before making up his mind. Vallee didn't care for the record at first, but he admitted the dripping nostalgia grows on the listener.

By the time Vallee had returned to Hollywood, four record companies wanted him to make his own rendition of Winchester Cathedral, as well as Vallee's hits. He chose Mavis records, a subsidiary of Dot.

He recorded the hit tune, along with some others of his own era: The Whiffenpoof Song, Sweetheart of Sigma Chi, Betty Co-Ed and Heigh Heaven.

Vallee still has the red megaphone he first used while singing with a five-piece society band at Maine resorts in 1924.

Now a pink-cheeked 63, Vallee expects no rebirth of his singing fame. He plans to continue pursuing his acting career, and may turn up on Batman soon.

Bonanza Just That for Sponsor

NEW YORK (AP) — After Bonanza hit the popularity heights, many producers tried to cash in on the show's durable formula—the family unit. Some have had considerable success.

There is a family feeling built into The Virginian with Shiloh ranch. The Big Valley has a matriarch instead of a father figure running things. Her sons are grown children on whom to hang the plots.

None, however, has had the success of Bonanza. And that success is not based merely on serving up an assortment of heroes, one of whom is bound to appeal to each segment of the viewing audience from junior to grandma.

The show combines story lines that appeal to women while supplying horses, guns and flying fists for the men.

Sunday night's episode was an example of the use of a sure-fire recipe for high Nielsen ratings.

The central figure was a nice girl who believed her boorish father when he insisted she was homely and bound to wind up an old maid. He kept doing embarrassing things like trying to buy her a bridegroom. Then she had a widower who wouldn't be bullied or tought but who was so shy he had to be jarred into pursuit of the girl.

Little Joe, the handsome Cartwright, pretended to court the girl. This made the shy widower so jealous that he overcame his shyness, hit Little Joe on the jaw and rode off with his bride-to-be.

As plots go, this chestnut is not likely to win an Emmy nomination, but it was the kind of Cinderella story in which women can get involved while the men identify with the six-shootin' cowpokes. All this makes everybody happy, particularly the sponsor and the network.

Danny Kaye's decision to quit weekly television at the end of this season relieves his network, CBS, of an awkward decision. It is highly unlikely that CBS would have carried the expensive show into a fifth season after it had received poor ratings—in the bottom third of the Nielsen list—all season.

Chinese Army to Run Opera

PEKING (Reuters)—The Chinese army has taken over the top Peking opera companies, the philharmonic orchestra and the song and dance ensemble as a prelude to a new "general offensive" against dissidents in literature and the arts.

The Communist party organ People's Daily devoted its entire Sunday front page and the black banner headlines to a report on a rally of 20,000 "revolutionary militants in the field of literature and the arts" here last Monday during which the takeovers were announced.

It was also announced at the rally that Mme. Chiang Ching, wife of Communist party Chairman Mao Tse-tung, was appointed adviser on cultural work to the people's liberation army.

Observers regarded the takeover as a further boost to the political influence of the army and its head, Defence Minister Lin Piao, who emerged during the summer as Mao's heir-apparent and sole vice-chairman of the Communist party.

But most observers believed that differences within the party leadership which were thought to lie behind many outward manifestations of the cultural revolution—such as Red Guard attacks on Communist party members—were not yet all resolved.

PEKING (AFP—Mme. Chiang Ching, wife of Communist party Chairman Mao Tse-tung, has attacked China's teenage Red Guards for using brute force, the New China news agency reported Sunday.

She told a Peking meeting: "In struggle of the great proletarian revolution should be carried out by reasoning and not by coercion or force. One must not beat up people. Force affects only the skin, whereas the struggle by reasoning can affect the soul."

Freeze-up Race for 34 Vessels

MONTREAL (CP) — Thirty-four ocean-going vessels were still in the St. Lawrence Seaway at 7 p.m. EST Sunday as the ships raced to get out of the inland waterway before freeze-up.

Dec. 3 was the official closing date for the season but favorable weather conditions made possible an extension of the deadline until at least Tuesday, a spokesman said.

The water temperature at Montreal Harbor Sunday was 38 degrees, three degrees warmer than on the same date last year.

After Tuesday the seaway is to be kept open on a day-to-day basis as long as weather conditions remain favorable and there are still ships in the waterway.

In 1955 the seaway was kept open 10 days beyond the scheduled Dec. 3 closing date.

Safe Driving Week's Toll Already 43

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

At least 18 persons died in traffic accidents Sunday, the first day of Safe - Driving Week across Canada.

A Canadian Press survey to midnight Sunday, local times, showed that two persons died in British Columbia, one in Alberta, four in Manitoba, six in Ontario and five in Quebec.

Forty - three persons have died on the highways since Safe - Driving Week started Thursday, more than in the same period in 1955. Seventy-six persons died Dec. 1-7, 1955.

The Canadian Highway Safety Council, sponsors of Safe-Driving Week, made no prediction this year of the highway death toll.

A council statement said: "There is no reason why the road-death score during Safe-Driving Week, 1955, should exceed the 10-year average of 59. There is every reason why it should be far below that average."

Vancouver's Cyrus Hale McLean Proof of Horatio Alger Theory

VANCOUVER (CP) — Millionaire Cyrus Hale McLean, British Columbia's proof positive that a man can still start at the bottom and wind up at the top, this year celebrates his 50th anniversary in the communications industry.

Fifty years ago Mr. McLean —called "Cy" by his closest friends and "C.H." by his employees—joined the B.C. Telephone Co. as a maintenance man after two years as a $25-a-month pacific coast messenger for the company.

He became president of the company in 1952 at the age of 60 and held that post until he became board chairman in 1953.

Mr. McLean, born in Prince Edward Island in 1898, joined B.C Telephone 12 years after its inception.

Today, he can trace his own career through much of the development of the industry from B.C. as far as the Philippines.

Perhaps his most notable achievement was development of a vast radio-telephone communications system across northern B.C

Hal Straight, former managing editor of the Vancouver Sun and a close friend of Mr. McLean, said he thinks he was the first one to use a radio telephone in the province, when he used a call in 1916 from Ocean Falls, B.C., to Vancouver.

"It happened to have a call to make the day it was opened," he said.

Mr. McLean's confidante and Girl Friday for 10 years, Mrs. Jean Stevens, said her boss much prefers telephoning to writing.

Mrs. Stevens said Mr. McLean has a new hobby—talking about calling her from the most bizarre places in the world—just to see how the service is."

"He's phoned from as far east as Halifax and from as far north as Circle, which is the closest community to the north pole," she said.

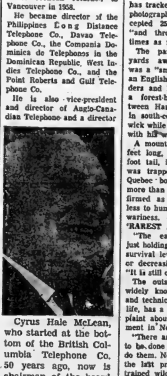
Mr. McLean's rise in the top echelon of B.C. Telephone started in the 1930s when he left Vancouver to become managing director of seven companies affiliated with the B.C firm in the South American nation of Colombia.

He had to be returned to Chicago as consulting engineer with Associated Telephone Laboratories, a division of the Automatic Electric Co. A year later he became chief engineer for Automatic, specializing in communications problems involving the use of offset.

In 1945 Mr. McLean became consulting engineer for Associated - Telephone Construction Gary Services and Telephone Bond and Share Co.

Mr. McLean returned to Vancouver in 1952.

He became director of the Philippine Long Distance Telephone Co., Davao Telephone Co., the Compania Dominicia de Telefonos in the Dominican Republic, West Indies Telephone Co., and the Point Roberts and Gulf Telephone Co.



He is also vice-president and director of Anglo-Canadian Telephone and a director of North West Telephone Co.

Since his return to Vancouver, Mr. McLean has become a leading B.C. sportsman.

Along with Vancouver restaurateur Hal Bailey, Mr. McLean was instrumental in reviving professional baseball here in 1954. He worked our a farm team deal with Kansas City Athletics and is still vice-president and director of Vancouver Mounties of the Pacific Coast League.

Hal Straight recalls Mr. McLean formed a B.C. Telephone team in the 1920s and was their catcher for the scrud.

"Cy was a good catcher,' a fair hitter—but he ran like he had both feet in hardening cement."

Cyrus Hale McLean, who started at the bottom of the British Columbia Telephone Co. 50 years ago, now is chairman of the board of the company.

Saskatchewan Newspaperman Publishing His Poems at 95

NORTH BATTLEFORD, Sask. (CP)—When Cameron Ross McIntosh publishes Canada Calling, sometime before Christmas, the book will have a royal blue cover.

The choice of color bears out the 95-year-old author when he says his collection of poems is "soon-political—but a lot of it is about politics."

Mr. McIntosh started campaigning for a distinctive Canadian flag as a Liberal member of Parliament in 1925. The flag became a reality 35 years later. Mr. McIntosh still regrets that the blue vertical borders of the design first submitted by Prime Minister Pearson were changed to red.

"It has no significance," he said in a recent talk in the city. "It should tell every school child something about our country."

While Mr. McIntosh would have accepted the two blue bars, representing the Canadian Pacific and the C.N.R., his personal preference is six bars, each one denoting the year one or more provinces entered Confederation.

An MP for North Battleford from 1925 to 1940 and a newspaper publisher since 1912, Mr. McIntosh moved to the Grey County community of Dornoch, Ont., and taught in Ontario schools for 10 years before moving west. He was one of the first teachers in the province to foster training in public speaking.

SAVED BY MEIGHENS

His first participation in politics brought him into conflict with his school board at Perth, Ont., where he was principal of the public and model school when he campaigned for a Liberal candidate.

"It was the Meighens that saved me," Mr. McIntosh recalled. The family, whose cousin, Arthur Meighen, later became prime minister of Canada, resided in the unprecedented political activity of a board employee and successfully defied his dismissal.

Moving to Saskatchewan in 1911, Mr. McIntosh acquired the weekly North Battleford News the following year.

An ardent champion of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, to whom he bears a striking physical resemblance, Mr. McIntosh was the only publisher on the Prairies to support his 1917 campaign to broaden trade with the United States.

In the same year, he declined an invitation from the Unionist government of Sir Robert Borden to accept the parliamentary nomination for North Battleford. He explained the act for the Liberals eight years later had defended it by three subsequent general elections before losing to a left-wing Unity party candidate in 1935.

Mr. McIntosh entered the radio field by founding the Northern Electric Broadcasting Company—GNB in 1946 and served as its president until 1948. He also expanded his newspaper activities, acquiring two rival weeklies and merging them into The News-Optimist, which now publishes twice a week.

He became a managing director of the Hudson Bay Route Association, an organization dedicated to promoting expansion of trade with Britain and Continental Europe through the port of Churchill, Man., and was an active participant in the work of the Presbyterian Church.

The 444 pages of poems and copious footnotes in his book, Canada Calling, reflect the breadth of their author's interests.

All but a few were written following the end of Mr. McIntosh's parliamentary career and have been printed within a few weeks of publication. They range from recollections of fully-fought campaigns to memorials for such public figures as President Kennedy and Sir Winston Churchill.

A staunch Canadian nationalist, Mr. McIntosh spends a personal creed which includes advocacy of repatriation of the constitution, expansion of Canadian Club branches, northern development and other measures to foster Canadian unity.

Shy Panther Sighted After 20-Year Stalk

FREDERICTON (CP) — It was a clear afternoon last week when Bruce S. Wright, director of the Northeastern Wildlife Station here, looked out the eastern window.

He was also his only sighting of the animal since, although zoologists of the species, once believed extinct, was established in that province to be found on a trace in New Brunswick and in east.

Since his 1947 discovery he has tracked the shy panthers, and photographed their kills, accepted the hunting reports and "thrown away" three stuffed specimens.

The panther he saw 50 yards away in September was a "small one, as high as an English setter at the shoulders and longer." It crossed the forest-bordered road between Harvey and McAlam in south-central New Brunswick while Wright was driving with his wife.

A mounted specimen seven feet long, almost three feet tall, is in his office. It was trapped on the Maine-Quebec border in 1938 and more than 10 years later confirmed as a panther—harmless to humans because of its wariness.

'RAREST ANIMAL'

The eastern panther is just holding its own on a bare survival level, not increasing or decreasing, says Wright.

"It is still our rarest animal."

The outstanding authority, widely known for his books and technical papers on wildlife, has a long-standing complaint about wildlife management in' New Brunswick.

"There are so many things to be done and few funds to do them. New Brunswick was the first province to employ trained wildlife biologists but we're catching up and the funds today is the best we've had."

On the subject of over-kills or under-kills, he says it's "quite possible" that Bruce S. ducks and blue-winged teal are being over-killed in the St. John River area. This is being studied.

Four years ago he reported that woodcock wintering in the southern United States became contaminated by pesticides and, after flying north to their breeding range, further infected by forest-sprayed DDT. The question is to show many woodcock are safe for human consumption, he says, but not yet been answered.

TEACHES IN WINTER

In winter the genial, blonde 54-year-old station director spends most of the time in his office and teaching a wildlife biology degree course at the University of New Brunswick. Summer is spent in the open, mainly in the St. John River country, and Wright finds the cause travel involved not within the capacity of his rugged physique.

The station makes annual counts of waterfowl and woodcock, checks projects vary, the main current one being studies of the ruffed grouse, bluegrouse and the foods of the white-tailed deer.

Wright and his co-workers established the first duck banding stations in the Labrador-Ungava area, the north Ontario shore of Lake Huron, Lawrence And Newfoundland. Moose studies by the station led to a recommendation that the brief open season on New Brunswick moose in recent years.

The director has three or four full-time assistants in summer, casual labor as required and the services of graduate students. His station has an office in a university building and a storehouse for field equipment.

After working with Ducks Unlimited, Wright set up the research centre in 1947 for the 'Wildlife Management Institute of Washington, D.C. The Northeastern Wildlife Station still works in co-operation with the affiliated institute. It is supported mainly by the New Brunswick government with other assistance from the Washington institute, the Nashville Research Council, Canadian Wildlife Service and the Canadian Industries Ltd. Wildlife Management Fellowship program.

Wright has a master's degree in forestry and wildlife from University of Wisconsin. His present class ("we work, we like off them") numbers eight undergraduates and three graduates working for their master's.

"Demand for wildlife biologists far exceeds the supply and we sometimes have more applicants than we can take," he says.

Oil Discovered In Egyptian Desert

CAIRO (Reuters) — Oil has been discovered for the first time in Egypt's western desert, the authoritative newspaper Al Ahram reported today.

The first well was found 12 miles south pt Alamein. Its annual production was estimated at between 70,000 and 75,000 tons.

The drillers first found oil at 6,000 feet and since then have kept secret until analysis of samples was complete, the paper said.

Drilling was continued to locate the extent of the field, Al Ahram added.

Camp Backs QuebecPCs' Party Plan

MONTREAL (CP) — Dalton Camp, president of the Progressive Conservative Association of Canada, has expressed support for a plan which he said would make the party's association in Quebec more "democratic and self-determining."

Mr. Camp made the statement after the executive of the Quebec Conservative association met Saturday as part of an attempt to reorganize the party in this province.

Paul Trepanier, president of the Quebec association, said after the meeting there should be a "mixing of views" of the party's English- and French-speaking supporters in this province.

Part of Mr. Trepanier's plans for the provincial wing is to make its voice heard more loudly in the central Conservative councils.

Mr. Camp attended at the invitation of Mr. Trepanier. Party sources said about a dozen points were discussed.

A press conference is scheduled for Dec. 14, at which it is planned to announce the party's blueprint for revitalization in Quebec.

Mrs. Mao Is Groomed For Big Role

TOKYO (AP)—Mrs. Mao Tse-tung is being given such a big political buildup that it suggests she is destined for bigger things after Mao dies.

The New China News Agency reported today that Mao's wife, Chiang Ching, gave her first major political address Nov. 28 to 20,000 art and literary workers in Peking. Though Premier Chou En-lai is cultural purge chief Chen Po-ta also spoke, it was plain that she was the centre of attention.

Her speech revealed that she has been involved in the politics of the cultural revolution only a few years, and that she had encountered setbacks and rebuffs from those engaged in the theatre. The No. 1 Peking Opera Company—one of those which fought last-ditch several other top music and ballet groups have been taken over by the army, presumably at her insistence.

In her speech a week ago, Mrs. Mao attacked President Liu, Party General Secretary Teng Hsao-ping, army founder Chu Teh and economic expert Chen Yun through praise for those who had helped her rather than blame for those who had not. She did not include Liu, Teng, Chu or Chen among her supporters.

Foil Oregon Jailbreak

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP)—Police put down an attempted jailbreak after several prisoners stabbed a guard and took two others hostage at Multnomah County's high-security Rocky Butte jail Sunday night.

Four convicts were seized after holding out in an isolation corridor for two hours. The stabbed guard was reported recovering and the others were released unharmed.

Helping restore order were Rev. Thomas Forney, pastor of Portland's Village Baptist Church and Rev. Victory Graham, assistant pastor of St. Rita's Roman Catholic Church.

There was no clear explanation of what made the men surrender and what kept 450 prisoners silent in their cells during the outbreak.

Religion in Ontario Schools Mammoth Task for Committee

OTTAWA (CP)—The diversity of views presented to the Ontario committee on religious education in public schools at hearings in the capital last week indicates the committee will need the wisdom of Solomon to arrive at recommendations that will have wide public acceptance.

There were calls for abolition of such instruction, opinions that it should remain with certain improvements, and recommendations that comparative religion courses should replace the present Judaeo - Christian-oriented syllabus.

Committee chairman Keiller Mackay, a former lieutenant-governor of Ontario who served for 23 years on the province's supreme court, told the hearing the committee has not yet arrived at conclusions and would not until all available submissions had been heard.

The Ottawa Council of Churches said religious instruction should be continued "but religion in the public schools must always be conditioned by consent of parents."

Rev. G. J. Foy, who presented the council brief, said there has been a "complete breakdown between church and school" and called for a determined effort to "close the ranks."

The "richest source" material for religion classes would be in the Old and New Testaments but this did "not preclude other sources."

The Jewish Community Council of Ottawa said: "We are convinced that the religious education taught in the public schools severely complicates the obligation we have to impress on our children the principles and practices of the Jewish religion."

Speaking for the council, businessman Mervin Mirsky, said it was "prepared to accept a course in comparative religion if such could be properly devised."

A brief from the First Unitarian Congregation of Ottawa said provincial regulations on religion in schools "amount to simple indoctrination into a specific sectarian Christian point of view. It would have no objection to instruction in comparative religion, but providing unbiased instruction would be a problem.

A committee of Ottawa citizens which said 650 persons had signed its brief said the teaching of religion in schools is "necessary and desirable" and if it were abolished our nation would be opened "to the onslaught of human dictatorship and the rule of tyrants."

A brief from the Anglican Diocese of Ottawa presented by Canon William Wright of Pembroke said religious education in the schools should be continued.

But, where they do, clergy could discontinue giving such instruction, Canon Wright said, "and hand it over to lay specialists."

The United Church of Canada did not present a brief at Friday's hearings but the committee may again be sitting at Ottawa and a brief could be tabled before it then.

Rev. W. H. Jones, a Baptist, told the committee religion classes are both necessary and desirable in schools.

Charles Fisher, an Ottawa engineer, said public funds should not be spent on religious instruction in schools.

To Check Delinquency, Get 'em Into Pool Room

KYLE, Sask. (CP)—The way they look at it in Kyle, the best way of coping with juvenile delinquency is by letting the youngsters into the pool room.

When Mr. and Mrs. Joe Lipka took over the billiard parlor 18 months ago in this town, 45 miles north of Swift Current, they were approached by some parents who were concerned by Kyle's lack of recreational facilities and wanted their children to play pool.

The Lipkas imposed an age limit of 14 and a set of regulations governing profanity, cleanliness and general behavior. Later the minimum was dropped to 10. Minors must have written consent from their parents before they are admitted.

"There have been a few problems, but mostly from fellows out of town," Mr. Lipka said. "Once they find out what the score is, though, they usually co-operate."

The town council, churches and schools have expressed their satisfaction with operations at the billiard hall and town constable Bill Clark says his problems with local teenagers have virtually disappeared.

What Are You For? Greene Asks Youth

HALIFAX (CP) — Agriculture Minister Greene told a group of students Saturday he has heard a lot of complaints and protests from Canadian youth, but no real answers for national and international problems.

"We know what you are against, such as the war in Vietnam and the arms race of American capital in Canada," Mr. Greene said, "but it's more difficult to know what you are for."

The minister was in Halifax to attend the annual meeting of the Nova Scotia Liberal Association.

He suggested that, rather than merely protest, young person should devote their talents and energy to finding practical solutions to some of Canada's most pressing problems such as poverty, penal and legal reforms, human rights and conflicts between different cultural groups.

"We need to hear the positive voice of the new generation."

Seeks SPCA Asylum

CARPI, Italy (AP)—A 1,000-pound ox escaped Saturday from the local slaughter house and raced wildly through the streets of this north Italian city, spreading panic in the downtown area. The animal smashed shop windows and finally came to a halt—in the courtyard of the local society for the protection of animals. It didn't help. Workers came and took the ox back for slaughter.

Slide Threat Renewed

Aberfan Families Quit Village

ABERFAN, Wales (AP) — Frightened families are preparing to leave this small Welsh mining village, unable to live any longer under the threat of the killer coal slag heap that towers above.

The man-made mountain of coal waste slipped Oct. 21, engulfing a school and killing 144 persons, 116 of them children. A generation of youngsters was wiped out in the village of 5,000.

The heap slipped again last Thursday, following torrential rains, bringing fears of a fresh disaster.

As the families got ready to quit the place, bulldozers were brought in to slice the top off the slag heap to make it safer.

Officials said 50,000 cubic yards of material would be taken from the top. Coal board official Geoffrey Morgan said the job will take about a month to complete.

The action followed a statement last week at the tribunal in nearby Merthyr, which is investigating the Oct. 21 disaster. The tribunal opened last Tuesday and is expected to go on for six weeks.

Lawyer Desmond Ackner, representing the bereaved parents of Aberfan, pleaded that terrified villagers should be housed elsewhere.

Rev. Kenneth Hayes, Baptist minister and chairman of the Aberfan Parents' Association, said at least 10 frightened families are ready to leave Aberfan immediately.

"But the number may be higher; we are getting new reports all the time," he added.

ALLTWEN (AP) — Authorities have warned 100 persons living below a 300-foot high cliff in this Welsh village of a big rock fall.

Engineering consultants reported Sunday night that huge boulders perched above Alltwen could come crashing down at any time — particularly after heavy rainfall.

A school under the cliff already has been closed and the 115 children transferred to other schools.

Alltwen is about 40 miles from Aberfan.

Houses in other areas are being offered to Alltwen residents who want to move out.

Opposition to Pursue Claim It's "Means Test" for Elderly

OTTAWA (CP)—An opposition barrage on the government's decision to link more help for the aged with their level of income was expected today as the Commons opened debate on the government measure.

Opposition members have attacked the plan as a revival of the "means test" under another name ever since it first was announced by Health Minister MacEachen in July.

They have demanded instead a flat increase in the present $75-a-month pension paid to more than 1,000,000 Canadians at age 68.

The plan would provide $30 a month for those pensioners who have no income besides the $75 pension. The amount would be scaled down, dollar-for-dollar, for those with extra income, providing a guaranteed minimum for all of $105.

The payments would be effective in January, when eligibility for the regular pension also will be lowered to age 68.

Mr. MacEachen has insisted no means test or needs test is involved in the plan, but has not spelled out how the payments will be determined.

A motion on the Commons order paper says only that the bill will "provide for the determination of the income of a pensioner for the purposes of such supplement and for appeals by pensioners against decisions."

In a weekend speech in Halifax Mr. MacEachen repeated that no means test is involved.

But he said there would be no way to administer or operate a guaranteed income plan except by calculating the pensioner's flow of income.

FLYING PEER DIES

LONDON (AP) — Viscount Knollys, British aviation pioneer known as "the flying peer," died in a nursing home Saturday. He was 71. A First World War pilot, he later became a businessman and served as chairman of BOAC and Vickers Engineering. Knollys' title passes to his son, David, 33.

Thursday opening a new session of the Quebec legislature announced the provincial government's intention to obtain exclusive responsibility for old age security, now administered in Quebec mainly by the federal government.

Mr. Cloutier told a Montreal conference on care for the aged that the proposed means test in the federal plan is something new in federal thinking. It constituted a move into the field of "guaranteed income."

Fog on Highway

LBJ Hot Foots It to Church

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — President Johnson's Texas driving habits are back in the news again.

The White House, using figures from an official log, said Johnson "drove at a moderate speed" on his way to church along a fog-bound highway Sunday.

But a reporter and two photographers driving separate cars said they couldn't keep up with the president despite traveling 80 to 85 miles an hour, and faster in some spurts.

Johnson's accelerator foot stirred stories of high - speed driving in March, 1964, but secret service cars screened reporters enough to keep them from clocking the president.

Johnson drove his white Lincoln Continental from the LBJ Ranch to church at Fredericksburg Sunday, accompanied by Mrs. Johnson and Bess Abell, White House social secretary.

Within hours of reports from the three men who couldn't keep up with Johnson, the White House issued its speeding denial.

Harold Pachios, aide to Press Secretary Bill D. Moyers, said the secret service log showed an elapsed time of 25 minutes for the 17.4-mile trip.

"This indicates the president drove at a moderate speed," said Pachios. His figures showed an average speed of 42 miles an hour.

The three press representatives were waiting by the highway for Johnson to pass.

NO DETERRENT — Being in hospital doesn't stop Mrs. William Hurst from handing her Christmas gift committee for mentally ill. Here she frons out problems with Mrs. Wanda Sine.

Mrs. Wm. Hurst Directs Program From Hospital

Hospital walls are no barrier to the enthusiasm of the dedicated community service worker.

At least, that seems the moral pointed up by Mrs. Louise Hurst, an active member of the Canadian Mental Health Association's Belleville branch.

Right now Mrs. Hurst, wife of Hastings County registrar William Hurst, is being more than usually active for this association — from her bedside in Belleville General Hospital.

She was confined to hospital with a leg injury Oct. 26 and the stay has lasted longer than she expected.

In the interim, the mental health group embarked on its annual Christmas gift program for patients in the Ontario Hospital at Kingston and special care homes in the Quinte district.

The one difficulty was the fact Mrs. Hurst is chairman of the committee organizing gift distribution.

However, it was no problem to Mrs. Hurst. If she couldn't go to the work, then the work must come to her, she decided.

So, in recent days, committee members have transferred decision-making to her bedside at Belleville General.

Elsewhere, the committee is being aided by volunteer workers who individually wrap each gift before it is despatched to its destination. The contents of each package are noted on the wrapping so the hospital and home authorities may easily decide which individual gets what.

The gifts have been so far mainly donated by women's organizations and church groups canvassed earlier in the year by Mrs. Hurst's committee.

"However," says the chairman, "we need many more gifts still, so that we can combine two or three small things in one personal package."

Area residents wishing to contribute to the Christmas project can leave gifts at the Hurst home, 248 Church Street, or in donation boxes at Leslie's Shoe Store on Front Street and Barton's Pharmacy, North Front Street.

Workers will begin wrapping the gifts Dec. 12 while deadline for distribution to the various centres is three days later.

Nova Scotian Liberals Place Accent on Youth

HALIFAX (CP) — Liberal Leader Gerald Regan of Nova Scotia said Saturday he intends to lead a youthful party to victory in the next provincial election, expected to be held in 1967.

"I promise that in 1967 I will lead this party down the road to victory at the polls in Nova Scotia," Mr. Regan told the party's annual meeting.

"We are not fighting for more seats — the Liberals currently hold four in the 43-seat house— we are going out in 1967 to elect a Liberal government in this province."

The Liberal leader said the prerequisite for victory is youth and brains, and the other speakers at the meeting echoed his views.

The youngest speaker at the meeting, Peter Green, president of the Young Liberal Association in Nova Scotia, told the delegates—40 per cent of them estimated to be more than 30 years old—that more than one-quarter of the people eligible to vote in the next provincial election will be in the 21 to 30 age bracket.

The Liberal party had to present a program which was in accord with the hopes and aspirations of this significant sector of the voting population.

The outgoing president of the association, lawyer R. MacLeod Rogers, said in his report that "we need youth, the vigor and bloom of it, the numbers and variety of it and the overwhelming importance of it."

He added that youth is also a frame of mind, "an attitude and we need this frame of mind, this enquiring spirit, in Liberals of all ages."

U.S. Ousting Irks Mayors In France

PARIS (Reuters)—The United States' withdrawal from its military base at Toul in eastern France has led to a mass resignation threat by 96 local mayors.

The closure of the base will put 3,000 French civilians out of work and the mayors have said they will resign Dec. 31 unless the French government assures the region's economic future.

The mayors representing a large majority of local municipalities, gave their ultimatum at a meeting Saturday. They said the state was responsible for a situation arising directly from its own political decisions.

In accordance with the demands of President de Gaulle, there will be no American bases left in France after April next year and about 25,000 French civilian employees will lose their jobs.

Reconsider Formula

BC Employers Dislike Nichol Plan

VANCOUVER (CP) — Employers were taking a second look today at a previously-rejected formula to end the British Columbia shipping tieup.

The 200 longshore foremen at the centre of the dispute approved the settlement plan Sunday night. It was proposed by Labor Minister Nicholson in weekend meetings with both sides.

Mr. Nicholson would not comment on his plan.

"Naturally I'm glad one side has accepted the proposal," he said. "It would be inadvisable to give further details as the companies will consider it next."

But E. M. Strang, president of the B.C. Maritime Employers Association, said management already has rejected the Nicholson formula, which he said would give foremen the right of grievance procedure and the right of association to process disputes.

"This is a pressure move," he said. "Certainly the foremen would approve it because it's what they've wanted all along. It's a primitive form of a collective agreement. It could work to union control.

"Grievances weren't even mentioned when the foremen went out on their illegal strike or during the subsequent illegal slowdowns by the longshoremen gangs."

The foremen struck Nov. 17 in back demands for recognition by employers as a local of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union. They since have said they want only recognition, not necessarily with ILWU affiliation.

Longshoremen refused to cross the foremen's picket lines until the lines were lifted through a court injunction five days later. Then the employers accused longshoremen of a slowdown and stopped ordering gangs to work a week ago, bringing a full waterfront shutdown.

The employers say no gangs will be hired until the union gives an assurance in advance that the men will do a day's work for a day's pay.

The union has countered that any slowdown was caused by a lack of efficient supervisory personnel — the missing foremen.

More than 4,000 longshoremen are idle, plus another 2,000 forest industry employees. Further widespread layoffs are expected if the shutdown continues much longer. Lumber and pulp companies say they are running out of storage space.

Among the more than 75 ships tied up by the dispute are 22 waiting to take on grain cargoes. Longshoremen offered to work the grain ships, and to unload manderin oranges for the Christmas trade, but employers said no. They said there must be a full return, and a no-slowdown guarantee, or no hiring at all.

Royal Commission Will Open Probe Into 'Bugging' Incident

VANCOUVER (CP)—A royal commission hearing into allegations of bugging of a labor convention was scheduled to open here today amid exchanges of verbal gunfire by labor representatives.

The commission, chaired by former county court judge R. A. Sargeant, is investigating accusations that electronic listening devices were placed in hotel rooms used by delegates to the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada convention at the instigation of Pat O'Neal, organizer for the rival International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers.

Three Vancouver Island labor officials added their voices during the weekend to calls for Mr. O'Neal's resignation from the executive of the B.C. Federation of Labor.

Federation secretary Ray Haynes said Sunday no action will be taken either way until all the facts in the case are brought out in the hearing.

The Vancouver Island appeals came from Weldon Jubenville, president of Local 1-80 of the International Woodworkers of America, who said his local may withhold financial contributions to the federation if Mr. O'Neal does not resign. Similar action was urged by Fernie Vlais, president of the Duncan-Nanaimo labor council, and by the 700 members of the Victoria local of United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners.

Their voices were added to earlier demands from the influential 7,000-member Vancouver local of the IWA, headed by Syd Thompson.

The commission was called by Premier W. A. C. Bennett shortly after electronic devices were found by PPWC delegates Nov. 5 in a downtown hotel.

The devices were seized by police and Department of Transport officials. One was found in a room in which Lloyd Craig of Castlegar, president of the PPWC, was found dead during the convention, apparently of a heart attack.

Mr. Craig's death, the long-standing jurisdictional rivalry between the International and Canadian pulp unions, and the whole question of electronic eavesdropping are included in the broad terms of reference given to Judge Sargeant.

Premier Bennett's order specified that the commissioner be authorized to hold hearings "as he may deem appropriate."

The premier told reporters the inquiry will not be limited.

"The government of B.C. is determined to protect the rights of privacy of all citizens," he said.

The order establishing the commission noted the death of Mr. Craig.

"And that subsequent to his death it appears that another union, the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers, may have been interfering with the private life of Lloyd Craig and his union while Craig was in Vancouver.

"And that one W. R. Graham, a licensed private detective, has stated he was paid by an officer of the other union to carry out acts which would have constituted an unwarranted invasion of privacy of Lloyd Craig, his room and his union.

"And that the two unions are rivals for the membership of pulp and paper workers."

After the devices were discovered, private detective Weldon Graham said he had been paid $200 by Mr. O'Neal to spy on the convention, and that he had been introduced to Mr. O'Neal by two members of the RCMP's security and intelligence branch.

Mr. O'Neal later admitted he had paid Mr. Graham to get information about alleged intimidation tactics by the PPWC against international members, but denied he knew Mr. Graham would use bugging devices.

Britain Asks UN to Order Sanctions

LONDON (CP)—Foreign Secretary George Brown flies to the United Nations in New York today to take charge of Britain's diplomatic efforts aimed at accomplishing what a year of direct negotiations has failed to do—break the Rhodesian rebellion.

Britain has already asked for an early meeting of the Security Council to bring in mandatory sanctions against the breakaway colony. A meeting is scheduled Thursday. Brown's job will be to press for exactly the type of sanctions Britain wants, no less and if possible no more.

Britain itself can expect to get an early indication of the cost of the firm "no" that came Monday from Ian Smith and his cabinet in Salisbury, rejecting a "working document" drafted by Smith and Prime Minister Wilson on board the cruiser Tiger late last week.

The pound sterling came under pressure in the foreign exchange market today.

The Bank of England moved in with support, once more laying out dollars from reserves to protect the value of the pound.

But the rate still suffered a sharp fall of more than 3-16ths of a cent in terms of the U.S. dollar, dipping well below the $2.79 mark which authorities normally try to maintain.

The authorities were reported to have lowered their support price twice in less than an hour of business.

On the London Stock Exchange dealings came almost to a halt and prices were marked lower.

Tobacco shares and companies with Rhodesian interests were hardest hit in the early sells.

Zambian copper shares suffered early falls of up to 4s 6d (63 cents) registered by Roan Selection Trust. South African gold shares also fell.

The climax of a year of backstage talks aimed at ending Rhodesia's unilateral declaration of independence came Monday when Smith told a crowd of cheering supporters in Salisbury: "The right goes on."

Using phrases like "utterly irresponsible" and "repugnant" to describe some of the terms contained in the proposed settlement, Smith said the Rhodesian leaders "cannot be expected to yield such fundamental principles and in a manner which amounts to surrender and submission of power."

Speaking in a dramatically-packed House of Commons—galleries, benches and even aisles crammed with listeners—Wilson said the working document prepared on board the Tiger had contained all that was necessary for a return to constitutional rule.

Instead, he said, the Rhodesian cabinet had chosen "power for its own sake."

Not a single government on earth recognized the rebels, Wilson said adding: "The only sacrifice we asked Mr. Smith to make was the sacrifice, not of independence, but of the unreal, dream-world, Walter Mitty independence recognized by no one but themselves."

Wilson said he had been ready to allow the Smith regime to retain power—provided it returned to a legal status, broadened its base by accepting new members, including Negroes, and altered control of the security forces.

Smith had been left in no doubt of the international consequences that would follow refusal, Wilson said.

In the current move to the UN for mandatory sanctions, Britain will try to limit the extent of sanctions to a selective list and to prevent the spread of economic reprisals to the rest of southern Africa. A mandatory blockade of trade with South Africa would place a crippling strain on Britain's already shaky economy.

The biggest difficulty at the UN may prove to be the question of oil—oil embargo. Britain is understood to want to avoid a blockade on oil, but pressure from Commonwealth countries is likely to be aimed at getting oil included in the list of embargoed goods.

British Terms Called 'Abject Surrender'

SALISBURY (Reuters)—The Rhodesian government today denounced British proposals for a settlement of the 13-month-long independence crisis as a demand for abject and unconditional surrender by Salisbury that would lead in the end to chaos and violence.

It declared that the communique issued at the end of the Commonwealth leaders' conference in London in September was an ultimatum and added:

"The British terms are designed to give effect to the ultimatum and can in no way be regarded as a basis for negotiations."

The attack on Britain's handling of the negotiations came in a special communique outlining the six points of a white paper due to be released later today giving the Salisbury version of the long Anglo-Rhodesian negotiations.

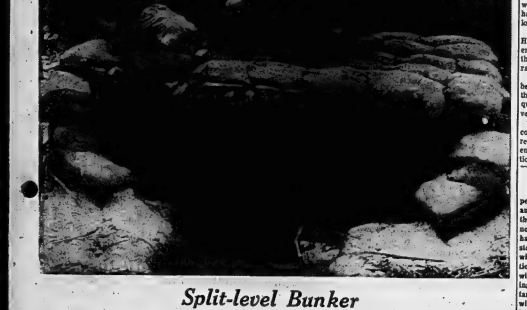
Britain issued a white paper in London earlier giving its side of the negotiations story.

The Rhodesian summary dealt with negotiations and proposals up to Oct. 15 when definitive "last chance" British proposals for a settlement were delivered in Salisbury.

The tough-worded government statement declared:

"Stripped of all trappings and ambiguity, the British proposals demand the unconditional and abject surrender to Mr. Wilson of the Rhodesian government, the control of all government executive services including the civil service, and the control of the national government."

Today's Rhodesian statement said the British proposals would have meant the immediate introduction of rule by inexperienced and unfit persons.



Africans Demand Force

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—African nations at the United Nations today demanded that Britain meet with force Rhodesia's rejection of the British-approved formula for ending the Rhodesia crisis.

Many Africans seemed to feel that economic penalties were not enough.

FIRST CALL with Bonar Wright

Bid to Have Tape Heard Is Opposed

VANCOUVER (CP)—The case of the bugged union was scheduled to resume today after a stormy opening session Monday that featured arguments on whether there should be a play-back of recording tapes.

Counsel for the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada, John Laxton, entered a strong submission against it.

The union has accused Pat O'Neal, organizer for the rival international Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers, of authorizing the electronic eavesdropping of hotel rooms occupied by PPWC officers during a convention.

The inquiry, ordered by Premier W. A. C. Bennett, is being conducted by retired county court judge R. A. Sargent.

Mr. Laxton said the tapes were taken at a "bull session" where delegates were drinking, and said he would like to seek instructions from the Canadian union on whether he should object to the tapes being played to anyone at all, including the commissioner.

"One of the issues here is whether personal privacy has been invaded and if these tapes are replayed then our privacy has been invaded," he said.

Elmer Sandercock Announces Retirement

Elmer Sandercock, deputy speaker of the Ontario Legislature and MPP for Hastings West since 1948, last night confirmed his retirement from politics.

"I made the decision a long time ago," he said at his Williams Street home. "I told some of my friends and I thought today that I should announce it."

He gave his lengthy term of service — matched by only three other sitting MPPs — as the chief reason for his decision.

Mr. Sandercock said he will continue to represent the riding until the provincial election expected next year, but will not enter another campaign.

He may have given one indication of an election date when he added:

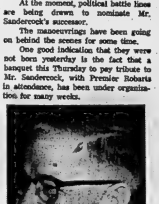
"If the election is in June, I'll have had 19 years at it."

The first — and most highly-charged — consequence of Mr. Sandercock's confirmation centres on the ruling Conservative party.

The fight for the succession, after 19 years without a personality change—Mr. Sandercock even may hold a local record since he was acclaimed at every convention — is expected to stimulate a keen tussle behind the scenes.

At first glance, attraction is added to the bids since the area always has been considered an unassailable Tory keep.

The riding of Hastings West was created forever as such in the last realignment of constituency boundaries.



It is replaced in part by Quinte riding, which has a fairly large rural reserve of Conservative voters in the northern townships of Hastings. The balance of power now lies with the urban bayshore bloc, Belleville and Trenton and its voting pattern has now to be confirmed.

However, the party will handle that problem when election time arrives.

At the moment, political battle lines are being drawn to nominate Mr. Sandercock's successor.

The manoeuvrings have been going on behind the scenes for some time.

One good indication that they were not been yesterday is the fact that a banquet this Thursday to pay tribute to Mr. Sandercock, with Premier Robarts in attendance, has been under organization for many weeks.

ELMER SANDERCOCK

Recently, word was around that Mr. Sandercock might then take the opportunity to announce his retirement. A nominating convention was expected to be held sometime in January.

Suddenly, last weekend, the convention was announced for December 21 — a bare 10 days' notice.

The momentum has been carried on by Mr. Sandercock's announcement and bidders for the succession could confirm their intentions any time.

So far three names have increasingly been mentioned—all Bellevillians: Mayor Jack Ellis, Dr. Richard Potter and Macdonald (Mac) Smith, chairman of the Belleville public school board.

Of the three, Mayor Ellis holds the edge in public relations — by virtue of his office.

However, Dr. Potter and Mr. Smith have been closely related with party organization through the years and it is party delegates who choose the candidate.

Mr. Sandercock, a native of Stirling, was appointed deputy speaker of the Legislature in 1960.

His lengthy service record is bettered by only three others — Conservatives Leslie Frost, Scarborough (York North), and J. Frèd Edwards (Perth) and one-time Liberal leader Farquhar Oliver.

There are only three other members still in the Legislature who went there as political freshmen with Mr. Sandercock in 1948 — Louis Cecile, later welfare minister; Speaker Donald Barlow and Liberal George T. Gordon (Brantford.)

Leading Liberals Hope Nixon Will Get Acclamation as Chief

TORONTO (CP) — Leading members of the Ontario Liberal party called Monday night for the election by acclamation of Robert Nixon, Liberal House leader.

Mr. Nixon announced his intention to run for party leadership earlier Monday at a Queen's Park news conference. Andrew Thompson vacated the post Nov. 16 because of ill health.

Walter Gordon, former federal finance minister, said he would normally, favor a contest but as acclamation in present circumstances would demonstrate unity and be healthy for the party.

Elmer Sopha, member of the legislature for Sudbury, said an election would give Nixon the leader would be healthy for the party.

Gordon Blair, president of the provincial party, said he preferred to maintain a neutral position and avoided comment.

Earlier, Mr. Nixon drew support from Charles Templeton, the Bunkhouse philosopher radio-television personality who placed second to Mr. Thompson at a 1964 leadership convention.

"He will be an excellent candidate," said Mr. Templeton, who announced recently that he would not be a candidate. "He'll have a sterable impact. Bob has lots of ability."

Mr. Nixon, 38, whose father, Harry, in 1943 was first Liberal premier of Ontario, placed third in the 1964 leadership race.

The member for Brant said he expected others would be in the running when the leadership question is decided at a convention later Jan. 7.

"... As leader of the party I could unify it and make it the real alternative to the present Conservative administration," he said.

And, he said, he thought he could carry on the heavy organizational work that has been behind for the breakdown in Mr. Thompson's health.

Mr. Thompson, recuperating from a series of illnesses including heart trouble, will continue to represent Toronto Dovercourt in the legislature.

Mr. Nixon said Mr. Thompson's resignation was "an unfortunate pause" in the party's efforts to bolster its fortunes throughout the province.

The Liberals have 22 seats in the 106-seat house, Progressive Conservatives 78 and the New Democratic Party eight.

The Liberals would field a full slate of 117 candidates in the next election when redistribution adds three seats, Mr. Nixon predicted.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Above normal temperatures are expected today as an intense storm centred over the Dakotas pours warmer air northward across the western half of the Great Lakes. This storm will hit Ontario today with a broad area of precipitation. Strong southerly winds will give mild 40-degree readings throughout southern Ontario this afternoon but skies will be overcast with rain. Wednesday colder air will sag southward toward the upper Great Lakes but mild weather will continue in the south.

Chinese Seamen Mutiny On Ship in Aussie Port

Mutinous Chinese seamen tried to storm the bridge of a Dutch ship in port here today, but were beaten off by gunfire from the captain and officers who had barricaded themselves there.

Four shots were fired aboard the 6,439 - ton Strait Malakka and four seamen were later taken to hospital with leg wounds.

The captain's wife and child were on the bridge with the ship's officers when the crew attacked.

The dispute arose when one crew member was docked five days' pay after refusing to do a job.

The ship's officers called police who took two men off the ship—one of them at gunpoint.

As they were leaving the wharf the rest of the Chinese crew tried to overturn the police car but retreated when a shot was fired in the air.

The crew then returned to the ship where the captain, his family and the other officers had armed themselves with pistols and barricaded themselves on the bridge.

After the shooting, police seized off the wharf where the ship was berthed.

Tory Toronto Elects Its First NDP Mayor

TORONTO (CP)—"Tory Toronto" has elected its first New Democrat mayor.

William Dennison made the grade Monday despite opposition from incumbent Philip Givens, fellow controller. William Archer and a lack of support from the city's three daily newspapers.

A native of Snake River, an Ottawa Valley farming community, he "entered politics" in 1919 at 14.

The United Farmers of Ontario recruited him to organize a bowling team and badger Liberals and Conservatives campaigning in Renfrew County.

"We got so good the opposition parties gave up sending speakers into the north of the county," the mayor-elect recalls. "The only time I didn't stammer was when I talked politics."

He took a speech therapy course in Kitchener and New York City and later opened his own speech-therapy school in Oshawa.

He moved to Toronto in 1930 and opened a speech school.

In the 1925 federal election, he campaigned unsuccessfully as CCF candidate in Rosedale riding.

He turned to local politics but was twice beaten in bids for a seat on city council. Changing tactics, he ran for school board in 1937 and topped the polls.

In the 1940s he served briefly as provincial politics as CCF member for Toronto St. David.

In 1953, he took a seat on city council as an alderman.

His colleagues on council view him as a friendly person but somewhat distant, disinclined to join in social events.

During the campaign, he promised ratepayers he would work to keep Toronto's tax rate down and suggested a good place to start would be education costs.

Suburbs Stick to Old Guard

TORONTO (CP) — Surprises in the city but status quo in suburbs marked the first elections for the new six-unit Metropolitan Toronto Monday.

Biggest surprise was the Toronto mayoralty, won by Con. William Dennison over incumbent Philip Givens and Con. William Archer.

The race for Toronto board of control also produced something of an upset when two women led the polls and by doing so gained seats on Metro council.

Incumbent Margaret Campbell led 11 candidates for the four seats and Ald. June Marks was next in line. The other two successful candidates were former mayor Allan Lamport and incumbent Herbert Orliffe.

In the suburbs, four of the five new mayors are reeves of the townships whose names will be attached to the new boroughs when they come into being Jan. 1.

Landslide wins were scored by Reeves James Service of North York and Albert Campbell of Scarborough.

Reeve Jack Mould also won handily in his bid to become mayor of York borough.

The mayor-elect of East York borough is True Davidson, reeve of East York.

Request for Report Tabled

Aldermen Free to Seek Answers at Hospital Meeting Monday

Belleville city council and members of Hastings county council are expected to get at least some of the answers regarding the hospital report received from Ontario Hospital Services Commission consultants.

Members of both councils have been invited by the hospital board of governors to a dinner to be held Dec. 12th.

Mayor J. R. Ellis at last night's regular meeting of city council, said it was expected that questions regarding the report will be answered by the board.

At the same time he emphasized that no member of the board has the authority to reveal any part of the hospital administration report without consent of the board.

Ald. Jack Allin raised the question with a motion for council to request the board of governors to submit a copy of the OHSC commission report on the hospital administration to council.

The motion was tabled and no action was taken on a later motion from the same alderman calling on council to accept the offer of board chairman Mrs. Lean Haig to report to a council recess.

Mayor Ellis ruled the motion not acceptable, stating that as far as he was concerned council had no such offer from Mr. Haig.

"He made the offer to me by telephone and I am sure he would garry it out," returned Ald. Allin.

Ald. Dr. J. Russell Scott said it was important that city representatives know what was in the report.

This, he said was necessary to still the rumors floating about, many of which were completely untrue.

Alderman Allin agreed to withdraw his motion when Mayor Ellis said it was expected questions regarding the report would be answered at the joint dinner meeting.

The mayor then read a statement of facts regarding the hospital which, he said, would serve to "combat a wave of irresponsible gossip."

He said the consultants' report with regard to administration problems at the hospital was being withheld from publication at the express request of the board on the advice of the commission.

No member of the board had the authority to reveal the report without the consent of the board.

He listed the members of the board. Their term expiration dates in brackets are as follows:

Belleville — Gerald E. Cunningham and J. E. Boehm (1968); J. B. Corke and Monsignor J. P. Sullivan (1967) and A. McLean Haig (1966.)

County of Hastings — Hartley A. Ashley (1968); Bancroft Reeve J. N. Brown (1967); Marmora Reeve W. A. Shannon (1966).

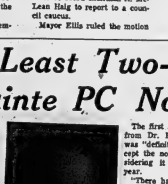
In addition the mayor of the city of Belleville and Hasting's county's warden are ex-officio members of the board. The medical staff has made two appointments, Drs. A. E. Rose and Dr. L. B. Crook, and the Women's Christian Association two appointments, Mrs. J. E. Marsh and J. Legate. J. N. Vanzwer is the appointee of the Lt.-Governor-in-Council.

Mayor Haig said the total cost of the new hospital addition, including boiler house, main hospital contract, furnishings and equipment, together with field supervision, architect's and engineer's fees would be $8,857,000.

This would be made up of $2,636,327 in government grants, $300,000 in charitable grants, forgiveness feature of the municipal work assistance program, $250,000; Belleville General Hospital $300,00; Ontario Hospital Services Commission loan $1,500,000 city of Belleville debentures $3,221,021 and county of Hastings debentures $1,234,650.

The building portion of the hospital, because of changes made, is under its budget by $43,874.

All equipment costs are not in yet but the board will stay within its budget unless private donations are received from charitable organizations.



"A hospital such as ours can never have too much equipment, since new methods and equipment are being designed daily", the mayor's statement concluded.

It's at Least Two-way Fight For Quinte PC Nomination

A strong two-way fight for the Conservative succession in Quinte riding shaped up today as two leading contenders served notice of their political ambitions.

Mayor Jack Ellis and Dr. Richard T. Potter, Belleville physician, both announced they will seek the nomination when riding Conservatives hold their convention in Trenton Dec. 12.

Confirmation of their indications came in the wake of last night's announcement by Elmer SanSercvck that he would not stand for another election.

MACDONALD SMITH

Mr. Sandercock, 1948, has been MPP for Hastings West, the majority voting bloc of which is transferred to Quinte riding under the last revision of constituency boundaries.

A third local Conservative Belleville public school board chairman Macdonald (Mac) Smith also confirmed today his name had been mooted as a possible convention candidate. However, he declined to offer. Hely commit himself at this time.

The first announcement came from Dr. Potter who said he was "definitely prepared to accept the nomination after considering it for more than a year.

"There have been many factors — including my family and my practice," he added.

However, he revealed he had been "fortunate in arranging for a partner who will take over my medical responsibilities as required . . . ."

Mayor Ellis' announcement was a close second, made from his office at city hall.

"I've definitely got my hat in the ring. I'm going to make a strong attempt to gain the nomination."

He said after 10 years municipal experience "it is a logical next step."

"I feel I've been able to serve this community well. I think we've made progress in recent years."

"With 10 years of service in the Quinte district, working with the departments of ministers at Queen's Park, I'd like now to be able to do what I can in Quinte riding."

Mr. Smith said he had not at this time made up his mind, although there was strong pressure on him to seek the nomination.

"You never know — it's got a week' to go. I wouldn't at this time say 'No,'" he added.

Meantime, the possibility of a strong bid from Trenton — the only major urban centre of the riding — was almost ruled out by Ted Parker, Trenton city solicitor and president of the riding's Conservative association.

"I would say there's no serious contender," commented Mr. Parker. I wouldn't say that somebody will not be nominated, . . . but certainly no one has indicated any serious intent to stand on me — and I think I'd hear about it."

Toronto Television Station Seeks Satellite for Area

Toronto television station CFTO (Channel 9) has asked the support of Belleville city council in its application to the Board of Broadcast Governors for a licence to establish a satellite repeater station in the Belleville area.

Station representative E. J. Delaney said his organization's application was already on file with the BBG but said there could be a channel switch, which would leave channel 6 open for this area.

If so and if the government should grant the licence, Mr. Delaney said CFTO would be prepared to construct a full power station in the Belleville area.

At the same time Mr. Delaney said that if a suitable local group made application for a TV station at Belleville his firm would be prepared to withdraw its application.

He said that a local station could serve the area better than would a satellite station.

Council took no action on the request by CFTO for support and the city plan was still at least a year away.

He said no amount of prodding or additional staff could speed up completion of the city plan.

Council OKs Cannifton Track Gates

Cannifton Road is to get improved automatic crossing protection with the installation of two short arm gates.

City council yesterday approved a motion to have the added crossing protection installed. The city's share of the installation cost will be $2,067. Annual maintenance costs for the city are estimated at $425.

The Board of Transport Commissioners for Canada was advised the city it has initiated a program to provide all double track crossings with gates in addition to flashing light signals.

This provides protection for motorists when two trains pass the crossing almost simultaneously.

City Plan Year Away

Mayor J. R. Ellis said he was disappointed but the report from the city planning office was not ready.

He said an amount of prodding or additional staff could speed up completion of the city plan.

MP Sounds Warning

Recession If Taxes Increased: Hees

A tax increase is the upcoming baby budget promised by Finance Minister Mitchell Sharp could be followed by a serious recession, George Hees, MP for Northumberland, warned here last night.

He claimed current trends paralleled events which 10 years ago plunged Canada into a period of economic stagnation. "Unless the finance minister takes present policies history will repeat itself, he said.

"If he doesn't, we within the next six months are going to be in a serious recession, there's no question about it."

Mr. Hees said it doesn't take an economic genius to forecast what will happen.

"It just takes a student of economic history to follow exactly the same course as what happened 10 years ago."

Speaking to the Quinte New Democratic Youth Organization here, Mr. Hees claimed the Liberals had adopted "sterile negative" ways of combatting inflation with a tight money policy.

Mounting taxes and tight money were the main alarm gongs sounded by Mr. Hees as he warned against the possibility of renewed economic recession.

Taxes fuel the inflationary spiral and eventually affect domestic and export sales.

"We've got to be practical . . . because we're demanding as awful lot of things from governments today," he admitted. "These things cost money and there's only one place the money comes from to pay these things — and that's out of our pockets.

"But if we keep raising taxes then we're simply going to do ourselves a tremendous amount of harm."

The increase is passed onto goods and services and hurts domestic producers competing with foreign imports, resulting in production slowdowns and unemployment, he said.

He said any further tax increase in an awaited pre-Christmas baby budget "is going to put things into the danger point."

The government must also step up the training of skilled men and women in most production demands, he said.

He charged the Liberal government with failing to carry through the expansion of technological schools instituted by the Conservatives.

In 1963 the government showed a "reluctance to carry on the program — they let the thing sit.

"And so by the early part of 1964 we were obviously not turning out each year enough trained young men and women to fill the posts expanding industry required".

Immigration should have been encouraged to entice skilled workers from abroad, said Mr. Hees.

"If there are not enough things being produced because of lack of workers, money starts bidding against itself.

"We know when there is more than demand than there is supply — too few goods being chased by too much money — the price is forced up. That gives us the inflation that is very much with us today.

"By the end of the year", forecast Mr. Hees, "your dollar will be worth 90 per cent of what it would have bought a year ago".

Mr. Hees, who drove from the House of Commons for the meeting at the Kiwanis Centre, spoke for close to two hours—the last half answering questions from the floor.

The organization was led by its president, Kathy Graham, in seeking answers on current topics.

Among the queries:

The Canada-U.S. auto trade agreement — "I still feel that can be a good deal for Canada —but again it all depends on who is running it. . . . The idea is OK, but perhaps the government is letting the Americans push them around a little."

Free university education — ". . . is the next logical step in the interests of the country. . . . We're a manufacturing country that is competing with people bigger than we are . . . we have to be smarter. We're in the position of a small football team playing a big football team."

U.S. economic influence — "It's a very great influence but there's not very much we can do about it. It's a phychological effect that it has on us and our stock market."

High school political clubs — "I'm very much impressed by the operation of political clubs in universities. I think that's all for the good. . . . I think it might be interesting to see if they might be useful in schools. Personally, I'd like to see it given a try."

On one answer—labor relations—Mr. Hees admitted standing corrected.

He was discussing the fact trade unions were well organized to ensure decent returns for their members when Quinte riding' NDP president Ian Reilly reminded him only a minority of Canadian workers were unionized.

"Sixty three per cent of the people of Canada don't belong to unions," said Mr. Reilly.

Mr. Hees showed astonishment — and confessed it:

"I'm amazed at that. I'd have thought it was at least the other way around . . . That astounds me . . . I certainly learned something tonight."

Frankford Heads Area In Election Day Vote

The annual municipal election scene was unwrapped in the Quinte district yesterday — and immediately blanketed by bad weather.

Snow, sleet and icy roads took their toll of voting enthusiasm through the day and the turnout of voters ranged from poor to moderate.

The fact most mayors and reeves were returned by acclamation, removing central personalities from the contest, also had its effect.

However, there were exceptions. In Hallowell township, election officials reported "lots of enthusiasm" despite the bad weather.

In Frankford, an above average of 60 per cent of the voters turned out.

In Trenton, the most populous Quinte centre holding an election, the total of voters cast was described as "light."

In Picton, 48 per cent of eligible voters went to the polls.

BC Talks Big

Among Canada's ten provinces and two territories there is at least one recognizable "problem child." And that is Quebec. It is in La Belle Province that most of the provincial hullabaloo has been taking place of late.

British Columbia has been running a good second, although thus far it has been reasonably quiet about it. Now, in one fell swoop, Premier Bennett's government has become vastly more assertive. It has laid claim to a huge area of the ocean floor off its coast by passing a cabinet order declaring provincial ownership of the Pacific continental shelf.

A Supreme Court order on the issue is not expected until February. Canada has exercised sovereignty over the continental shelf since 1958, but it is now up to the court to decide whether it falls under federal or provincial jurisdiction.

However, the way the Victoria government is talking the matter is already decided in its favor. Attorney-General Robert Bonner goes so far as to say that if the province cannot uphold a legal claim to the continental shelf it might "colonize" it.

Mr. Bonner made the intriguing statement that the province is anticipating "a considerable sub-ocean land use by people who will equip themselves with a means of living beneath the ocean."

This kind of thing sounds as if it is straight out of science fiction. For sheer audacity it exceeds anything to have been hatched in Quebec since the great awakening there.

Author Looks at Canada

Although Nicholas Monsarrat terms Ottawa "a funny little city," the author of The Cruel Sea and many other novels regards the capital, his home for the past 14 years, with affection and respect.

Ottawa in his view is the top city in Canada, in both fact and name. Montreal and Toronto, by comparison, are not in the same class.

Like most creative people Monsarrat likes to travel and sample life in other lands. He came to Ottawa originally as chief of the British Information Services in this country, and is now planning to return to his homeland.

Recently Monsarrat was interviewed for Maclean's by Eileen Turcotte, and he discussed life in Canada's eastern cities. Ottawa has been variously described as being dull, by its very nature as a small capital city, clique-ridden, and traditionally and historically as Bytown. Monsarrat's approach is more complimentary, and Ottawans doubtless will walk with their heads a little higher as a result.

"I think Ottawa is the (top) place in Canada. I think most of the leaders, certainly the directing brains, are in Ottawa rather than Toronto are both sort of show-off towns. The Torontonians think that all the brains in the country are congregated there; actually what they really mean is that a lot of newspapermen are there and a lot of so-called television personalities. . . But here in Ottawa you get a first-class civil service, which doesn't have to bother about status; all it has to bother about is being good and corruption-free, which it is. Some of the cleverest and most forward-looking men are right here in this funny little city."

Parenthood

The story of the young Wilmington, Delaware, father who was released from the Lewisburg, Pa. federal penitentiary, in order to look after his family is a classic illustration of the meaning of real parenthood.

It was a wise judge who granted Bruno V. Pepe, 31, parole from his 18-month prison term after hearing evidence that since he had been jailed September 1 for a gambling violation his wife had become a "disorganized woman," and three of his six children were seeing a psychiatrist.

Mrs. Pepe told the court of the traumatic effects of her husband's imprisonment on the family. Several witnesses supported her testimony, including a psychiatrist who said Pepe must have been "an excellent father" and a man of enormous love and warmth."

Beside this he was fined $500 and sent him to jail — evasion of the 10 per cent federal excise tax on approximately $5,400 in gambling income for June 1964 — seems trivial. U.S. District Court Judge Caleb Wright thinks so anyway, and that is why Pepe is a free man.

It should not be long before Pepe's wife is properly organized again, and his three children free of the fears and sense of insecurity that have haunted them for the past three months.

The moral of it all should not be lost on parents who wonder why their children misbehave on occasions, or who long for the secret of how to get on with their offspring, as well as knowledge of the principles of good discipline. Certainly, the first essentials are the kind of qualities exemplified by Bruno Pepe.

Ottawa Offbeat

Can Joe Greene's Crocodile Tears Win the Wild West?

(Greg Connolley for Richard Jackson who is out of town)

OTTAWA — It is hardly surprising that the Liberals should try to take advantage of the internal strife plaguing the Conservative party. And it was predictable that Agriculture Minister Joe Greene would be the man to make the first obvious pitch.

It was in Saskatoon that Mr. Greene tried out his Ottawa Valley finesse in attempting to parley the difficulties of Conservative leader John Diefenbaker into a bonus for the Liberal party.

Mr. Greene cried crocodile tears for Mr. Diefenbaker. He said what a shame it was that this grand old fighter from the prairies should get such shabby treatment from his own party.

And the Agriculturist Minister placed the blame for this conduct on the same old gang from Upper Canada who were always viciously trying to take over political parties.

This time it was Dalton Camp, Conservative Association president, and Premier John Roberts of Ontario who represented the Bay Street group that had captured the Tory party machinery.

Mr. Greene called them carpet baggers. And he convinced them laying a carpet over the recruitment form of Mr. Diefenbaker.

Now, having laid the foundation for his pitch, Mr. Greene declared with vim and vigor that westerners would never tolerate that kind of thing.

The people from the West, he avowed, would know how to deal with that kind of Eastern monkey business.

LIBERAL REVIVAL

The Agriculture Minister was not the first Liberal about it. But he made his meaning clear to all. His implicit proposal was that with the Conservative party captured by reaction and Mr. Diefenbaker grievously wounded, the West should turn to the Liberal party.

Mr. Greene was saying that if the West, and particularly Saskatchewan, wanted revenge for what had been done to John Diefenbaker — let them vote Liberal next time around.

Of course the Agriculture Minister didn't say anything about those 11 Tory MPs from Saskatchewan who, presumably, could go down the political drain as voters turned to the Grit cause.

Mr. Greene was too busy shedding tears for John Diefenbaker — he had no sorrow left for the other 18 Conservative members from Saskatchewan.

From the Liberal point-of-view, Mr. Greene has a great scheme going for him. But then so far there has been no great response from Mr. Diefenbaker.

Despite the splendid accolades Mr. Greene handed out as he buried Mr. Diefenbaker, that still very lively gentleman has uttered no cheers at all for the Minister of Agriculture.

And as for the folks out west — whether Mr. Greene made any impact at all remains to be seen.

The Liberals of course desperately want to get on the scoreboard in a big way in the West. They don't have even one MP in Saskatchewan or Alberta.

They long as the Grits fail to take seats in these provinces, they can hardly hope to gain a majority government.

FARMER'S FRIEND

And that is why Joe Greene was out there pitching in Saskatoon, trying to use Tory troubles to crack that solid Conservative representation.

Mr. Greene is a personable man. He has been likened to Abe Lincoln in appearance. He has a warm, down-to-earth, folksy touch that appeals to voters.

And he has certainly cultivated the image of being the friend of the farmer.

There is no doubting his sincerity in his attempts to improve the lot of farmers across the country. From all accounts he is doing a good job in the Agriculture Department.

But Joe Greene goes further than that. He also casts himself in the role of champion of those vested interests — the railways. This too, calculated or not, is likely to make him an appealing figure to the farmers.

In all, Mr. Greene is a very attractive political package.

But whether he can convince the West that he is the new Diefenbaker is a pretty tall order indeed.

No Vote for Swiss Women

Vancouver Sun

It's amazing how little Switzerland can be such a successful nation both economically and politically without the benefit of a woman's advice. Yet the women of Switzerland have just lost another chance of a political voice. The margin was narrow, but they lost the right to vote in Zurich canton by 15,000 votes out of the 200,000 cast. Of course the referendum was rigged — only men could vote, as is the case in all Swiss elections.

This grand old fighter from the prairies should get such shabby treatment from his own party.

And the Agriculturist Minister placed the blame for this conduct on the same old gang from Upper Canada who were always viciously trying to take over political parties.

This time it was Dalton Camp, Conservative Association president, and Premier John Roberts of Ontario who represented the Bay Street group that had captured the Tory party machinery.

Mr. Greene called them carpet baggers. And he convinced them laying a carpet over the recruitment form of Mr. Diefenbaker.

Now, having laid the foundation for his pitch, Mr. Greene declared with vim and vigor that westerners would never tolerate that kind of thing.

The people from the West, he avowed, would know how to deal with that kind of Eastern monkey business.

LIBERAL REVIVAL

The Agriculture Minister was not the first Liberal about it. But he made his meaning clear to all. His implicit proposal was that with the Conservative party captured by reaction and Mr. Diefenbaker grievously wounded, the West should turn to the Liberal party.

Mr. Greene was saying that if the West, and particularly Saskatchewan, wanted revenge for what had been done to John Diefenbaker — let them vote Liberal next time around.

Of course the Agriculture Minister didn't say anything about those 11 Tory MPs from Saskatchewan who, presumably, could go down the political drain as voters turned to the Grit cause.

Mr. Greene was too busy shedding tears for John Diefenbaker — he had no sorrow left for the other 18 Conservative members from Saskatchewan.

From the Liberal point-of-view, Mr. Greene has a great scheme going for him. But then so far there has been no great response from Mr. Diefenbaker.

Despite the splendid accolades Mr. Greene handed out as he buried Mr. Diefenbaker, that still very lively gentleman has uttered no cheers at all for the Minister of Agriculture.

And as for the folks out west — whether Mr. Greene made any impact at all remains to be seen.

The Liberals of course desperately want to get on the scoreboard in a big way in the West. They don't have even one MP in Saskatchewan or Alberta.

They long as the Grits fail to take seats in these provinces, they can hardly hope to gain a majority government.

FARMER'S FRIEND

And that is why Joe Greene was out there pitching in Saskatoon, trying to use Tory troubles to crack that solid Conservative representation.

Mr. Greene is a personable man. He has been likened to Abe Lincoln in appearance. He has a warm, down-to-earth, folksy touch that appeals to voters.

And he has certainly cultivated the image of being the friend of the farmer.

There is no doubting his sincerity in his attempts to improve the lot of farmers across the country. From all accounts he is doing a good job in the Agriculture Department.

But Joe Greene goes further than that. He also casts himself in the role of champion of those vested interests — the railways. This too, calculated or not, is likely to make him an appealing figure to the farmers.

In all, Mr. Greene is a very attractive political package.

But whether he can convince the West that he is the new Diefenbaker is a pretty tall order indeed.

Hammer and Nails at Expo

Ottawa Journal

The other day this writer went on a "quickie tour" of the Expo 67 site. The driver of a one-ton truck behind him couldn't wait for the tourist. He passed in a giant mud puddle, drenching the windshield with goo, obscuring the vision of the driver-guide, a pretty wisp of a girl (Toronto, bilingual, BA in history). She braked the car calmly, murmured "Oh dear" and resumed the tour.

That's Expo — rushed, muddy, unflappable and, even on November's bleakest day, as appealing as a girl in pink.

But that's not all.

"You can sense it, can't you?" a young Expo office-staff member asked.

He meant the excitement, and the answer was yes, you can sense it. It is in the incredibly varied shapes and materials of the pavilions being hurried to completion, in the sheer size of the site, in the feeling of frustration already building over the impossibility of seeing and doing everything that will be going on at once. The excitement can be sensed on St. Catherine Street, far from the site.

But mostly it can be sensed in talking to the people who work at Expo. They don't really have time to talk about the concept, the themes of Expo, or about what Expo means to Canada in the world, or about what it may be proving in a positive way about "practical bilingualism" or about its meaning for French Canada. That kind of talk is a luxury at Expo now because it's a time for hammer and nails.

In the beginning, two years and more back, they were thinking of what Expo should mean, what should be its scripts and charts: now they're getting the plans into the hard ground and up into the cold and getting colder air; and next year the rest of us move in to see and hear and feel and be refreshed. The first three stages have been a success and a visit to the site conveys the idea the last one will too.

Noise and the "Weaker" Sex

Hamilton Spectator

A learned University of Minnesota research team claims that women are better suited to noisy jobs than men. The reason for this phenomenon appears to be that the fair sex have stronger muscles in their middle ears, and, as a result, they are more capable of enduring low-frequency roars and rumbles.

In addition, men have larger outer ears and are therefore better able to collect and transmit low-frequency sound.

The gist of the report is that there mightn't be so much hearing loss in noisy industries if women had more of the ear-shattering jobs.

What the report didn't say, we'll say for it. Women, to the best of our knowledge, shriek louder than boys when they are babies and continue to raise their voices on high through adolescence and into grand old age. The unfortunate result of all this is that males become overly sensitive to loud noises at a very early age and never get over it.

Womankind's willingness to shriek at the drop of a hatpin also explains why the ladies are able to endure so much racket.

Phlebitis Does Not Involve Arteries

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dr. Dr. Molner: Please explain the difference between hardening of the arteries and phlebitis. I had phlebitis in my leg following an operation.

Sometimes the two middle fingers on one hand lock closed and I have to open them with the other hand. I wonder if this is from hardening of the arteries or phlebitis. My legs also burn. I am 74 yrs. J. F.

Phelbitis and harding of the arteries are quite different. As we grow older, we all have some degree of hardening of the arteries, a thickening of one type or another of the walls. This may retard circulation. The degree of hardening is what matters. If it is severe, we have trouble. If it is not, it is just something we have to put up with, like gray hair and wrinkles.

Phlebitis does not involve the arteries. It is inflamation of a wall, sometimes from an injury. It also retards circulation in the affected area by impeding the return flow of blood.

Hardening of the arteries may interfere with the delivery of blood to the tissue. The burning sensation in your legs could, indeed, be a consequence of hardening of the arteries. Sometimes' medication can give relief, so discuss this with your doctor.

As to the locking fingers, that would be a problem involving the joints or nerves and you have nothing to do with either the conditions of your arteries or veins. My principal thought is to note whether this tends to occur when you are tired or cold. Keeping your hands warm and keeping your hands from being chilled may help.

Dear Dr. Molner: How many ribs do men and women have?
— Mrs. J.T.H.

Both have the same number — 12 on each side.

Dear Dr. Molner: I would like your opinion on the vitamin value of orange juice packed and frozen in cans, and the juice as squeezed from fresh fruit — C.K.G.

This has been tested, which is much better than relying on an opinion, including mine. The other kind is Vitamin C, and the amount is essentially the same whether in canned, frozen or fresh juice. The difference is so slight as to be of no consequence nutritionally.

Thanks.

Dear Dr. Molner: My husband takes baking soda and water every evening, and sometimes twice a day. Is this harmful? He says so, but I say yes. — Mrs. J.W.S.

Let's put it this way: It can be harmful, and I consistently recommend against taking soda habitually unless prescribed by your physician. There are certain conditions in which alkalizing the system is important.

The digestive tract is supposed to be somewhat acidic. In fact, a small amount of dilute hydrochloric acid is one of the necessary digestive juices. Alkali (soda being one) neutralizes acid and can, in sufficient quantity, actually interfere with digestion.

If too much acid is neutralized, the human body, in its logical way, will try to produce more. And you can see how an irritating swing from too much alkali to too much acid.

Why does your husband take baking soda anyway? It's no cure-all for whatever ails one's insides. He is doing himself with soda, he may be neglecting cold, dry condition which needs attention.

Dr. Molner: welcomes all readers mail, but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individually. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

"Conquest"—An Illusory Word

BY SYDNEY J. HARRIS

The dominant word in the world's dictionary today is "conquest." We speak of "the conquest of space," or "the conquest of nature."

We ought to use it less. To believe it is a wrong word, a dangerous word, an illusory word. The proper word we ought to use is "cooperation." As Dr. Bodo Manstein warns, in a scientific forum held at Stuttgart last spring, man has injected himself into the natural order as a disturbing factor — without considering our tolerance towards these rapid changes, and without sufficiently understanding the long-range effects of technology.

We have rushed ahead too fast with antibiotics in our "conquest" of disease, with pesticides campaign for the "conquest of nature," we have ignored the balance of nature, and our ominous result is the worldwide change in the bacterial flora. Pink Mink, I Think, For Fur Fanciers

EDMONTON (CP) — John Caine is betting $25,000 that three years from now the ladies will blush pink mink.

As a Second World War fighter pilot, Mr. Caine accounted for 22 enemy aircraft and won the Distinguished Flying Cross with two bars. He has been in the fur business ever since and hasn't been shot down yet.

Unlike the split-second gambling of the air ace, the fur trade is a game in which the player has to wait a long time until he is dealt his last card.

"You have to guess the market five years in advance," Mr. Caine explained. "Then you gamble $20,000 to $25,000 on your guess."

He made his guess two years ago when he bought 36 Female pink mink and started to breed them. Some will be ready for the market next year but it will be another two years before their full potential is realized. Mr. Caine first dealt himself into the game when he took over his father's fur farm following his return from the RCAF.

In 1947, he bought three palomino mink that's a small rancher found in his herd. Five years later, he sold 3,500 palomino pelts at top prices.

Meanwhile, he crossed palominos with sapphires to produce the popular pearl shade, from which he expects to make $100,000 this year. He estimates his total crop will bring close to $500,000.

Mr. Caine's profitable guesswork isn't done with a crystal ball.

He makes three flying trips a year to Europe and four to Eastern Canada, as well as occasional visits to New York, Los Angeles, Mexico City and other major fur markets to study trends.

He also finds time to relax. On his office wall is a six-foot sailfish, caught last February in Acapulco, Mexico.

Lucayan Run as Private Club

TORONTO (CP)—The Lucayan Beach Hotel on Grand Bahamas Island was run as a private club by one of its managers, a royal commission investigating the collapse of Atlantic Acceptance Corp. was told Monday.

Jack Tramiel, president of Commodore Business Machines Ltd., an Atlantic subsidiary, told the commission that the club stemmed from the decision Atlantic lost so much money in its Grand Bahamas investment.

Mr. Tramiel said that he looked into the operation of the hotel early in 1963 at the request of the late C. Powell Morgan, president of Atlantic.

"Everyone has his hand in someone else's pocket," he said.

Atlantic had invested $11,000,000 on the island, most of it in the Lucayan Beach Hotel.

Mr. Tramiel said the manager of the hotel, Allen Manis, gave the impression it was his private club by the way he lived and the parties he gave.

HAD NON-PAYING GUESTS

The hotel had a private plane which Manis used for a shuttle service to Miami, the witness said. There were many non-paying guests who got everything on the cuff.

He said he had told Mr. Morgan about the situation, but had never been given the authority to straighten it out. When he asked Manis questions, he was told to "get the hell out. I deal directly with Morgan."

Mr. Tramiel said it was his impression that those managing the Marina, apartments, driver club and various other ventures on the island all were looking after their own interests.

At one time, he said, he thought Mr. Morgan was going to give him authority to straighten up the mess, but then he got a call from Mr. Morgan, who said: "I am sorry. I have to go along with Manis."

HorseStable Veto Tabled By Council

The Orchard Drive controversy over the keeping of a horse in that section of the city is still before city council.

Again yesterday council heard from two Orchard Drive residents with opposing views on the city's proposal to review it's bylaw regulating the keeping of horses within the city limits.

A. J. Parkhurst, 102 Orchard Drive, asked that the city retain its present bylaw which would allow him to use a new horse stable which he said was costing $1,800. He said the stable was legal under the terms of the present bylaw.

Neighbors in the area are objecting to the horses and are asking that stables not be permitted within 100 feet of residences.

Council tabled action on the bylaw amendment.

Points Gun At Police, Man Guilty

Thomas Edward Deline, 27, of 46 Murney St., pleaded guilty in city magistrate's court today of pointing an offensive weapon at a police officer June 23.

Inspector Harold Reid told Magistrate T. Y. Wills that the accused levelled a .303 calibre rifle at city police Constable McDougall after he and another police officer had answered a call at a Catharine St. residence.

The rifle was found to be unloaded after it was wrestled away from Deline in a struggle, said the inspector, although a number of cartridges were lying on the floor nearby.

The magistrate remanded Deline to Friday for sentencing.

Snow Fence Unsightly Claims Local Florist

An upper Front Street florist is objecting to the "dirty, unsightly snow fence" erected in the Upper Bridge area as a traffic divider. He claims it is blocking the view of his store windows.

William G. Rowland of the Templer Flower shop, in a letter to council, says the traffic pattern put into effect during reconstruction of the College Street bridge has cut pedestrian traffic past his store to a dribble. In addition, he said the snow fence blocks the view of his windows from passing cars.

"My windows are one of my best advertisements and you block them with unattractive snow fence", he wrote.

The snow fence in question was placed for two reasons: to prevent motorists from being blinded at night by cars moving south off the Upper Bridge and to control street crossing at this point by pedestrians.

Scales Weigh Disfavor Of Aldermen

The public works department is having trouble with its city weigh scales and tenders for a new set will be called.

And the embarrassing part of it all is that the scales now owned by the city are comparatively new and have been in service only since April of last year.

The trouble is the firm supplying the scales has gone out of business and parts are not available. The scales were purchased in 1965 at a cost of $5,765 but were not installed until the new city barns on Wallbridge Crescent were put into use.

Since the scales went into use about 18 months ago they have broken down four times. The latest repair estimates are $2,500 and the recommendation is to replace the scales. A new set is expected to cost about $8,000.

Alderman Jack Dearon said the present scales had been a "poor bargain."

Ottawa Fireworks Expected

Charlotte's Back as Usual Self

OTTAWA (CP) — Charlotte Whitton, bouncy as ever, made it back to city council Monday in the capital's civic election.

The 70-year-old spinster handily won one of the two available aldermanic seats in the old-section Capital ward. She was a strong second to Claude Bennett, 30.

She'll be the oldest member of council and Mr. Bennett the youngest.

The victory put her back into the thick of civic politics which she dominated during her five terms as a feuding, fighting mayor.

Her reign was ended in 1964 by a smooth, quiet-spoken furniture dealer, Don Reid, who promised to return dignity to the mayor's chair. Having once slugged a controller in a fit of anger, Miss Whitton was vulnerable to a peace-and-order candidate.

She gave an election-night indication she's lost none of her fire, brusquely brushing off reporters seeking victory interviews. She claimed they had ignored her during her comeback campaign.

For Mr. Reid, the personable 40-year-old mayor who was re-elected Monday, it means he'll have to share the council chamber with his old opponent once again.

Some fireworks are expected. Rev. Donald Stirling, a free-swinging type who failed to unseat Mr. Reid Monday as mayor, urged his supporters to get behind Miss Whitton on council.

Miss Whitton broke into Ottawa civic politics in 1950, topping the board of control vote after a varied career as social worker, lecturer and private secretary to a cabinet minister.

Her comeback was accomplished in a ward in which she had traditionally strong voting support. Or as she put it with characteristic brusque confidence when she announced her comeback bid:

"I've carried that ward anytime I've ever run for anything."

"Trudy, I'm glad to see you took my advice and developed some outside interests!"

Miniskirts Are Rising And So Are Sales

TORONTO (CP) — Girl-watching promises to get better in Canada.

The miniskirts are rising.

How high can they go? Major dealers in women's clothing don't seem to know. But they agree the peak hasn't been reached.

And the girls appear willing to show more and more. Sales have been slowly, but steadily increasing while the hemline inches ever upward.

Arthur Loberg, a Toronto-based sportswear maker, says sales of miniskirts started gaining momentum among the teenage set that spring and summer.

His company started making skirts reaching to three inches above the knee two years ago.

But this fall new heights have been scaled — miniskirts seven inches above the knee were selling well in stores in Toronto, Winnipeg and Montreal.

Sam Melster, another Toronto clothing manufacturer, blames the teen-agers for starting the high-rise. And it's the youngest set who will make them fashionable, he says.

"The teen girls have decided they like them and you can't tell teen-agers." He joined the trend and started making skirts cut off four inches above the knee.

For a year now, he has been successfully marketing short skirts for girls up to age 22.

"I felt foolish about manufacturing them at first," says Mr. Melster. "But I've had to increase production to meet the demand. The stores are buying them."

Anne Grant, a buyer for Eaton's in Toronto, says the really short miniskirts are becoming more popular with girls between 17 and 19 than with younger teen-agers.

There appears to be a strong belief among some manufacturers that more leg will be showing next summer.

PREDICTS HEIGHT

Harvey White, sales manager of Lagnon Manufacturing Ltd. of Toronto, says his company plans to offer a complete line of spring and summer miniskirts, at five to six inches above the knee.

But conservatism still exists. Bernard Cowan, another Toronto skirt-maker, says:

"We, don't make miniskirts because we manufacture for the career and college-aged girl and they haven't created any demand for them."

"Our skirts come to just about the top of the knee and that's as far as we'll go."

He added:

"The girls who want to wear them as inch or two shorter can aborigne the skirts themselves—and many do. . . ."

Mrs. JFK 'With It' In Fashion

NEW YORK (AP)—By wearing short-short skirts Mrs. John F. Kennedy who as first lady set style trends around the world indicates she is still very much with it in terms of fashion.

She appeared recently at the smart Lafayette Restaurant in a skirt three inches above the knee.

Although the costume was not quite mini, "it was the shortest dress we've seen her in," said Dick Alden, an executive of Women's Wear Daily, a fashion trade publication.

Gradually, as Mrs. Kennedy has come out of mourning for the late president, she has been attracted in contemporary—if not quite mod — costumes as spice to generally elegant Euro pean couture garments.

Women's Institutes

RIVER VALLEY W. I.

RIVER VALLEY — Mrs. Sheldon McIntosh was hostess on Dec. 1 or the Christmas meeting of River Valley Women's Institute. Christmas lights and decorations added a festive note for the occasion and a large box was filled with gifts for mental patients.

Mrs. Glenn Bush opened the meeting and Mrs. John Kane presided over the Christmas program. Mrs. Albert Wilhelm read a paper on the motto and said the happiest people are those who work for others. Mrs. Roy Bush described Christmas customs in Canada in 1867. Mrs. Ernest Carr read a paper prepared by Mrs. J. Berswick on Christmas in Canada. Mrs. Harry Morrow played two organ selections and Mrs. Kane closed the program with the reading of two poems.

Mrs. Percy MacMullen displayed a booklet on Adelaide Hoodless and described the first northern convention held at Inuvik. She read a letter of thanks from Abbot's Leigh W.I. in England for the Christmas parcel.

Mrs. Wilhelm and Mrs. Norman Rosebush gave reports on home economics and history.

Ralph Tucker gathered the pennies for friendship.

Mrs. Roy Irvin said the achievement day for the 4-H project would be held at Nicholson Catholic College in Belleville on Jan. 7. Catering at the Hickson Livestock Sales barn is scheduled for Feb. 6.

The January meeting based on citizenship will be held at the home of Mrs. Ernest Carr.

Model Resumes Work After Back Injury

TORONTO (CP)—Mary Lou MacDonald, 26, isn't about to let the fact that she broke her back five months ago parachute jumping slow her down.

She spent two weeks in the hospital and another two in a back brace before returning to her job as a Toronto fashion model, but now has resumed almost all of her normal activities, including horseback riding twice a week.

She isn't jumping yet, but says that will come when she's sure the injury has healed.

"On rainy days my back aches and I feel as if I'm 109," she says. "I'm not ready for sky jumping. If I did jump I would be taking unnecessary chances and I might be crippled for life."

The most lasting effect of her injury is one Mary Lou doesn't seem to mind. "I was five-foot-nine before my accident. Now I'm an inch less in height—but I'm happy about it."

The back injury last June, while she was practising with the Canadian parachute team, was only the latest of a series of mishaps and near-mishaps which haven't been able to slow down the red-haired model and television actress.

In 1961 she was run down by a motorboat on Musselman's Lake, 25 miles northeast of Toronto, while posing for fashion photography.

A whipstarting water ski tow rope coiled itself around her, knocked her unconscious and dragged her under water.

She was rescued by a photographer working with her, but suffered a cut leg, a cut hand and rope burns.

"I was incapacitated for six months and had some plastic surgery done.

"I dived down 65 feet and when on my way up when I noticed a shadow on the boat above. It was a six-foot shark and he was very interested in me.

"I was afraid to use my spear gun for fear I'd miss. I was afraid mama shark—she grows up to 15 feet—might be close by so I churned up the water and got out fast.

Keep Hep With Pizzas

by MARY MOORE

The young people around me try to keep me "hep".

One of my brightest inspired on-the-spur-of-the-moment ideas was giving something that hungry teenagers can put together themselves to prevent immediate starvation.

I made three variations of Split Level Pizzas and three prop non-teenagers sat down to the dining room table and ate them for Saturday night's dinner, scrambling them through lorgnettes (almost). They were wonderful and anybody from Junior High up can make them.

TUESDAY

Dinner Menu

Beef and Kidney Pie; Mustard Pickles; Tossed Greens with Swiss Cheese Strips; French Dressing; Fresh Fruit Cup; Lemon Sponge Cupcakes; Coffee.

SPLIT LEVEL PIZZAS (serves 4):

12 slices fresh white bread (crust on) one 8-oz. can tomato paste
1 tsp. oregano
1 tsp. salt
¼ cup water
1 lb. Mozzarella cheese sliced very thinly (or other mild white cheese)
2/3 lb. thinly sliced Polish sausage or pepperoni or cooked sliced pork sausage one 10-oz. can mushroom stems and pieces, drained about 12 sliced stuffed olives small sardines drained (optional — see below)
2 tbsps. olive or salad oil
grated Parmesan or Romano cheese (for sprinkling tops)

In a little bowl mix together the oregano, salt, tomato paste and water, using the water to rinse out tomato paste can.

Arrange all 12 slices of bread in 2 rows on cookie or table top. Spread 6 of them with half of the tomato mixture and cover each with thin slices of Mozzarella cheese. Cover with remaining 6 slices of bread. Cover top slices with sliced Mozzarella. Then arrange in a single layer, but overlapping, all of the remaining sliced ingredients. (See note below regarding sardines.) They may be in rows side by side or in squares, dwindling in size until you come to the centre you have just a little core of sliced stuffed olives. Spoon remaining tomato mixture over them uniformly. Drizzle with olive or salad oil, then sprinkle generously with Parmesan or Romano cheese. Place on buttered cookie sheet or broiler pan (without rack) and bake at 400 deg. Fahr. for 15 to 20 min. or until cheese is melting and bread edges just beginning to toast. Serve at once cut into quarters or with knives and forks.

NOTES:

1) If you like sardines (and we do) use them cut into 1" pieces instead of the Polish sausage or pepperoni or cooked sausages. The sardine variation is cheaper. 2) Hamburg buns may be used instead of sliced white bread but are more expensive and because they are smaller the topping tends to topple. 3) Mothers! These make an excellent Saturday or Sunday night supper dish for everything (except possibly the sausage) could be on hand on your shelves in advance. Serve Split Level Pizzas bubbling hot.

Vinyl Pop-over Is Practical, Handsome Gift for Christmas

NEW YORK (CP)—For a shiny Christmas season, pop your daughter into a vinyl pop-over.

Worn over a party dress, it's new, practical and handsome. It can be hosed down after a cake-sticky party. Spilled juices can be wiped clean in a jiffy.

The underneath party dress could be Christmas green, red or white, in Chemstrand's double - knit acrilan, acetate bonded for extra firm strength.

Then when your three- to six-year-old is partying slip a clean vinyl popover over her dress. The neck, armholes and hemline can be banded in a color contrasting with the dress. Long white stockings and round-toed patent slippers complete the Christmas-party effect.

Vinyl has also been used by Joseph Love, the New York manufacturer with a Montreal factory, for actual dresses. Handsome enough for a party frock is one with vertical bandings of blue, mains and white.

Love has also included several vinyl jumpers in colored stripes, to be worn with a knit poor boy sweater.

He too likes vinyl popovers, which he calls slipper smocks or coveralls. These are worn over play dresses or even jumpsuits. A clear vinyl coverall with red trim covers a blue-and-white striped dress. Clear vinyl smocks cover jumpsuits in a red check, a black polka dot or a puppy dog print.

Even for pre-teens Love likes a touch of vinyl, as in a waite yoke and wrist-cuffs on a black and - white striped corduroy to dress.

Vinyl became popular last spring in both children's and women's raincoats. It will probably carry over to next spring in both lightweight clear and heavier opaque qualities.

Not all party dresses will be covered with vinyl popovers. Important always with the young set is velveteen. Love has several in a plum shade with lace trim. A china blue velveteen has lace and eyelet collar and cuffs, and a rose velveteen with bubble smocked yoke sports a pale blouse.

Lace is also a favorite, as in the cage silhouette of delicate lace over a blue dress, suitable for ages from four to 14.

In the Canadian market designer Elen Henderson made up a clear vinyl popover with sleeves to go over a corduroy shift. It was for a fashion photo-graph but she had so many requests that she incorporated it in her fall-winter collection.

She used green or red velvet ribbon to edge all around the neck, armholes, hem and down the back.

For Christmas parties Mrs. Henderson is featuring velvet, some in floor lengths and all with plenty of vennise or guipere lace.

Silk organza is popular. Mrs. Henderson has found that while, along with red, is a top color for children's party frocks. She has even used it to velvet.

The glitter being used for late-day adult clothes isn't for the very young, Mrs. Henderson says, but she has included one sparkle dress for children in a jersey shift with a touch of silver lurex.

KEEPING CLEAN FOR CHRISTMAS — This clean vinyl popover with contrasting banding just the thing to keep that pretty Christmas-party dress clean, is worn over a double-knit acrilan dress in a green shade. (CP Photo)

PUNCH IN THE PUNCH BOWL

Dear Susy: I dare you to name me a single Hero which does more to the spirit of holiday fun than the old-fashioned punch bowl brimming with frosty, refreshing liquid.

To endow the bowl with added beauty, I like to drape a graceful bunch or two of grapes over the rim — in the true spirit of Bacchus! — Walter B.

Watch it there, boy. With all those spirits you're mentioning, you wouldn't want to give old Bacchus a headache! —SUSANNA.

* * *

Dear Susanna: At this time of year, with so many papers and cards arriving in each day's mail, a couple of pretty paperweights might be just what is needed.

If you have a baby in the house, you are in luck, for those little glass baby-food jars are the answer.

Simply insert a small plastic Christmas corsage in the bottle, fill with water, screw the lid on "tight with all your might", and turn upside down. Isn't that a lovely surprise?

Oh yes, I forgot to mention the jar lid should be touched up around the edge with paint (as a disguise) and the top covered with a flat round piece of felt or cork so that wooden and table surfaces won't be scratched when it is being used as an ornament instead of a paperweight. — IDEA GAL.

Successful Living

Suggests Playing Melodica

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS: For Music Lover: I have good news. The lady and her daughter need worry no more. There is a wonderful musical instrument called "Melodica — Piano 37". The keyboard looks like a piano, but you hold it in your hand and blow. It has 18 white keys and 12 black keys. It sounds wonderful; better than many pianos.

You can play all songs, dance music and so on, but only with the right hand, while the left hand holds the instrument. It is not expensive. Now I don't care any more that I can't play the piano, because the Melodica pleases as much more.

Maybe among the readers are others who want to play pianos and can't afford to buy one. I would appreciate letters from Melodica players. — Music Loving Reader.

DEAR MUSIC LOVING: It sounds promising. When a person longs to make musical sounds, even a mouth organ is worth something. Perhaps other Melodica players will tune in and let us hear from them.

* * *

DEAR DORIS: I am 18, and have just broken up with my steady boy friend. We decided that we should not see each other as often until he found out if he really loved me. He says he knows he does but that he needs time to think and be alone and also time to date other girls.

We both know that we love each other and we planned to be married. We are not a couple of silly kids who are mixed up.

Should I wait for him to make up his mind or should I force him to come to a decision now? He says he wants to marry me and some day will, but should I wait? I am almost going crazy because I miss him so much. — Can't Understand Him.

DEAR CAN'T: Who wouldn't miss a close friend? But if you hold him to a statement he himself doubts (that he loves you), you are asking for trouble.

Neither of you is ready for marriage. Forcing a decision now might mean losing him altogether; or, worse still, of gaining a reluctant bridegroom.

What's the future in that?

* * *

Confidential to Torn Into: If you are now sure, you could be practically disintegrated by marrying, so young, a boy so different in religion, in nationality and in life outlook. Have the discipline — if he hasn't — to bide your time.

In the next three years you are likely to progress so much that you'll not recognize your changed ideas. We don't want you wishing (as an Old Married Woman) that you had listened to your mother.

* * *

To First Aid Volunteer: Mouth - to - mouth rescue breathing is a recently developed technique for saving the lives of persons who have stopped breathing, due to drowning, choking, suffocation, gas poisoning, electric shock or heart attack. The essential thing is to apply the treatment as quickly as possible.

It is easy to learn and, in many cases, effective if applied immediately and properly. Write or visit your local branch of the Canadian Red Cross to get a lesson yourself or to arrange for an instructor to visit your group.

* * *

(Longer, fuller replies went privately to those correspondents who enclosed a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

* * *

Confidential to QUO VADIS: Don't be greedy, Quo. You can shear a sheep many times. You can take its hide but once.

Father Came in Drunk And 'Entertained' Club

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am so mortified I could die. I'm a senior in high school and I am also-president of our "Tri hi Y" Club. Last night the meeting was at my home.

My father came home about 8:30 — roaring drunk. He sat himself down in the middle of our meeting and took over. When I tried to get him to leave the room he went on a crying jag, said nobody wanted him around any more and that the whole world was against him.

ANN LANDERS

Then he became abusive to my friends, called them names and told them to get out of the house. Everyone left, without even eating the refreshments I had worked so hard to prepare. Tomorrow his humiliating experience will be the talk of the school.

My father has been a heavy drinker for as long as I can remember, but this is the first time he has done anything like this. Please tell me how I can stop hating him. And tell me how I can face the kids at school. — JANET.

DEAR JANET: You must stop hating him, not for his sake, but for your sake.

Sometimes an alcoholic must hit bottom before he is ready to admit he has a problem and seek the help he needs. Maybe this incident will be the turning point in your father's life. Let's hope so.

In the meantime, go back to school and hold up your head. You are not responsible for your father's behavior.

Look into Alateen, a group of teen-agers who must live with alcoholic parents. Alateen is a branch of Alcoholics Anonymous and you will find it listed in the phone book under A.A. Good luck to you, honey, and chin up.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have an answer for "Getting Noticed" — the woman whose husband falls asleep in front of the TV and shows no sign of life after 8:00 p.m. She confessed that almost every man she sees is beginning to look at her.

I had the problem many years ago, and this is how it was resolved. I had seven children in 12 years. I did all my own house work, took a part-time job, not by choice but because I had to help pay the bills. My husband found something wrong with every place he worked. Either the people were beneath him socially, or the work was too hard, or the hours were too long, or the job was too far from the house.

He drifted from one thing to another and finally he went into "semi-retirement" at age 48. How do you like that for a healthy man with plenty of ability? Unfortunately, he had no interest in anything but sex.

With the responsibilities of seven children, plus the house and the job, I simply didn't have the time or the strength for "getting noticed." So you see, Ann Landers, sometimes necessity forces a solution on us. — MRS. B.

DEAR MRS. B.: I can't see any solution in your letter, dear. It looks as if you have merely exchanged one set of problems for another. But thank you for writing.

Make Family Planning Legal Health Committee Recommends

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons health committee recommended Monday that the dissemination of knowledge and literature on birth control and family planning be made legal.

Its report, tabled in the Commons by Dr. Harry Harley (Grey-Bruce), also recommended that the distribution of contraceptives be made lawful.

The criminal code now makes it an offence to sell or advertise instructions, drugs or articles intended to prevent conception or cause abortion or miscarriage.

The committee held 15 meetings on four private bills dealing with family planning and birth control and heard briefs from a number of church and other organizations.

Only one brief supported existing legislation outlawing dissemination of literature on these subjects, the report noted.

Advertising of contraceptives should not be blatant or in poor taste, the committee said, and to combat this such advertising should come under the federal Food and Drug Act.

The committee wanted to make clear its report did not deal with abortion.

Santa Claus Pensions

MacEachen Tagged as Scrooge

OTTAWA (CP)—Health Minister MacEachen, playing Santa Claus in the Commons Monday with a post-Christmas package for needy old age pensioners, came out tagged as Scrooge.

Despite the ungrateful reception, the House gave first reading to government legislation providing up to $30 more a month on a sliding scale for pensioners with little taxable income other than the basic $75 old age pension.

The vote on the resolution preceding first reading was 65 to 18, with nine NDP members supporting 56 Liberals while 18 Conservatives voted against.

With that first step completed, the House reverts today to committee study of the medical care insurance bill.

The old age security measure is designed to ensure every pensioner a minimum income of $105 a month. It would come into effect Jan. 1, when the starting age for the basic pension will be lowered to 68 from 69.

Mr. MacEachen explained that the maximum $30 supplement will be paid only to those relying solely on the $75 pension. In other cases, the maximum will be reduced by $1 for every $3 of private income the pensioner receives.

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) broke out the Scrooge tag. He wanted to give Mr. MacEachen his real name "namely that of Scrooge" which was proper for anyone suggesting this kind of scheme just two or three weeks before Christmas."

Both the NDP and Conservative parties wanted a flat $25-a-month increase in the old age pension. Opposition Leader Diefenbaker, in a stinging attack on the proposal, put it this way:

". . . means tests and needs tests, masquerading under whatever name the minister may apply to them, are now going to be accepted as necessary on the part of those who are in need across this country."

Mr. MacEachen insisted: "It does not involve what we commonly refer to as a test of means or needs."

The plan was a "far, far cry from the means test."

The criterion was a "universal-guaranteed income, a floor below which an individual's income will not fall. The objective is to provide a flow of income and the definition of determination of an individual's flow of income is identical with that used for income tax purposes."

No information would be sought that was not already required for income tax purposes. There would be "no snooping, no prying into financial affairs, no demeaning questions."

Mr. Diefenbaker noted the plan calls for an appeals procedure. This meant statements by pensioners would not necessarily be accepted.

"What a snooper's paradise will be created and what a multiplication of bureaucrats will take place."

Civil revolutions took place over the right not to be taxed without representation. "In this case taxation will be imposed on everyone, but entitlement will be restricted to those who come within the narrow confines of the bureaucratic formula. . . ."

Mr. MacEachen told a press conference there will be some 1,200,000 pensioners next year. About 800,000 will qualify under the supplementary plan and between 500,000 and 600,000 will be eligible for the full $30 more a month.

He informed the Commons the supplementary plan will cost about $100,000,000 less in 1967 than a flat $25-a-month increase in the basic old age security payment.

The supplementary plan has the added feature of being self-liquidating. It will drop as more Canadians become eligible under the Canada Pension Plan, which will increase their earnings above the allowable maximum for supplemental old age security payments.

The minister said the supplementary scheme will cost between $280,000,000 and $280,000,000 in 1967.

"Income for this program only includes . . . those items regarded as income for the purposes of the Income Tax Act. For example, money drawn from savings or received from the sale of a home, other possessions or investments, is not considered income."

Money realized from selling securities outright would not count as income, but dividends or interest on such investments would be included, an aide to the minister said later.

Gifts and donations, social assistance payments from municipal, provincial and federal governments "are not considered as income." Also excluded are awards for loss of life or disability from commercial insurance plans, workmen's compensation and war pensions.

In the case of couples, income will be calculated on the basis of one-half their combined income to arrive at the amount of supplementary pension paid them.

Application forms will be sent to all recipients of old age security payments early next year. Those qualifying will receive monthly supplements retroactive to January, included on their old age security cheques—likely on the March cheques.

Mr. MacEachen said information supplied on income will be checked against income tax returns and "in some instances the pensioner may wish to revise his initial statement of income because of more detailed information obtained later."

Toys Now Accepted as Important Factor In Child's Reaction to Environment

Story and Pictures
By Claire Hoy

It operates on a battery by remote control and its plastic and steel enforced body holds up to 200 pounds.

It can be a dump truck, a troop carrier, a crane, a fork lift or even a bridge.

According to Ron Foi of Walkerton's Toy Store, it's one of the most popular toys of the season.

There's also a Baby Magic doll that cries real tears and sleeps and wakes and lifts her bottle to feed herself. She even smiles by herself and cries.

Another doll's lips move when she talks and a new bolt-action rifle shoots bullets, ejects shells and shoots caps as well.

What's it all about?

Well it's all part of a $210,000,000 toy business in Canada, up 12 per cent from 1965 despite a seven-per-cent decline in the birth rate. That makes volume breaks down to $10.80 per capita.

Mr. Foi said, "People are more quality conscious in buying toys now. I think they're sick of buying junk. They'd sooner pay an extra dollar and get more quality."

Anybody who has ever bought a toy only to see it smashed to bits in 15 seconds knows what Mr. Foi is talking about.

He said educational toys such as magnetic puzzles and number games and barrels placed inside one another are becoming more popular.

"They are using a lot of these toys in kindergarten and parents are more interested in the children learning what to do with toys at an earlier age."

A Toronto artist, Michael Hayden, recently criticized toys. "Contemporary toys are so complex," he claimed. They do so many things by themselves the child doesn't become involved."

He is one of 26 Canadian artists asked by the Art Gallery of Ontario to design toys for a special exhibition.

His toy is a series of styrofoam blocks, large, lightweight, brightly colored and fitted with nylon burr rectangles so they'll stick to gether.

"The idea is to keep building until you have something that will stay up; if it falls apart again, start again. All these toys needs is two children and imagination."

Imagination is the key.

Retired supervisor of primary education in Belleville, Mrs. Wanda Sine, said educational toys are wonderful. "They're so far ahead of the toys we used to see. They give a child dexterity and help him think for himself.

"I have seen children starting kindergarten and you can almost tell if they've played with educational toys and books or not. A child who hasn't been exposed to educational toys hasn't developed the qualities of making his imagination work for itself."

A Belleville kindergarten teacher cautioned parents not to buys toys that don't suit the particular age of the child.

"A toy for one age level, will not suit another at all," she said.

"A toy shouldn't be boring to the child and it should be teaching something — a learning situation. A toy should have something to do with the child's development and not just play, play, play.

"Of course there has to be some play. It can't be all work and no play, but a toy that combines the two is best."

Another city kindergarten teacher said children seem to like large, colorful toys.

"The large muscles of the little children develop before the small muscles, so big toys are easier for them to handle."

She said a plain piece of paper and a large crayon is a good gift. "I'm not particularly fond of coloring books. They rather limit the child's creativity."

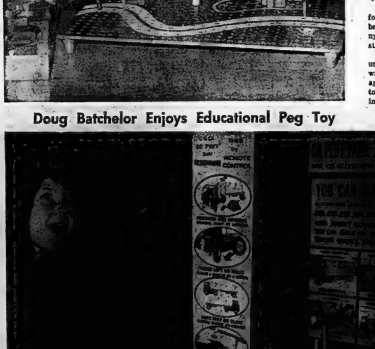
She said dolls, simple puzzles and large, unbreakable trucks and building blocks are favorites.

"Toys should not be too old for the child. He should be responsible for the toy and be able to maintain it.

"The primary consideration of a toy is for the child to enjoy it, but there are other muscles, teach co-ordination things. Toys also build and tax imagination."

Psychologists suggest the best toys are those which give a child opportunity to develop his skills and imagination, toys requiring him to use his hands and brain.

One expert at Toronto's Institute for Child Study said the best gift for a boy six to eight years old was a box of lumber, five pounds of nails and a real hammer.



A Belleville parent's reaction was: "It would be all right if you had a big back yard for him to go to work in, but I'd hate to see the results if he was inside or in an apartment."

The Canadian Toy Testing Council and Consumers' Association of Canada have compiled a general guide list for children's toys. They caution parents to keep in mind the child's individual development, capability and interests, which don't necessarily correspond with his chronological age.

Ike Must Have Gallbladder Removed Soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Doctors are taking an apparent middle ground on the seriousness of former president Eisenhower's gallbladder condition.

"He must have his gallbladder removed soon," said an official announcement from Gettysburg, Pa., Monday. Eisenhower, 76, is to enter Walter Reed Army Hospital here Thursday.

But absence of an immediate emergency was indicated by doctors allowing Eisenhower to keep appointments in New York today.

The operation—for which no date has been announced—will be his second major surgery and fifth serious illness in 11 years.

Gallbladder trouble, if serious and not corrected by removal of the organ, can lead to liver or other life-threatening internal damage.

President Johnson had his gallbladder removed Oct. 8, 1965, and now is recovering from a Nov. 18 operation which repaired an incisional hernia resulting from the earlier surgery.

The specific nature of Eisenhower's gallbladder trouble was not announced, but most often this ailment is caused by gallstones.

Eisenhower's forthcoming operation is the latest in a recent series of his medical events which began with a major heart attack in September, 1955, a few months before he was re-elected to a second term.

In June, 1956, he required emergency surgery for a constriction of part of his small intestine and 1½ years later suffered a temporary blockage of a small blood vessel leading to the brain. He suffered a severe mid heart attack in November, 1965.

Drury to Plump For Standards

TORONTO (CP) — Industry Minister Drury says his department will promote the adoption of standard sizes in the manufacture of building materials.

Speaking Monday at the opening of the Construction, Public Works and Municipal Equipment Show, Mr. Drury said modular co-ordination is a basic prerequisite for the industrialization of building.

Blood Donor Needs Help

HALIFAX (CP)—The wife of a 41-year-old hospital orderly who has freely donated his rare type of blood says it has been "a family operation" to keep him alive.

Laurie Hendsbee of Halifax, who has helped save the lives of three persons in Canada and one in the United States in the past, lies in Camp Hill Hospital in need of transfusions of the blood himself.

A Red Cross spokesman said the blood type is so rare that only one person in Canada outside the Hendsbee family has it.

Hospital officials said today Mr. Hendsbee is in satisfactory condition and resting comfortably. They hope to get enough of the rare blood from his relatives to keep him alive. The hospital had none of his blood type on hand Sunday when he suffered a hemorrhage.

The recipients were his niece's baby in New Brunswick, another baby in Toronto, a patient in Edmonton and a man in Portland, Ore.

A spokesman for the Red Cross blood transfusion service said Mr. Hendsbee has Group B-b positive blood but four of the six genes which make up the Rh factor are lacking.

The Edmonton resident, the only person in Canada with exactly the same blood type, recently donated blood and is unable to contribute for Mr. Hendsbee's operation, the spokesman said.

The Toronto infant who received a transfusion from Mr. Hendsbee has a slightly different blood type and its blood can not be used.

Expo Workers Drive Own Cars

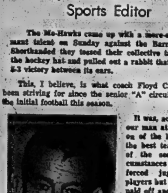
MONTREAL (CP) — Angry Expo workers staged a wildcat strike Monday at the site of the world's fair, forcing the scrapping of plans to have employees driven by buses to their jobs from parking lots near Expo stadium.

An Expo spokesman said between 36 and 50 workers of the 7,000 employees at the site remained away from work Monday while the remainder agreed to resume work after being promised they will be allowed to drive to their jobs.

The dispute was touched off by plans announced last week to have workers driven by buses to their jobs so that construction at the site would not be hindered by the 4,000 automobiles that daily cross the fair grounds.

Expo officials later agreed to scrap the idea of introducing the bus service and to allow workers to rely on their own private vehicles to get to work.

The workers who refused to resume work Monday sought assurance from their contractors that they would be paid for the time they did not work.



An Expo spokesman said this matter will have to be settled between the workers and the contractors concerned.

SPORTS SLICES

The Mo-Hawks came up with a more-or-less dormant talent on Sunday against the Barrie Flyers. Shorthanded they tossed their collective talents into their hockey hat and pulled out a rabbit that carried a 5-3 victory between its ears.

This, I believe, is what coach Floyd Crawford has been striving for since the senior "A" circuit kicked off the initial football this season.

FLOYD CRAWFORD
Hornets stingers and 13-1 under Orillia had a touch of far-reaching effect.

It was, according to our man at the game, one of the best if not the best team efforts of the season. Circumstances perhaps forced juggling of players but the moves paid off and the team welded itself into a whole that spelt nemesis to the Flyers bid for their fourth win in a row.

Perhaps there is something to the old cliche, "it's an ill wind that doesn't dry somebody's washing" but these two shrieklacking, 11-2 at the hands of the Gail a whole that spelt nemesis to the Flyers bid for their fourth win in a row.

Perhaps there is something to the old cliche, "it's an ill wind that doesn't dry somebody's washing" but these two shrieklacking, 11-2 at the hands of the Gail

Coach Floyd Crawford wasn't exactly the happiest man in the world after the lop-sided setbacks and decided to do something about it.

He felt conditioning, rather the lack of it may have been a factor — and he decided to take action.

He grabbed all the ice time available and whipped his charges into shape. His stiff drills dividends started to pay off as the Mo-Hawks responded with a hard-fought effort against the powerful Collingwood-Georgian Chiefs and after a trifle weary of the traditional luck could have come through with a win. At that they were barely nudged 6-5 by last years central champion in their own back yard.

The change of pace continued in Barrie and although Coach Crawford is happier he says the club must still keep driving for the peak.

Tonight the old arch-enemies from Kingston (50 miles east of here) tangle with the Mo-Hawks and the word is out that the Limestone city gang will be looking for Mo-Hawk "blood."

The Crawford crew has taken the measure of the Rockdeville clan twice, once here and the second time in their own backyard. They'll be questing the third in a row tonight.

Lionel Reily warned them en route home from Barrie, "Look out, the Kingston gang can be said. "We've licked them twice and they'll be gunning aplenty for a victory here."

So with the Mo-Hawks beginning to jell and the Aces hungry for a win, tonight's tilt should go down in the archives as a Belleville-Kingston thriller.

Schedule-wise the Mo-Hawks get the "breaks" between now and the Christmas holidays. They play four of their next five games at home and five of the next eight here before December 23.

Their home record is won four, loss two while on the road they have been beaten five times and won three. Sunday they meet the Toronto Varsity Grads for the first time his season with the Grads making their first appearance here next Tuesday night.

Considering the fact they had only three defencemen available on the road against Marcheu being out, with Lou Szarke, the record is not bad.

Lack of scoring power up front has been one of the Mo-Hawks deterrents to victory on non, a few occasions, but this situation is beginning to remedy itself. The boys are starting to "carry the load" with Menard, Darling, McConnell shaking a slump and starting to hit the scoring lists and there is a improvement the last two or three times out while Marcineau is coming along strongly.

Taylor, Boldy and McAlpine have been playing steady hockey while Doucet has come up with the big saves in the majority of games.

Incidentally the Varsity Grads-Mo-Hawks game here next Tuesday is the tilt postponed from Friday, November 25 when the Junior Macs held their annual "Pony Night."

American League

Peters, Kaat Top Pitchers

BOSTON (AP) — A pair of left-handers, Gary Peters of Chicago White Sox and Jim Kaat of Minnesota Twins, captured top honors today in official 1966 pitching records announced by American League president Joe Cronin.

Peters led the league with a 1.98 earned run average, one of the lowest since Chicago's Ed Cicotte posted a 1.57 in 1917. He allowed only 42 earned runs in 20 innings while winning 12 games and losing 7.

Kaat, who had a 25-13 record as the Twins were dethroned as champions by Baltimore Orioles, was the biggest winner. He also started the most games (41), pitched the most complete games (19) and the most innings (35), faced the most batters (1,156) and gave up the most hits (271).

The Minnesota ace was fourth in the league with a 2.74 earned run average.

Baltimore, which easily won the pennant and went on to a four-game sweep of Los Angeles Dodgers in the World Series, had only one pitcher among the top 15 in ERA, based on a minimum of 162 innings.

Orioles southpaw Dave McNally, who had a 13-6 record, was 12th with an earned run average of 3.17. However, the Baltimore staff was fourth in ERA with 3.42.

Joel Horlen, the Chicago right-hander with a 10-13 record, was runner-up to Peters in ERA with a 2.43 mark.

Detroit's Denny McLain (20-14) was the only other 20-game winner in the American League. He led the league in giving up the most homers (42) and most runs (120).

Cleveland southpaw Sam Dejesil, who was sidelined several weeks with arm trouble, led the league for the second straight year in strikeouts.

Leafs Have Lead; But That's All

MONTREAL (CP) — Toronto Maple Leafs were supposed to have trouble staying with the National Hockey League leaders this season, said experts around the league.

And a look at statistics released by NHL headquarters today would seem to indicate that the Leafs are indeed having trouble.

They have won only two games on the road; they have only one player in the top 10 scorers; they are the only team without a shutout, and they have been shut out more than any other team.

But the Maple Leafs hold down first place in the NHL team standings.

Meanwhile, Stan Mikita, Chicago Black Hawks centre, has a healthy lead in the individual scoring race as he looks toward his third scoring crown in four seasons.

Mikita is setting a blistering pace with 31 goals and a league-leading 23 assists for 32 points in 19 games. He holds an 11-point lead over Phil Goyette of New York Rangers. Norm Ullman of Detroit Red Wings is third with 20 points.

Ken Wharram of Chicago, Wayne Connelly of Boston Bruins, Bobby Rousseau of Montreal Canadiens and Bernie Geoffrion of New York are next with 18 points.

Don Marshall of New York, Dennis Hull of Chicago and Dave Keon of the Leafs complete the top 10 with 18 points each.

Mikita, Wharram and Marshall share the lead in the goal-scoring department with 11 each.

The pre-season consensus was that Toronto's veterans would have trouble. But the Leafs have been getting consistent performances from such players as netminder Terry Sawchuk, defencemen Allen Stanley and Marcel Pronovost and centre Red Kelly, as well as Keon.

The Leafs was all three stats last week to move into the top spot with 25 points—one more than Chicago, which took one of three games. The Leafs have won five of their last six games and have lost only one out of their last eight.

They have out-scored their opponents 32-21 in the eight-game stretch and Sawchuk, who was supposed to be trade bait even after the season started, has posted a 1.86 goals-against average in the six games during the streak.

Keon paced the Leafs offence last week with three goals and a pair of assists. That moved the seven-year veteran into a tie for eighth place with Dennis Hull and Marshall in the scoring parade.

Netminder Ed Giacomin of the Rangers leads the league in shutouts with three while the Montreal outstanding combination of Lorne Worsley and Charlie Hodge have the best goals-against average at 2.25.

Ragged Reg Fleming of New York is the individual leader in the penalty department with 76 minutes.

"You Haven't Shown It Yet Dave M'boy"

"We have a better team than Belleville but they have a lot of veterans and will get better as the season progresses."

That was Dave Jones talking to the press before his Kingston Aces made their first visit to Belleville this season.

The Mo-Hawks won that game 5-4 and later added a

DAVE JONES

3-2 win right in Kingston. After the Belleville win down there, Kingston coach Danny McLeod and another Aces' player were quoted as saying "We should have won" in two separate stories.

But they didn't.

Jones and his mates will be going all out for a win here tonight, however, when the two clubs clash in a key OHA Senior meeting at 8:30. Davs is the leading scorer on the Aces and would love to fatten his total against his "home town" Mo-Hawks.

And most important, a Belleville victory would vault the Mo-Hawks past the Aces into a fourth - place tie with the Guelph Regals.

Would the Aces believe the standing if Belleville was list-ed ahead of Kingston?

It will be nice to find out!

LEROY KELLY HONORED

MEHASHA, Wis. (AP) — Leroy Kelly of Cleveland Browns of the National Football League has been enrolled in the National 1000-yard club after his 1966 rushing total topped the 1,000 mark Sunday. Kelly gained 128 yards in 13 carries against New York Giants for a season total of 1,071 yards.

Alabama Third

Irish Finish Top O' The Heap!

NEW YORK (AP) — Notre Dame is the United States major college football champion for the first time since 1964. The Irish handily defeated Michigan State in The Associated Press final poll of the 1966 season. Alabama, the defending Gilehoider, placed third.

Alabama's 31-0 victory over Auburn Saturday, their 10th an unbeaten - untied string, made no distinguishable impression on the AP's national panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

The Irish finished on top with 41 first place votes and 506 points. Michigan State had eight votes for the No. 1 position and 471 points. Alabama was named the top team on seven ballots and accumulated 428 points.

Four among the 32 selectors put Notre Dame and Michigan State in a deadlock for the title. Each team received 10 points for the decision tie. Otherwise, points were awarded on the usual basis of 10 for a first-place vote, nine for second, eight for third, etc.

Michigan State completed its season two weeks ago Saturday by playing a 10-10 tie with Notre Dame, the result marring otherwise - perfect records of both teams. The Irish wound up their season a week later by whipping Rose Bowl - bound Southern California, 51-0.

There were no other changes in the rankings. Georgia Tech lashed in fourth place, followed by UCLA, Nebraska, Purdue, Georgia Tech, Miami of Florida and Southern Methodist.

Wills Ready To Go

Will Be Big Bold Pirate!

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Maury Wills, fresh from a goose hunting trip near Spokane, Wash., has promised Pittsburgh Pirates a 100-per-cent effort in the coming baseball season.

"I'll be at spring training and ready to go. I will give the Pirates 100-per-cent effort," Wills was quoted Monday by Joe Brown, Pittsburgh's general manager.

Shortly after he was traded by Los Angeles Dodgers last week, Wills said he wasn't sure if he would play for the Pirates.

Brown, who worked out the trade for Wills, reported he had a "splendid" telephone conversation with Wills.

Wills, a 12-year National League shortstop who holds the major league record for stolen bases with 104, had a painful knee injury which slowed him down in 1966 apparently has cleared up.

It was the injury which got Wills into bet water with the Dodgers. While the Dodgers were barnstorming Japan, Wills left the tour for treatment of his knee and the Los Angeles brass said his action made him expendable.

The flashy Wills, who sparkheaded a Dodger attack which pounced on opposition mistakes and made up for a lack of power with top-notch fielding and daring base running, was slowed considerably by the leg injury in 1966.

He stole 36 bases and was nailed 34 times while batting .273. During one stretch in late August and early September, Wills didn't attempt a single steal.

Jim Young Prefers Vikings To Lions

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (CP) —British Columbia Lions would like to have halfback Jim Young on their side, but the 23-year-old native of Hamilton would prefer to stay where he is—with Minnesota Vikings of the National Football League.

Young, who went to the Vikings from Queen's University Golden Gaels two seasons ago, said Monday he hasn't given up on the idea of making the grade in the NFL.

The Lions, last in the Western Conference of the Canadian Football League this season, last week obtained the Canadian rights to Young from Toronto Argonauts of the Eastern Conference, Toronto got defensive end Dick Fouts and halfback Bill Symons in exchange.

Speculation in Vancouver is that the Lions are willing to make a trade with Minnesota to get Young and B.C. halfback Willie Fleming's name has been mentioned.

Jim Finks, general manager of the Vikings and former general manager of Calgary Stampeders of the Western Football Conference, Monday admitted that the Vikings and the Lions had talked about the availability of Young.

But he hastened to add he had held talks with every Canadian Football League team concerning Young. He said, "I guess they feel Toronto (Argonauts) couldn't sign him and each of the others feels it could."

Finks, who appeared surprised the Lions would take the gamble of trading two established stars for the possibility of signing a rookie, asked, "Was there no contingency to the (Toronto-B.C.) deal?"

"I don't know what's going to happen in the off season," Young said Monday. "I'm not keen on leaving the Vikings, but if it should happen, I'm not against the idea of playing for the Lions."

He said he did not think any trade offers would be made before the Vikings finish their schedule a week from Sunday. He made it clear that he would not necessarily report to the Lions even if he is traded.

"I'd have to talk to the B.C. management about salary and I'd like to talk to the management here before I make any decision."

"I've wanted to make good here and I haven't given up on the idea of staying in the NFL."

Young, six feet and 210 pounds, was the first draft choice of Toronto Argonauts in 1955 after he starred with Queen's. He made the all-star team in the Ontario - Quebec Athletic Association three times, his first year as a halfback, his second as a fullback and defensive back and his third as an offensive halfback.

He signed with Minnesota after graduating with a bachelor of arts degree.

He said Tuesday he is not against the idea of playing in Toronto or any other CFL centre if he can get a contract that suits him.

He suffered a severe shoulder separation while returning a kick early this season and has been out the last six weeks, placed on Minnesota's injury reserve list.

"I'm ready to get back into action any time," he said, "but I need an okay from the doctors and the coaches. Maybe they'll let me play this week-end."

The Vikings play Detroit Lions Sunday and end their schedule Dec. 16 in Chicago against Chicago Bears. Minnesota is in last place in the NFL's Western Division.

Young is married and has a five-month-old son. He and his family plan to spend Christmas in Hamilton but will return to the United States in January when he will begin a post-graduate course in physical education at the University of Minnesota in Minneapolis.

Ottawa Ties Smiths Falls

OTTAWA (CP)—Ottawa Capitals and Smith Falls Bears battled to a 4-4 deadlock here Monday to remain in a tie for the last playoff position in the Central Ontario Junior A hockey league.

Packers, Colts

Unitas, Starr Clash In Big Showdown

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP)—The Green Bay Packers are braced for the worst—a Johnny Unitas his best—as they head to Maryland and Saturday's showdown with the back-to-the-wall Baltimore Colts.

The Colts, losers to the Packers in last season's electrifying sudden-death playoff, must win or concede the National Football League's Western crown to Green Bay for the fifth time in seven years.

The Packers, who fly to Maryland today after a final Green Bay workout, don't believe that any set victory have made the Colts' Unitas any less a quarterback.

"In a game like this he'll probably be at his best and most dangerous," said quarterback Bart Starr of the Packers.

Starr, who had his own heroics on an ice - glazed field against San Francisco 49ers Sunday, was more anxious to talk about what Unitas did in Baltimore against Chicago Bears.

"The real measure of the man showed through when he took his team for that distance with the amount of time he had," said Starr of the Unitas-led drive in the waning minutes that brought the Colts a 21-16 victory.

"He had to score and he had a shortage of time and being Unitas, he scored," Starr said. "We know we've got our hands full Saturday. They've got to win and so do we."

A victory by the Colts could conceivably lead to another playoff. The Packers must play the Chicago Bears but Los Angeles Rams after Baltimore while the Colts finish against the 49ers. Should the Colts beat the Packers and San Francisco and the Rams defeat the Packers, the Western Division would end in a tie.

Junior 'A' Scoring

Flyer Has Big Lead

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Captain Derek Sanderson of the sixth-place Niagara Falls Flyers is all by himself in front of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A scoring race, but there isn't breathing room in the tight race for runner-up.

Despite being held to three points in three games last week, Sanderson holds an eight-point lead with 16 goals and 22 assists for 38 points.

Fred Speck of Hamilton Red Wings and Jack McCreary of the high-scoring line for the first-place Kitchener Rangers are tied for second with 30 points. Cleo Tremblay of the Flyers and Tim Eccleston of the same Kitchener line are deadlocked for fourth with 29.

Don Marlow of London Nationals has taken over first place in the goaltending race, with a 2.66 average, allowing just 16 goals in the six games he has played.

Larry Holmes and Peter McDuffe of St. Catharines Black Hawks are as close as Siamese twins for second place. McDuffe has an average of 2.85 while Holmes has dropped from last week's 2.39 to a 2.89 average.

The leaders: (NF—Niagara Falls, H—Hamilton, K—Kitchener, P—Peterborough, L—London, T—Toronto):

Underdogs Turn On the Leaders

The Ter-Haar Daubers and Stinson-Horlock Combines turned the four-team Quinte Hockey League into a real dog fight last night.

Underdogs from the start of the season, both clubs whipped the "upper-bracket" teams and now only three points separate the last and first place teams.

Ter-Haar topped the league-leading SACO crew 6-2 and the Combines handed Grant Realty its third consecutive loss, 4-1.

The Daubers built a 4-1 first period lead and outscored SACO 2-1 in the second frame.

Ron Urch sparked the win with three goals and an assist. Ron Pointer, Frank Cris and Donnie Moore also scored. H. Palmer had two assists, Moore, D. Robson, J. Donovan, A. Rultan and B. Ryan one each.

Billy McGuire and Jack Lucas had SACO goals, Ken Forsythe two assists and Doug Hallam one.

There were only four penalties in the game, three to the winners, but it was different in the other contest.

Grant's drew nine of 12 sentences, including all four in the third period, when Stinson-Horlock snapped a 1-1 tie with three goals.

Garry Genereaux potted the winning and third goals for the Combines and also had an assist. Burrowe and L. McBrien fired the other goals. B. Genereaux and D. Bishop had assists.

Grant's only scoring play was B. Lattimer from K. Osterhout.

Playing coach Howard Skelly and defencemen Merv Thompson each drew four penalties. One of Skelly's was a butt-ending major.

Following is the current standing:

	W.	L.	T.	Pts.
SACO	4	2	0	8
Grant's	3	3	0	6
Ter-Haar	2	3	1	5

Torres Tackles Tiger

NEW YORK (AP) — World light heavyweight champion Jose Torres expects a tough fight Dec. 16 when he defends his title against ex - middleweight king Dick Tiger.

But his two dreams are winning the Eddie Neil Award and a match with Cassius Clay.

Torres, a Puerto Rican-born New Yorker, said his financial adviser, Cain Young, was willing to post $250,000 if Clay would fight him in New York.

Asked if he would box Floyd Patterson, his old stablemate, if necessary to get the Clay bout, Torres said, "I will fight anybody Clay wants me to fight, including Patterson, if it will lead to a match with Clay."

Tiger, 31 - year - old Nigerian, has not fought since he lost his middleweight crown to Ernie Griffith at the Garden April 22.

Hold Bazaar At Deseronto United Church

DESERONTO — A large number took advantage of the first sale day last Week to visit the Sunday school room of the United Church last Wednesday and pick up a few more useful articles or something good for supper, and enjoy a cup of tea.

A large lighted tree in the church struck the note that was to predominate throughout the afternoon.

Rev. Finley officially opened the bazaar, and Mrs. Finley, and Mrs. Ivy Bowerman, and Ralph Aylsworth, welcomed the guests.

Booths were arranged in the small rooms around the auditorium. Mrs. William Stewart, Mrs. Joseph Reynolds and Mrs. William Cochrane were in charge of the booth where articles were displayed, including sewing, knitting, and fancy work. The farmers' booth offered for sale produce for sale, principally vegetables, with the addition of good things baked or canned by Mrs. Lloyd Sidney.

These were in charge of Mrs. Harold McCaul, Mrs. Percy Vanalyne and Mrs. Clinton Reesor.

Since the afternoon unit members under their leader, Mrs. Lindsay Gray, were the invited sponsors of the bazaar, the evening unit had a booth of its own in the hall. Mrs. Sidney Green and Mrs. L. E. Tunnicliffe displayed an assortment of articles for sale. Leader of the unit is Mrs. Rockwell Hawley.

As always, the booth offering home baking was well stocked and was most popular. Buns and bread, cakes and cookies, and all other good things to eat disappeared. Mrs. Russell Boyce, Mrs. Norman Davis, Mrs. Hollis Robertson, Mrs. Herbert Aylsworth and Mrs. William Sills were kept busy with sales.

Mrs. George Shea sold Christmas cards, church calendars and a choice selection of fine elephant articles.

Mrs. Rockwell Hawley convened the afternoon tea. The white tablecloth and cloth was centred by a Christmas arrangement of greenery, small candles sprayed in gold or silver and red Christmas balls, the red echoing in the candles in the silver candelabra.

Each guest table with its white cloth had a centre of greenery, but each displayed a different type of ornament associated with the season.

A representative from each of four other churches of the town poured tea. Mrs. Hartford Thrasher represented the Salvation Army, Mrs. Kay Hood the Church of the Redeemer, Mrs. A. F. Jones that of St. Mark's Anglican Church and Mrs. Edmund Dowling the Roman Catholic Church, St. Vincent de Paul.

Mrs. George Cole, Mrs. Sam Knapp and Mrs. George Stuart arranged the plates., and Mrs. Hugh Fingland, Mrs. Douglas Cole, Mrs. William Hinkler and Miss Lena Minaker were kept busy in the kitchen.

Around Town

NAPANEE — Christmas is in the air in Napanee, and it is not just a matter of cold weather and snow. Upon entering the Post Office observed how the lobby had been transformed into a festive setting for the first time in years, there are Christmas decorations, complete with a well arranged tree and twinkling lights, well elevated that it does not take up any of the limited floor space. The caretaker, Herb Brooks, discovered a quantity of decorations in the Armories, and made use of them. The office employees are the lines who thought of this, and state that somehow their increasing work load seems lighter.

WHITE ELEPHANT STORE

The White Elephant Store passed the 5,000 mark for the year Monday, Mrs. Iris MaGuire, volunteer manager stated. She said that during the four years it has been the volunteer operator, Boxes have already been sent to the needy in some of the townships, and others are waiting to go. These are made up from clothing donated to by the reeves.

The White Elephant Store will close December 17 for this year, and Mrs. MaGuire is letting everything go at a bargain from now on. For three years it has been sponsored by the Rotarians, with all proceeds going to the County Hospital.

Food Retailers Try to Deceive Say Consumers

OTTAWA (CP) — The Consumers' Association of Canada charged today that there is a growth trend among food retailers to mislead and confuse shoppers.

In a presentation to the Senate-Commons committee investigating food prices, the CAC listed a series of abuses said to have been reported from coast to coast.

It said displays in supermarkets often suggest a "special" price that is in fact higher than the regular price.

In many cases packages are "positively deceptive" about their contents. The association says it has "four-quart baskets" in a variety of sizes.

Consumers face a "bewildering number of fractions of standard weights."

"We can determine no technical reason why so many different sizes are necessary," said the association's brief.

CRITICIZES 'SERVINGS'

"A growing practice is the use of the term servings to describe contents," said the brief.

"This term seems to mean different things to different manufacturers. We have not had a chance to check thoroughly but we wonder if this measure is even legal.

"In any case it is misleading and ought to be prohibited."

The association said premiums or bonuses in packages do not increase sales for the industry as a whole. They add to prices and limit consumer choice.

"Similarly coupons in packages also appear only to add to industry and consumer costs. Since the bulk of these prac-

Earle J. Brant Elected Zone Commander

DESERONTO — History was made, it is believed, when Earle J. Brant of the Tyendinaga Reserve was elected by acclamation to be Zone Commander of Zone F of the Royal Canadian Legion, at a meeting held Sunday of last week in Wellington. He was elected president of Zone F two years ago, and so far as is known, that was the first time there was a record of a Mohawk living on a reserve, also being elected to the office for a while man's branch. It is also improbable that there has been a previous appointment of such a man as a Zone Commander.

Five others had been nominated, but when Mr. Brant accepted the nomination, the others withdrew. Mr. Brant pressed for an election, but the acclamation gave him an ovation instead.

In thanking the delegates, Mr. Brant said that to him this was proof of democracy in Canada.

Zone F includes 16 branches, and extends from Picton to Coe Hill and from Deseronto to Belleville.

Retiring Mr. Brant, was appointed chairman of the Service Scout committee for the Legion for District F, which has in its 36 branches and canada from Deseronto to Toronto. When requested to do so he visits any one of these branches and points out the importance of Boy Scout work and interests the branch to promote it.

Mr. Brant is married with one daughter attending the Mains Secondary School in Belleville.

tices seem to offset each other more than informing or aiding the consumer, they should be stopped."

Package sizes and contents often fall with no decrease in price.

"This is a way of surreptitiously increasing price, with little chance for the buyer to notice it."

The non - profit association, which is sustained by membership dues and supplementary government grants, does its own research and testing and tries to offer advice on consumer buying and services.

In brief suggested changes in the Income Tax Act to help low-income groups hit hardest by rising prices for food, housing and other necessities.

It also urged establishment of a federal department of consumer affairs. Full-time professionals are needed to study the problems behind the prices and quality of goods and their terms of sale, said the brief.

The CAC also had harsh words for misuse by supermarkets of the enormous power they wield.

"Since the retailer controls shelf space he can bargain with the processor for use of that space—both as to amount and location.

"A multi-store processor will find himself with little, and poorly located, shelf space while the co-operative use will be better situated."

Three unconfirmed reports to the association indicated retailers know the items used to calculate the consumer price index of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

By pricing these items cheaply and making up for the loss elsewhere, the retailers can distort the official report of food price increases, the association said.

In a calculation of the uneven effects of price increases, the association matched the consumer price indexes against wage increases in various cities.

It found that there was virtually no rise in real wages—that is, in actual wages less cost increases—in Halifax, Winnipeg, Saskatoon and Calgary between the first three months of 1966 and the second three months of 1966.

And between the first three months of 1966 and the second three months, average real wages actually fell in Ottawa, Toronto and Vancouver.

"These have been cities in which some of the most serious consumer unrest has occurred."

Announce New Healing Substance: Shrinks Piles

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids and repair damaged tissue. A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of even the most inflamed tissue.

In case after case, while getting the relief of pain, actual reduction (shrinkage) took place.

Most important of all — results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue.

Now Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H. Ask for Preparation H. Satisfaction or your money refunded.

Hollywood Canteen to Be Razed

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—No one raring of the Legrand Theatre paid much attention to the news that the city had ordered the servicemen and women of the Second World War and scores of movie figures, the event would have significance. For the Legrand was once the site of the Hollywood Canteen.

The Canteen originated with Bette Davis and her then agent, Jules Stein. Both saw the need for Hollywood to offer a haven for servicemen like New York's famous Stage Door Canteen. The pair proposed a Hollywood Canteen and drew immediate enthusiasm from the film community.

Every night for the next three years, Hollywood entertained the U.S. fighting men at the Canteen. They were served up pot dinners by such waitresses as Betty Grable, Jane Russell, Paulette Goddard, Ann Sheridan and a youthful Elizabeth Taylor. The boys were entertained by Bob Hope, Danny Kaye, Joe E. Brown, Dinah Shore and Betty Hutton, and they danced with starlets to the music of Harry James and Duke Ellington, too.

"My favorite memory was one Christmas Eve, recalls a canteen volunteer. "Bing Crosby came in the back door with his four young sons and asked if the family could entertain."

Jean Dies A Scriptless Death

NEW YORK (AP)—The late Arthur Shaw, only 12 episodes old, departed from network television Monday night—a comedy series that had everything except decent comedy scripts.

Miss Arthur, who can do more with a bright line than most actresses, struggled and showed gallantry, but no one could overcome those dreary scripts.

The final show, like all the others, was gloomy and professional. But just when plot substance was needed, everything fell into a ridiculous heap.

The story line dealt with Mrs. Marshall, played by Miss Arthur, and her son, Ron Harper, quarrelling and breaking up their law partnership. This in turn led to having them on opposite sides in a murder trial.

So far, so good. But when Miss Arthur and Harper had their courtroom scene, the supposedly irrefutable lady lawyer dissolved into a series of sentimental daydreams that had her adult son conducting the prosecution in various phases of his life, from infancy on. It was so bad that even the laugh track sounded embarrassed.

The spot will be filled next week by Yo Tell the Truth, a panel game that has been around for years.

GIVEN ROUGH TIME

The season has been a rough one. Miss Arthur, Milton Berle and Garry Moore have received mid-season cancellations, and Danny Kaye limps off at the end of the season—all victims of bad ratings.

Last month when Red Skelton's Clown Alley special preempted Kaye's hour on CBS, it attracted an audience almost twice as large as Kaye's a week later.

Skelton, incidentally, occupied two positions in the Nielsen top 10, released Monday. Clown Alley was in third place and Red's regular Tuesday night hour fourth.

NBC's Bonanza was, as usual, in the top spot, followed by CBS' Lucy Show. CBS' Jackie Gleason Show, Andy Griffith Show and Green Acres; NBC's Bob Hope Comedy Special with Bing Crosby, CBS' Beverly Hillbillies and NBC's Saturday Night at the Movies completed the list of most popular shows in the two-week period ending Nov. 20.

Most popular new series was ABC's Rat arrid is 27th position, CBS' Family Affair, 31st and NBC's Tarzan, 32nd.

Canada Will Support Rhodesia Oil Cutoff

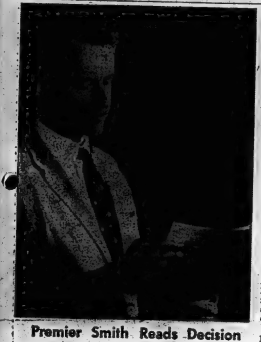
LONDON (CP) — Canada is prepared to support the inclusion of oil in United Nations sanctions against Rhodesia, says High Commissioner Lionel Chevrier.

There had been speculation in diplomatic circles here for some time that Canada would endorse the African position on oil though it was understood the Canadian government still had grave reservations whether an oil embargo could be made effective without bringing on a trade clash between Britain and South Africa.

However, during a television interview Thursday night, the Canadian high commissioner was pressed to give his government's position on this controversial issue. He replied:

"Canada feels that if oil will be a contribution to bring down the Rhodesian regime, then it will support the position."

Chevrier said Canada favors sanctions of a mandatory nature that will assist in bringing down the illegal regime.



Earlier Tuesday, Chevrier presided at a meeting of the Commonwealth sanctions committee which discussed Britain's draft resolution calling for mandatory UN sanctions. There was a feeling mainly among African representatives that the resolution did not go far enough.

One informant said later the feeling among those who criticized the British position was that "if you don't go for the quick kill, you might as well not bother."

It is understood the first British draft resolution called for a worldwide ban on trade in major British exports but did not include a reference to oil, a major Rhodesian import.

It is also understood, however, that a second British draft does include oil. Britain wants to have the sanctions so imposed that British responsibility and control over Rhodesia is not wrested from its hands.

It also wants the sanctions applied in such a way that it does not bring on a trade war with South Africa, a major importer of British goods. South Africa has stated it will not abide by any UN sanctions against Rhodesia.

Premier Smith Reads Decision

Smith Springs Surprise, Wants Unbiased Group To Suggest Solution

SALISBURY (Reuters)—Rhodesians awaited reaction today to Prime Minister Ian Smith's surprise suggestion for an "unbiased and unconfined commission" to settle its independence deadlock with Britain.

Observers here noted an increased feeling that the country is under siege, and concern about the future of the former British colony despite the fact that most white Rhodesians appeared relatively unaffected by events of the past four days.

Smith made his new suggestion in a televised press conference Tuesday night, after his cabinet denounced British terms for a settlement as being a demand for "unconditional and abject surrender."

(The suggestion was given an icy reception in official quarters in London today. A Commonwealth office spokesman said no comment would be made on the proposal.)

Smith did not go into detail but a spokesman for the prime minister said today no formal approach to British had been made on the idea.

The spokesman said the composition of such a commission would have to be agreed upon by the two governments.

The spokesman said the idea for a commission came to Smith Tuesday when he was composing his broadcast. The prime minister thought the commission could see for itself whether the British government was right in doubting that there was freedom of speech and opinion in Rhodesia.

The Smith cabinet, which Monday rejected the working document signed aboard a British warship off Gibraltar by the Rhodesian leader and Prime Minister Wilson of Britain, published a lengthy statement setting out its case.

The proposal for an interim administration headed by a governor, Sir Humphrey Gibbs, was described as a "Quisling government" that would only be a tool of the British government.

Industrialists were holding a series of meetings in discuss likely effects of United Nations-backed sanctions against the breakaway colony which Britain announced it was seeking.

But Smith reiterated Tuesday his view that new compulsory sanctions would have no more effect on the Rhodesian economy than the British-initiated voluntary measures now in force.

He said customers round the world would still want to buy the high quality goods and ores which his country had to offer. Rhodesia talks with Britain and proclaimed its independence 13 months ago.

Africans Want Total Boycott

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — African members of the United Nations sought support today to force the Security Council into slapping a total economic boycott on Rhodesia.

The African clamor rose as Foreign Secretary George Brown of Britain arrived in New York to put a draft resolution before the council Thursday asking selective mandatory sanctions against the rebellious central African colony, the chief target would be Rhodesian exports.

British sources said Brown was empowered, if pressed, to include a limited embargo on export of oil to Rhodesia. But South Africa, Rhodesia's chief source of oil, already has said it would continue normal trade with its northern neighbor.

Although extremists in the African group want to extend the proposed boycott to include South Africa, one African delegate expressed doubt the majority of the 15-nation council would approve this.

"Too many council members are carrying on trade with South Africa to go for any such proposal," he said.

The militants in the African group also seemed certain to increase pressure for use of British force to bring down the white regime, but this was also considered certain to be defeated.

The United States is expected to support Britain's position on Rhodesia with possible reservations.

U.S. administration sources in Washington indicated the U.S. would accept all economic sanctions the Security Council prescribed against Rhodesia, but would not go along if similar sanctions were requested against South Africa.

British Conservatives Set to Attack Wilson

LONDON (Reuters) — Prime Minister Wilson is expected to face heavy criticism from the Conservative opposition in Parliament today for his decision to seek compulsory United Nations sanctions against Rhodesia.

Wilson, who went on television Tuesday night to explain the breakdown of negotiations with Rhodesian Premier Ian Smith, said Britain had offered an "act of union" to Rhodesia in an attempt to halt the feud earlier this year.

Under such a system, he said, Rhodesia and Britain would become one country until majority rule was achieved in Rhodesia.

Rhodesians — European and African—would be elected to the British Parliament under this offer of "unparalleled generosity in the history of Britain and the Commonwealth."

But the Rhodesian leader, Wilson said, had rejected this offer "as he and his colleagues have now rejected the honorable settlement we worked out last week."

Following the Conservative party's move to the right on the Rhodesia issue at its annual conference two months ago verbal fireworks are expected from its leadership as well as the traditional attack from the right wing.

Conservative Leader Edward Heath, freed from the restraint imposed by the bipartisan approach maintained for the first few months after Rhodesia seized independence, seems headed for a head-on personal clash with the prime minister.

The Conservatives are particularly anxious over the possibility of oil being included among the items for compulsory sanctions, and the obvious danger of an escalating trade conflict with South Africa—Britain's third - best trading customer.

Nicholson Seeks Dock Strike Ban

VANCOUVER (CP) — Legislation to end the critical waterfront tieup in British Columbia was expected to go before Parliament in Ottawa today.

Labor Minister Nicholson returned to Ottawa Tuesday night, after failing in four days of talks here to resolve a dispute involving longshoremen, longshore foremen and waterfront employers.

Before leaving, he said he would ask the Commons today to approve a proposal to get waterfront gangs working again. He said it might involve arbitration, but declined to elaborate.

"Because of the mood Parliament is in and the concern that they have shown, I am hopeful that getting the resolution and the bill passed won't take too long," he said.

"This dispute can no longer hold up the distribution of products and result in the layoff of thousands of persons in other industries."

The dispute began Nov. 17 when 200 longshore foremen struck to back demands for recognition as a local of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union. Longshoremen refused to cross a foremen's picket line.

Pickets were removed on court order Nov. 21. Dock crews returned to work but were accused by employers of staging a deliberate slowdown. Employers said Nov. 28 that longshoremen no longer would be called to work unless the union pledged a day's work for a day's pay.

The union countered that any slowdown was caused by a lack of efficient supervisory personnel, the striking foremen.

Waterfront activity has been at a standstill since, with more than 4,000 longshoremen idle. At least another 2,000 men in the forest industry have been laid off as a result, because of a lack of storage space for lumber and pulp.

Mr. Nicholson proposed on the weekend that the foremen be given grievance procedure rights and the right to form an association not connected with the longshoremen's union.

The foremen accepted. The B.C. Maritime Employers Association turned the proposal down as a "device" and a "primitive form of collective agreement." The employers maintain the foremen are management personnel and not recognizable as a bargaining unit.

Mr. Nicholson said he had left both sides with an appeal to get cargo moving while the matter is under discussion in Ottawa. He said he was holding off on saying more "in hope of a miracle."

After his departure, however, the employers issued a press statement saying Mr. Nicholson had failed to grasp the basic facts of the situation. They attributed similar failure to Premier W. A. C. Bennett, who also had asked them to accept the Nicholson formula, and to the union.

"This is not a normal dispute," the statement said. "Wages, fringe benefits etc. are not at issue. The employers' position is either right or wrong. There can be no compromise."

Syria Pledges Aid to Rebels In Jordan

DAMASCUS (AP) — Dr. Nureddine Atassi, Syria's chief of state, today pledged armed support to what he called the "current public rebellion" in Jordan in a bid to overthrow King Hussein.

"The elimination of the Jordanian littoist which is protected by U.S.-British imperialism is the only course for progressive forces in Jordan to liberate the two banks of the country on both sides of the Jordan River and thus clear the way of return to Palestine," Atassi told a rally.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Mild weather will end abruptly today in the North as cold Arctic air from the Prairies spills eastward. Although cooler temperatures will spread into the southern regions today, the brunt of the cold air will once more be confined to the upper Great Lakes. Another storm in the current series will cross the Great Lakes Thursday.

Man Pinned in Wreck At Crossing at Batawa

BATAWA (Special) — A Trenton man was pinned in the wreck of his automobile here today after it was carried a half-mile on the front of a CNR ore train.

The man was identified as Wayne Menzies, 21, of Trenton. He was believed to have suffered chest and stomach injuries, but doctors still were assessing his condition at Trenton Memorial Hospital shortly before 1 p.m.

Menzies was driving west on the road to Batawa, west of Highway 33, when his car was hit at a level-crossing in heavy fog and rain.

The train was bound from a Marmoraton Mining Company at Marmora, fully loaded with iron ore, for shipment to the United States from Picton docks.

Engineer Thomas Hay said he saw the car approaching the crossing, and feared it wouldn't stop in time.

Employees at the nearby Bata Shoe plant said they had heard the train's warning whistle as it approached the crossing and then heard the crash.

Several office employees, still in their shirt sleeves, rushed down the tracks and pried the back of the car open to free the injured man.

A Rushnell Ambulance crew, called from Trenton, had to carry him across a 10-acre water-soaked field to the highway.

There are no lights at the crossing but two signs warn: "Private crossing—persons using do so at their own risk."

Plea for Medical Aid at Stirling

Not That Desperate Says Don Rodgers

A Stirling man has written a plea for medical help for that village. His letter was sent to the special Commons-Senate committee on immigration in Ottawa.

G. H. Hogle, proprietor of Hogle Duffin Funeral Home in Stirling, said there is only one resident physician in the village of 1,300 persons.

"Besides the village itself," he said, "we have a territory of 15 miles to cover in every direction.

"A great majority of our residents are senior citizens without transportation.

"The one doctor, Dr. Peter Briggs, does a marvellous job, but one man can only do so much."

Mr. Hogle said the situation was desperate, and said he raised the question at the recent nomination meetings and was told it was being taken care of.

"This thing has been bobbing along too long and nobody has been doing anything," he said. "This is why I wrote the commission, hoping something could be done."

Mr. Hogle wrote the letter because of a clipping he saw in the Toronto Star that the committee will try to find out why some immigrant doctors have trouble setting up private practice in Ontario.

Stirling Reeve Don Rodgers said he appreciates what Mr. Hogle was trying to do with his letter but says the situation is not desperate.

"I don't think we're actually that desperate," Mr. Rodgers said. "As long as there's no epidemic or something like that, then I think Dr. Briggs can handle it, at least, he can keep his head above water.

"We've always had two or three doctors here, but one moved to Belleville a few months ago and that left only the one."

He said council had taken no action in the matter preferring to leave the matter to Dr. Briggs for now. "We'd rather, if possible, have him interest another doctor to come here because he knows more what's needed than we do. He knows the type of qualifications needed.

"It's not a case that people are being neglected here," Mr. Rodgers said. "It's just a case that he's being overworked.

"Then again, we aren't too far from Frankford, and there are some doctors there, and we can get to Belleville in only 20 minutes, so we've not that badly off."

He said he doubted if council would take action on the problem unless Dr. Briggs requested help.

Chamber of Commerce president Ted Cairns said he plans to bring the matter up with the chamber at the next meeting.

"We've got to find the reason why doctors aren't coming here," he said. "It's not because we don't want them that's for sure."

He said Stirling should have at least two doctors. "One doctor can't possibly handle all the patients that should come to him every day.

"There is no reason a doctor shouldn't have the same privileges, or close to it, as the ordinary working man as far as having some time to himself."

Mr. Cairns said another problem is there is no ambulance service in the village. "Our ambulance service comes from Belleville, and they certainly do a good job, but if we had one here the ambulance could have the patient in Belleville in the same length of time it takes them now to get out here."

Co-chairman of the Commons-Senate committee Milton Klein, L—Montreal Cartier, said Mr. Hogle's letter "substantiates" remarks by David Orlikow, NDP—Winnipeg North about the need for doctors in Ontario.

Mr. Orlikow had said immigrant doctors, especially from India and Pakistan, were having trouble getting starting but hospital practice in Ontario.

St. Bernards Strange Reindeer

It's Brandy, the Blacknosed Bernard !

When was the last time you awakened to find two full-grown St. Bernards in your back yard? For Mr. and Mrs. Hudson Cook, of R. R. 7, Belleville, the last time, as well as the first, was Tuesday morning.

For Mrs. Cook, the first inkling that something unusual was in the offing came when her 9-year-old daughter Janet came rushing into the house squealing "Santa Claus is here - Santa Claus is here!"

Looking further into the situation, Mrs. Cook didn't find Santa Claus, or even any reindeer. But would you believe a pair of St. Bernards?

The Cooks could not account for the presence of the impressive looking canines in the back yard of their Massassaga Road home, and advertised their new - found guests on CJBQ radio's Pet Clinic.

Finally yesterday afternoon, around 4 o'clock, the mystery was solved. The doggy brothers were owned by Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Oakes, who live some two miles from the Cooks on the Redmerville Road.

Said Mrs. Oakes "They usually go off for a run and come back around noon. But when they get together, sometimes they're just like a pair of mischievous kids."

Winston and Brandy, as the two wanderers are called, are litter twins, purebred from Swiss St. Bernard stock.

Said Mrs. Oakes "I felt very badly about having to take them away from the Cooks' little girl. She was having such a good time with them."

Acting as an agent for Santa Claus, Mrs. Oakes gave Janet three shiny silver dollars for feeding her prize pets.

But Lone Doctor Says 'Working Day, Night'

Any move to obtain another general practitioner for Stirling is heartily endorsed by Dr. Briggs, who says the present situation keeps him on call 24 hours a day.

He said he has been personally seeking another physician for the village.

Dr. Briggs, a year's internship in Toronto after immigrating from England, then moved to Stirling in 1960.

His practice calls for attendance at Belleville General Hospital, office interviews, house calls and emergency calls.

"I'm working day and night," he said.

His practice extends beyond the village of Stirling into the surrounding countryside, which has a patient potential of "closer to 4,000," he estimates.

What he fears is that the demands on his time could affect his service.

"If I'm going to give the proper medical service to my own patients, I've got to have time . . . instead of having to rush everywhere."

So far, he has aimed at giving all his patients the time he feels necessary for their problems.

"And this prolongs my hours even more," he said.

Dr. Briggs has the highest standard of medical practice must be based on the doctor - patient relationship and the physician must have time to establish mutual contacts with each patient.

If an emergency arises and he cannot be available, he must send another physician "who is not the family doctor."

This breaks the contact in relationship.

"Some of my patients at times may feel I'm letting them down because I can't go to them," he reflected.

Lack of doctors willing to practise in rural areas "is a serious problem. There are not enough practitioners to go around."

Rural practice is what he calls "a lot of bullwork" calling for around-the-clock routine that keeps up the vital doctor - patient contact.

"You're out there alone and you're on the telephone 24 hours a day.

"I'm 100 per cent in favor of trying to get another doctor in Stirling," he added.

One solution might be to set up a clinic in which the local practitioners could pool their efforts when needed.

"This is the way that some areas have solved the problem," said Dr. Briggs.

Just entered God's eternal home,
Sadly missed and ever remembered by sisters and daughters Rina, Helen, Jessie, Gertrude and Ethel.

HOPKINS — In loving memory of a dear son Gordon Allan, who passed away Dec. 7, 1963.

Tweed Could Make History With Female Council

TWEED (Special) — This village now is seriously taking for granted the possibility it may have an all-woman council ruling its municipal affairs in 1967.

The idea was first tossed around town as a tongue-in-cheek to a local crisis caused when a nomination meeting failed to find enough council candidates.

It was inspired by the fact only two women qualified—Mrs. A. G. Allen for reeve and Mrs. E. J. Courneya for the four-member council.

"They're quite serious about it now," revealed acclaimed-reeve Mrs. Allen said on the eve of tonight's second nomination.

"There are still three seats to be filled on council, I know there are three women definitely going to run—even if there's an election."

Tonight villagers gather at the municipal offices for another nominating meeting, hopeful of finding enough candidates willing to sit on council. It's the second successive year they have been faced with such an impasse in local affairs.

The men of the village interestingly have come to accept the fact they could surrender their traditional ruling role to the distaff side.

"Up to this there were a couple of men I thought I had persuaded to sit on the council," added Mrs. Allen.

"Now they're saying: 'We'll let the women do it—it's going to be good for the village."

The main benefit resulting from an all-woman council would be publicity for the village. It would be the first time in known Canadian history such an event occurred and already the village is making the national news wires.

Besides the three women certain of nomination, Mrs. Allen says at least nine or 10 others "have been mentioned" as potential candidates.

How does she feel about the possibility of heading an all-woman municipal government?

"I was ambivalent about it first," confesses Mrs. Allen. "But then an all-woman council could be just as good, or just as bad, as an all-male council. The main thing is to get all points of view."

Tweed Possibility Good Idea: Jewett

An all-woman council in the village of Tweed could set a national example, one of Canada's leading women in public affairs believes.

Dr. Pauline Jewett, political scientist and former MP for Northumberland, heartily supported the idea in a telephone interview from her Ottawa home last night.

"It would be most novel, I don't see, on the face of it that there is anything wrong with it at all," she commented.

"The best people should get the job — whether they are men or women. But there probably are just as many women as men with the same capacity for public affairs."

Dr. Jewett felt the situation could lend encouragement to other women to step out into the public events arena.

"It's one way to get more women motivated even if it's kind of unusual circumstances."

Would an all-woman council be less effective without male support?

Dr. Jewett doesn't believe so. In fact, she scoffed at the suggestion.

"I don't think there's anything inherent in the sexes that this should be so.

"I myself, just don't see any biological differentiation that should affect the situation as far as the public's concerned," she laughed.

"When I heard about this at Tweed I thought: 'Why not?'

"As long as there's a dearth of women in public affairs one has to give encouragement to them.

Labor Disputes

Public Should Be Represented: Jurist

A Belleville jurist said Monday the general public should have a representative sitting at bargaining tables when a strike involves thousands of men or threatens the production of goods that everyone needs.

Hastings County Judge J. C. Anderson, himself a veteran of a number of arbitration and conciliation boards in labor disputes, told members of the Kiwanis Club that when certain vital services are in jeopardy of being denied the taxpayers due to labor strife, "a representative should be on hand at all proceedings so that a report may be made to the public on the issues in dispute.

"The influence of public opinion on employer-employee relations is still powerful and, if properly focused, may be very helpful to the parties concerned."

Judge Anderson said the advancement of labor relations has not kept pace with that of technological breakthroughs, in such areas as automation.

He said the legitimate rights of both labor and management must be protected by whatever labor laws are on the books, but added these two groups must work together "in the highest public interest."

"In connection with the settlement of disputes in public utilities, railways, among civil servants, and in all other areas where a strike vitally affects the public interests, attempts must be made to work out guidelines for wage determination at times when contracts are not about to expire."

Such guidelines and yardsticks would "allow employees in these fields to keep on a par with the rest of the economy, as well as contribute to the stability of economic employer-employee relations."

Of labor difficulties in general, he said that laws forcing people to work; that is "to make strikes illegal," were virtually incapable of enforcement. "About the best we can do is lay down guidelines for conduct and set out certain basic standards that can be enforced."

The alternative to an exercise of self-discipline by labor and management is state regulation which "inevitably leads to an authoritarian trusteeship over both company and union, involving the fixing of wages and selling prices of products."

Calling for a re-appraisal of the value of company labor relations and personnel departments, he said the latter were probably the most important ingredients of any 20th century firm.

"How can a company remain competitive if it has not some assurance what its work force will produce?", he asked.

It is through these departments that employees could be made to feel they are making more of a contribution in their company. He noted: "It has been in those firms in which employees show they have developed a sense of loyalty to their employer that one finds a long history of satisfactory labor relations and an absence of strikes".

Judge Anderson also remarked that the onus was on companies to make clear to the employees those changes which effect his security and working conditions.

It was equally as crucial unions realize their task "is much more important than that of simply using their new bargaining strength to exact more money from management. Unions could very well improve their interpretations of company problems to employees.

The key to the overall picture, was "to make both management and labor aware of each others' mutual problems so that they will act responsibly in any given situation", he said.

It's an Improvement, But...

William G. Rowland, manager of the Templer Flower Shop at 395 Front Street, admits that as far as business is concerned half a snow fence is better than a full one — but it doesn't improve the looks.

Late in November Mr. Rowland wrote to city council complaining that the "dirty unsightly snow fence" erected by the city as a traffic lane divider at the Upper Bridge.

Not only was the fence unsightly but Mr. Rowland said it was blocking motorists' view of his shop windows.

Last week the height of the snow fence directly opposite the flower shop windows was sawed off.

"It's an improvement as far as my windows are concerned, but it didn't improve the looks of the fence, any," Mr. Rowland says.

He wonders why the city didn't erect some kind of a tidy picket fence if it wanted something as a traffic lane divider.

"It wouldn't have been a complete loss. It could have been re-erected at some city park," he said.

Two Streets Have Names Of Mayors

Belleville council this week gave approval to the naming of two new streets in the north west section of the city, both in honor of former mayors.

One of the streets running west from Sidney Street, to be called Hanna Street, is planned to eventually be a major artery leading to the Wallbridge Road side of 401 Highway. The other, a street in the same general area will be called Davy Road.

Both names were recommended to council by the Belleville and Suburban Planning Board.

The late Charles L. Hanna was mayor of Belleville in 1921 and 1922. The late B. F. Davy was the first mayor of Bellevilla following its incorporation as a town in 1850.

Caretaking Contracts Awarded

Caretaking contracts for the next two years for city owned buildings were awarded this week by city council.

Hastings Caretaking, a locally owned janitorial service, was awarded the caretaking job at city hall at $625 per month. Noxi Brothers will do the city police station at $274.80 a month and the city public works building on Wallbridge Crescent at $271.80 per month.

Tenders were also called for caretaking at the Health and Recreation building on Pinnacle Street but no contract was awarded. Cleaning at this building is done by a cleaning lady on an hourly basis.

Council Agrees to Changes In Meeting Procedure

There is to be another change in procedure for city council meetings.

In an effort to speed up proceedings, the present "informal" session now held prior to the regular meeting, will be dropped with council to go directly into a formal committee of the whole session. Chairmen for the formal session will be rotated.

As at present, council meetings will commence at 4:00 p.m. on alternate Mondays.

But other councillors did not see it that way and the compromise agreement was later approved.

It was generally agreed that the present discussion prior to the regular meeting resulted in council members becoming informed on the subject matter.

Under the new format the customary regulations with respect to procedure will be adhered to, although Mayor Jack Ellis suggested any latitude given with respect to speaking would be up to the individual chairman.

As before, delegations will be heard at any time of the meeting.

On days when caucus meetings are necessary, these will start at 4:00 o'clock, with the press and the public being "inconvenienced" until the private session is ended.

Teachers Plan Meeting Here

A Toronto school principal will be guest speaker Monday at the second session of the current series on school supervision and administration sponsored jointly by the Ontario Public School Men - Teachers' Federation and OPSMTF District No. 4.

A. D. Sparks, principal of Hillcrest Public School, Toronto, will address the group on The Principal's Role in Maintaining and Raising Teachers' Standards.

The meeting is scheduled for King George Public School.

Highway Hazard

One development that will have to be considered in the event of a Quinte area college being located half-way between Belleville and Trenton is the improvement of No. 2 highway.

With hundreds of students attending such a college, and journeying back and forth between the different communities, this is a matter of some gravity.

No. 2 highway is not the safest of routes, particularly the stretch between Belleville and Trenton. Many students will have cars that they will be using for journeys in and out of the two main centres of the Quinte area.

It does not take much imagination to envisage the hazards that the highway could pose for such a large number of young people and for the driving public at large.

This warning, however, must be regarded merely as one of the overall considerations to be taken into account, and not as a stumbling-block to the furtherance of the proposal to construct the college midway between the two centres in the bayshore area of Sidney township.

Specifically, however, the highway should be widened to permit safer motoring along what promises to become an exceptionally busy route. Access to the proposed college itself will have to be gone into carefully, particular attention being given to visibility in either direction and to the problems posed by rush-hour traffic mornings and evenings, especially in winter.

Rhodesia—No Change

The Rhodesian crisis has entered a new stage with the Salisbury government's rejection of British proposals for a settlement.

From Rhodesia's point of view no other result was feasible. Prime Minister Ian Smith agreed to the British draft of a Rhodesian constitution designed to move the country slowly toward African rule, but he refused to give up independence and accept British control during the transitional period until the new constitution became effective.

In putting Britain's case, Prime Minister Wilson in turn had no other recourse but to demand that the rebel government once again accept overall British jurisdiction. This would have meant recognition by Rhodesia of the authority of Westminster and of the Queen's representative in Salisbury, Sir Humphrey Gibbs.

With the breakdown in the talks between Mr. Wilson and Mr. Smith, Britain has asked the United Nations Security Council to consider the introduction of mandatory sanctions against Rhodesia. Sanctions introduced by Britain early in the crisis have so far failed to bring about the overthrow of the Salisbury government and in this situation Rhodesia has had support from South Africa and the neighboring Portugese territories of Angola and Mozambique. Whether wider sanctions sponsored by the United Nations succeed where the others have failed remains to be seen.

Beyond Our Means

It might have been James Coyne speaking. It was Mr. Coyne — former governor of the Bank of Canada — who said that Canadians were "living grandly beyond their means."

And of course they still are. Reader's Digest, in an article under the heading of "Debt — the New Way of Life," recently stated that Canadians at large are in hock to the tune of 7½ billion dollars.

Now we have Keiso Roberts echoing those words spoken not so long ago — during the Diefenbaker years — and still warning of the dangers of unrestrained spending.

The former Minister of Lands and Forests in the Ontario government told the Prince Edward-Lennox Conservative Association that Canadian governments, both federal and provincial, must forsake deficit financing and return to traditional balanced budgets.

Well, economists never seem to be able to agree on such a premise. For example, we need schools, and educational facilities generally are undergoing tremendous expansion. To pay for these the Canadian governments, through the taxpayers, are paying huge sums of money. School boards, and municipalities make use of the principles of deficit financing to provide not only for education but the whole range of services that are taken for granted today.

To achieve a balanced budget under these circumstances is virtually impossible, and so long as the overall debt is not such that it poses a serious threat to the value of the dollar itself then governments and economists and public seem willing to go along with it.

That is not to say that Canadians should not attempt to keep spending under tighter rein. Ottawa and the provinces have not given a notably good lead in this respect, but it will have to do so if the worst fears of Mr. Roberts, and Mr. Coyne before him, are not to be realized. Meanwhile we imagine deficit financing is here to stay. Without it the economy would grind to a halt.

"Belleville is bursting at the seams. Industry is not looking for cash, says town mayor or ten acres these days. It wants anywhere from 25 to 50 acres," Mayor Frank Follwell said to a packed City Council Chamber last night in opening the discussion on the city by-law which calls for authority to spend $33,000 on industrial sites.

The county of Hastings in collaboration with the city of Belleville will launch an extensive publicity program in 1947 in an effort to bring holiday and tourist attractions before a great number of potential summer visitors.

Sweden Maintains Labor Peace

The current year has been dubbed by some writer as the "Year of The Strike in Canada." Widest walkouts, lockouts, legal strikes and other labor disputes that have plagued the nation have weakened our economy in proportion to the length of the strike, cost of settlements, etc.

Sweden has an exceptional formula for maintaining peace on the labor front, according to a despatch out of Stockholm. The story says the sword of Damocles and self-interest play lead roles in giving Sweden labor peace so frequently envied by countries such as Canada, the United States, England, France and other nations.

Never used is the sword — the power of highly organized management and labor to call a general country-cripling lockout or strike.

The Swedish Employers' Confederation and the Confederation of Swedish Trade Unions represent a major part of the country's employers and workers. Every three years, they hold a negotiating meeting to decide on a contract formula that will affect more than a million employers and workers of Sweden's 8,000,000 population.

The process, started in 1956, is known as centralized bargaining. When the settlement is reached by the negotiating teams, it is passed along to local unions and employers for adaption to their individual needs, while keeping the basic principles. If a deadlock should occur during these centralized negotiations, a general lockout or strike could be called. However, neither has ever materialized.

A preface to the basic agreement under the formula says, I "to preserve undisturbed labor peace in view of its importance to industry and trade and to the national economy." Under the centralized bargaining scheme, more attention can be paid to Sweden's economy. Authorities can look at the economic situation in that country and in other nations and can say Sweden can't afford more than this. Labor can do the same thing. Then the officials can begin to form a general framework. The agreement actually is a recommendation to affiliated labor and management associations and they negotiate agreements within the general framework.

Sweden's outstanding labor formula has worked most successfully for the past 10 years. Perhaps other countries would do well to investigate it.

Letter to the Editor

Quinte's Industrial and Educational Needs

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

The only favorable solution to Toronto's insoluble housing problem lies in the decentralization of its surplus industry throughout the province's hinterland and satellite communities.

Immigrants and the outpourings from hundreds of towns, villages, hamlets and farms throughout the province (1) are flooding into Toronto at such a rate (some 90,000 annually) that while the metropolis expands to unwieldy proportions other industry-starved districts lose immigrants and are receding a loss of population.

This growth disparity reflects lack of planning and is the cause of Toronto's housing fiasco, which spurred by excessive demand and inflated land prices, will continue to worsen until the pattern of industrial settlement has been diversified.

The necessary decentralization could be furthered by the selection of certain towns and cities at approximately 50-mile intervals along the Lake Ontario-St. Lawrence waterway such as Cobourg or Port Hope, Belleville, Brockville and Prescott to serve as satellite employment - educational - cultural centres for towns, villages and hamlets within an immediate radius.

The "Designated Area" tax concession for attracting new industry which has proved so effective in rejuvenating Windsor, Brantford and other communities could be "lent" to the selected satellites until a healthy growth pattern had been established and the colleges and technical schools built.

Like Kingston, these cities would be industrial, educational and cultural centres for their surrounding areas with a senior college, as well as an Ontario College for the furtherance of the education of non-graduating high school students and a technical college with special courses to meet the specific requirements of local industries.

The escalating demand for college education emphasizes the need for more universities conveniently located in smaller towns and cities throughout the province rather than the uneconomic and inefficient extension of established colleges.

It is more realistic and economical to purchase surplus acreage for new college sites rather than land is comparatively cheap (seven miles south of Trent in Peterborough) rather than to spend millions for the expropriation of costly-ing real estate such as surrounds the University of Toronto.

The second phase of this decentralization would be to extend the line of satellites northward along Highway No. 7 towards Ottawa marking Marmora or Madoc and Perth and Smiths Falls as possible hubs along this important highway. The further north development could embrace such centres as Bancroft, Renfrew, Pembroke, North Bay, Parry Sound, Midland, Collingwood, Owen Sound etc.

The final phase would be the building of entirely new, slum modern fully-planned cities on virgin acreage where good sources of water are available, preferably between the aforementioned older cities so that industrial, cultural and employment opportunities —

If the present one-sided flow of job hunters to Toronto continues a population of seven million is envisioned, promising the same retrogradation, which is now forcing people and business out of New York City where growth has passed the point of no return.

In addition to the one by the Department of Trade and Commerce of the Designated Area policy for the decentralization of industry and the stimulation of depressed regions, the Department of Immigration could contribute by explaining to immigrants that the higher cost of housing and transportation in Toronto necessitates at least 25% higher earnings than would be required to enjoy a similar standard of living in say, Belleville, Peterborough or Kingston.

It appears that if the government and private enterprise could get together on a plan for decentralization that they would solve Toronto's housing problem while spreading the opportunities for growth and development far more equitably throughout the entire province.

Belleville.

Commons Studies Medicare

Windsor Star

The House of Commons is making a detailed study of the Government's medical care legislation, going over it clause by clause. This is a proper place for intensive scrutiny.

It will be one of the most important pieces of legislation ever to be put on the statute books of Canada. It affects every Canadian now living and it will affect future generations as well.

All the political parties are committed to medical care in principle though there are differences as to what its provisions and methods should be. The public is ready to accept it, indeed having been more advanced generally than the politicians.

In the debate over details, however, there is a possibility of getting sidetracked from the fundamentals; of losing sight of the forest while looking at the trees. This should not happen.

The fundamentals are that it is a publicly sponsored program; that every Canadian is covered by it; that everyone gets equal coverage wherever he may live or wherever he may move in Canada. And, as large amounts of public money are involved, there must be a public supervision to ensure against waste or misuse of it.

Debate on this measure is essential, but it should be for the purpose of clarification and progress, rather than for creating confusion or causing obstruction.

People are interested in knowing all about it but they will rightfully resent the playing of politics on a program so vital to the country.

Worried Over Husband Who Flies Into Rage

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: My husband, 70, is acting queerly and I am frankly worried. When I try to fix his meals and ask him what he wants, he flies into a rage and shouts that I should know. Then, he shows the door to his bedroom and sometimes stays in there until the next day.

Other times he will just get mad over nothing and go out with the boys. I have heard that men this age become senile. Do you have a pamphlet on this, or what can you say to relieve my mind? — L.D.

No, no pamphlet on it, because such emotional outbursts don't fall into any simple formula. They take many forms.

Excessive anger is one. Anxiety, withdrawal, depression, suspicion and a good many others can occur.

Is this behavior something new, or merely an intensification of the way your husband has always been? One must be more suspicious when a mode of behavior is entirely different from what has been his normal actions.

It's also wise, when such behavioral changes occur, to inquire (by tactful questioning) whether your husband is worried about something — money, job, health, anything.

I don't like to hand out the easy-sounding advice of "go to a psychiatrist." That is proper in cases that may be necessary. It's better to discuss the problem with your doctor; find out what he is happening. He may be able to help or he way advise you to get specialized attention.

Calling such changes senility isn't necessarily a good idea. We all get old, but we don't all fly into rages. "Senility" may mean that he has had a stroke or other form of brain damage. It may also be an emotional upset which does not involve any physical injury.

I would like to "relieve your mind", Mrs. D., but I can't. Perhaps your doctor can, because sometimes the bothering cause of such a change in temperament can be identified and healed.

It isn't natural for a person to change personality just because he is old. Whether good or bad, there still has to be a reason for the change.

Dear Dr. Molner: Is cortisone used in treatment of hay fever? My son, 18, had one shot of what he believes was cortisone, and it seemed to help. Maybe it was just a mild season. Would such a shot be harmful every year — Mrs. R. H.

Cortisone is indeed used to give hay fever victimes some temporary relief, but it is unusual for a single dose to produce such complete relief. I must assume that your son has very mild hay fever or the season was extremely mild.

Whether treatment is advisable each year should be judged by your physician, but I doubt that a single annual injection would do much good.

Dear Dr. Molner: I read that the way to prevent flabby arms and flabby thighs is by taking advance precautions. What are these? — Mrs. M. B.

I think you misunderstood the easy-sounding advice of "go to a psychiatrist." That is proper in cases that may be necessary. It's better to discuss the problem with your doctor; find out what he is happening. He may be able to help or he way advise you to get specialized attention.

Calling such changes senility isn't necessarily a good idea. We all get old, but we don't all fly into rages. "Senility" may mean that he has had a stroke or other form of brain damage. It may also be an

Strictly Personal

More People Are Marrying

By Sydney J. Harris

It is true that one out of every four marriages in this country ends in divorce. It is not true, however, that marriage is a failing institution in the 20th century.

Divorce statistics can be shocking if they are looked at in isolation — but, then, so can any statistics, including those for heart disease and cancer. We don't know how to use statistics, we are better off without them.

For instance, we all know the figures on the divorce rate — but how many of us have heard that a higher percentage of people in the United States get married today than ever before? In the past, about 90 percent of the population married; these days, the percentage is 95 — which is a lot more people in our U.S. population of 200 million.

Not only do more people get married, but more people get married young. Over 40% of the 400,000 divorcees each year, about two-thirds of the women and three-fifths of the men remarry, and not long afterwards. Marriage as an institution is flourishing, not failing — even though many specific marriages may not be doing well.

Why do we have so many more divorces than we used to? There are at least five main reasons, and they are no longer than they used to; (2) they move about more, and don't have the roots they used to; (3) they have more leisure time, more money and are able to obtain a legal divorce; (4) Women have more freedom of action and more independence, and thus less willing to endure a slave-like marriage; (5) Expectations of satisfactions in marriage are higher than they used to be.

None of these are reasons upon which nearly all sociologists agree — do we find a tendency to look upon marriage in a cheap and cynical attitude toward marriage. They are not but how people view their conditions, rather than declines in personal values. If anything, the personal values in marriage have been upgraded over the years — for more of the total personality is now permitted.

The old-fashioned marriage, which worked reasonably well in the old cultural matrix, fired the husband primarily in his role as the "provider," and the wife primarily in her role as "homemaker." But such aspects as sharing, self-expression and love and companionship were often lacking in the relationship.

In today's affluent society, these formerly submerged aspects have come to the surface and are the primarily in the marriage. What we need is not a return to the "old-fashioned" marriage, but a better understanding of the demands of the new kind.

Tweed Women to the Fore

Peterborough Examiner

The current campaign by the Tweed News to organize an all-candidates' meeting for the village for 1967 will undoubtedly become national attention on the assumption that it is successful. Already a woman has declared herself in the race—elect and one of four council seats has been filled by another.

The News is talking of this in terms that are beginning to reject, pointing out that in 1967 women did not have the vote. Indeed female citizens did not become until a great deal later than that. The breakthrough came in Manitoba in 1916 thanks to the redoubtable, efforts of Nellie McClung. And further women did not get the vote until 1940. Perhaps more relevant is the Centennial. Is the fact that last week, as Time magazine points out, Manitoba's Council of Women celebrated the 50th anniversary of female suffrage in Canada by presenting bronzes to the Manitoba Legislature.

The Council's president took the opportunity to quote Sir Redmond Roblin, the Manitoba premier of the time (and grandfather of the present premier) who was the butt of much of the McClung fireworks, as saying bluntly: "When I could frame a sentence I sent and I want a hyena in parliament talking politics to me. I want a sweet, gentle creature to bring me my slippers." Even today suspect many men feel the same way and that women humor them in this. Tweed is a long way from that blow against this attitude, but we hope that the emergence of female candidates in politics does not cause the community to regret it.

Open Door Policy

Banker Advocates U.S. Agencies Here

OTTAWA (CP)—A Canadian bank president suggested Tuesday an open-door policy on U.S. bank agencies and Canadian control of chartered banks in Canada except for U.S.-owned Mercantile.

Earle McLaughlin, chairman and president of the Royal Bank, made the points while fencing with the Commons finance committee on the touchy Mercantile issue.

Washington has sharply protested proposed Bank Act changes to halt the growth of Mercantile. The committee is studying the amendments.

The committee members found Mr. McLaughlin a hard man to pin down. The "practical banker"—by his own definition—told questioners he favored Canadian ownership of banks in Canada for a variety of reasons.

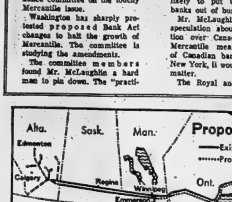
But he did not favor the government taking over Mercantile, which he termed "a diplomatic question."

He evaded direct comment on what the government should do, but said Mercantile was unlikely to put Canadian-owned banks out of business.

Mr. McLaughlin said if the speculation about U.S. retaliation over Canada's stand on Mercantile meant curtailment of Canadian bank agencies in New York, it would be a serious matter.

The Royal and other banks depend on their New York agencies to handle international dealings in U.S. dollars and sterling. If the U.S. forced a retaliatory withdrawal, Canada would have to depend on foreign banks to conduct these important transactions.

Mr. McLaughlin thought Canada should allow U.S. banks to establish their own bank agencies in Canada similar to the ones Canada has in the U.S. These do not take deposits from U.S. residents.



They make loans, handle letters of credits and look after similar matters and pose no significant competitive threat to the domestic banks.

Mr. McLaughlin said such a setup would be reasonable form of reciprocity.

The finance committee was scheduled to air the whole Mercantile affair Thursday when the firm's president, Robert McFadden, was to appear. But he won't be there after all this year because of an attack of pleurisy.

Walter Gordon has said that as finance minister in 1963 he warned F. H. Deacon, National City Bank of New York that growth restrictions would follow if it took over Mercantile from the Dutch owners.

Mr. McFadden has said his version of the meeting was different from Mr. Gordon's in any event the sale went through, leading to the present impasse.

Existing and Proposed Pipelines

If Trans-Canada Pipe Lines Ltd. gets the go-ahead on new pipelines, the system east of Manitoba would be enlarged with a southern line running from Emerson, Man., through the United States to Southern Ontario, with a spur into Sault Ste. Marie. Future "twinning" of the existing northern route would mean a double line from Winnipeg into central Ontario. The existing line, twinned from the Saskatchewan-Alberta border to Winnipeg runs through to the Montreal areas. (CP Newsmap)

Queen Mother In Hospital

Nature of the checkup has not been disclosed.

The Queen Mother, 66, had her appendix removed in the same hospital nearly three years ago.

She is being attended by the Queen's physician, Sir Ronald Bodley Scott, the announcement said.

Viet Nam Cost Ten Billion Above Budget

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP)—President Johnson estimates Viet Nam war costs between now and next June 30 will exceed earlier budget projections by $9,000,000,000 to $10,000,000,000.

He plans to ask Congress next month for a supplemental appropriation to bridge the gap, he told a press conference Tuesday.

The president remained silent about the possibility of a 1967 income tax increase, but said facts needed to make a decision are falling into place.

Yule Fruit Bread

By MARY HOORE

My enthusiasm for this Christmas tree fruit bread nearly outdistances my space.

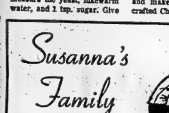
The cardamom seeds it calls for give it a subtle flavor little used by Canadian cooks. I want to urge you to include them in it. Grind what cardamom seeds in your food grinder to give you ½ or ¾ tsp., or failing that put them into a strong envelope and hammer them on a board until they are finely broken. Remove any too-large pieces of husk before measuring.

WEDNESDAY

Dinner Menu

Ham Steak Baked in Milk; Fried Parsnips; Broccoli; Sliced Tomatoes and Cucumbers; Baked Rice and Raisin Pudding; Tea.

CHRISTMAS TREE FRUIT BREAD (use 12" loaf):



1 cup scalded milk
½ to ¾ tsp. ground cardamon seeds (optional but see hints above)
½ cup sugar (first amount)
¼ cup shortening
1 tsp. salt
1 tsp. bottled or fresh orange peel
1 pkg? granular yeast
¼ cup lukewarm water
1 tsp. sugar (second amount)
1 egg
4 cups sifted All-purpose flour
one 8-oz. package mixed peel and fruit cake fruits (like) ½ cup sultana raisins

To the scalded milk add the ground cardamon seeds, ¼ cup sugar, shortening, salt and orange peel. Allow to cool to lukewarm.

Into your big mixing bowl measure the yeast, lukewarm water, and 2 tsp. sugar. Give them one stir and let soak 10 min. Measure the flour. To soaked yeast mixture add the lukewarm milk mixture, peel and fruits. Mix. Add half of the flour and the egg and beat for 5 min. Add all but ¼ cup of remaining flour and mix well. Cover. Let rise until more than doubled. (I let mine rise in cool kitchen overnight.) Punch down dough.

Sprinkle baking board with remaining ¼ cup flour and shape dough into roll and cut into three equal portions. Shape each portion into a 30" long "rope". Leave one rope full length. On a buttered cookie sheet, measuring at least 15 x 10", shape lower branches of tree, about 3" from one end, into a paper-clip-shaped oval with ends touching at centre of tree.

From second rope cut a 3" piece and shape this 17" rope into another oval above, but touching, first oval. Cut a 3" and a 5" piece from last rope and shape this third rope into another oval above, but touching second oval: Form the 5" piece into an inverted "v" for the pointed top of the tree. Press the two 3" pieces together to form the "trunk" at bottom of tree. Cover and let rise at room temperature until well risen. Bake 2 hours in kitchen at 70 deg. Fahr. Bake on rack at centre of oven at 300 deg. Fahr. about 45 to 55 min. Be sure it tests done at centre. Cool on same pan but while still a little warm frost with Seth Glaze: Mix together 1 cup icing sugar, 1½ tbsps. hot water, 1 tsp. salad oil, ¼ tsp. vanilla, shake of salt and if desired, 4 drops green food coloring. At once sprinkle green sugar crystals over; dot with "silvery" to represent shiny Christmas tree balls. If perfectly freezer-wrapped this loaf freezes well and makes a loving hand-crafted Christmas gift.

Tongue - Tied at the Doctor's

Dear Susanna: On my occasional visits to the doctor there are so many things to ask him about me and my family, that I use to leave his office without remembering to mention half of them.

Now, however, a few days before an appointment is coming up, I start to compile a list of all our questions - just like my grocery list.

Our doctor gets a great kick out of my reading it off - he also appreciates the time and the phone calls it saves.

R.L.

. . . . and what joyous therapy there is in having him tell you that all those little symptoms you are worrying about are really nothings, and can be cleared up with a few applications of ointment, a bit of tonic, or by cutting down on those last four cups of coffee!

SUSANNA

Dear Susanna: As we live quite a distance from town, it is often necessary to "make do" with something we already have on hand.

One of my most recent discoveries is that fiberglass fly screening is an ideal substitute for needle point canvas.

Ann Landers

Husband Abandons Her At Cocktail Parties

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Am I living in the dark ages or do I expect too much of my husband? Cocktail parties are my problems.

DOCIE CLARK

We walk into a cocktail party and off my husband goes for an hour or two or three. Occasionally, he'll wink by and shout, "How are you doing?" But he's gone before I'm able to reply, "I'm doing absolutely lousy, thank you. I've been trapped by the world's biggest bores and my feet are killing me."

When I tell my husband I hate being stranded at cocktail parties that I could tolerate them if he would stay with me, he replies, "I don't like them myself, but it's an opportunity to make important contacts and just being seen is good for business. I can talk to you at home."

Am I being immature, as my husband insists? What can I do to cure him of abandoning me at these gruelling affairs? — IGNORED WIFE.

ANN LANDERS

DEAR WIFE: You have two choices, Lady. Either go to the cocktail parties with your husband and be prepared to fend off the bores, or stay at home where you probably will feel twice as sorry for yourself.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a 14-year-old girl who is writing to you because if I confessed this to anyone they'd think I was nuts.

This summer I went to Norway with my parents. So many wonderful things happened on the trip. When I came home, I felt all grown up.

Before I went away I hated doing dishes and making beds, and cooking and baking. Now I find housekeeping is a lot of fun. And do you know why? Because I pretend I am grown up and the house is mine. I even have an imaginary husband. Do you think I am crazy, Ann? — MISS PRETEEN.

* * *

DEAR MISS: No, I don't. It's fun to pretend. And as long as you know you are pretending there is no harm in it. As it says in the song, if you want your dream to come true, you have to have a dream.

I'm printing your letter in the hope that other teenagers who hate housework might get an idea. (If it works millions of mothers will bless you.)

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Last September I married a divorcee who has an 18-year-old son. Before we were married, she persuaded me to permit the boy to live with us until February when he would volunteer for the army.

February has come and gone and the boy is still here. He is mouthy, insolent, arrogant and he also is wrecking our marriage.

When I came from work tonight my wife was crying. She said the boy had been baiting her all day. They argue constantly and he gets on her nerves but she has never disciplined him.

The boy has a job and is self-supporting. He gets along fairly well with his father who is unmarried. I feel he should go and live there. I hate to make my wife choose between the boy and me, but that's the way things are headed. What is your opinion of this man? — ON THE EDGE.

* * *

DEAR EDGE: Remind your wife of the agreement that the boy would leave in February. Don't give her an ultimatum. It could wreck your marriage. Speak your piece and let's hope she has sense enough to do what should have been done in February.

Give Hints for Peeling Onions

Regarding weeping while peeling onions, to you it might have seemed a joke, but to those who like onions and weep every time they peel them it is not funny.

I find to peel an onion and not weep, you need no water, just peel from the top down to the roots, and to quarter do likewise; cut from the top to the root. Never slice from bottom first, and you don't need that clothes peg or safety pin.

No Joke.

DEAR NO:

O.K., I'm serious, even if the safety pin wasn't. And to prove it, I supply herewith advice contributed by other readers:

1. Why not put poor Jimmie out of his misery and tell him always to wash his hands in cold water after handling onions? Also you might tell him to always keep onions wrapped in a plastic bag in his frig, and I'll guarantee he'll neither smell nor weep. (Warmth causes foods to give off odors and exude juices.) - Always a Helper.

2. One morning I was shredding peeled potatoes (raw) right after peeling onions and all the offensive onion odor was gone. - Spuds Again.

3. Tell Bachelor Jimmie to cut through a raw potato, rub his fingers with the slice and "presto", no onion. About weeping, I either get outside or hold them at arm's length if there are just two or three to do. - Old Hand.

4. A quiet run under cold water (no scrubbing) is 100 per cent immediate success. Slicing under cold water is possible may be helpful to Jimmie. - Hint.

5. Rub a little salt on the fingers. This absorbs the juice, and after washing hands in the ordinary way, no odor will remain. - Frequent Onion User.

DEAR DORIS:

We always enjoy your column and your good advice in many, especially in these days of perverted ideas of sex and promiscuity. We sometimes wonder what the future holds for a safe and secure and happy family life.

Looking Ahead.

DEAR LOOKING:

Specialty since not and its thrib so surely let our misguided teen-agers down!

But was there ever a time when youth did not find delight in shocking the not-so-young? And All - knowing Seventeen will never in later life be so sure he is right and clever and decisive as he is right now.

Hold the line for him. Accentuate the positive - and when he is older he will not depart from it.

Yule Display Viewed by Horticulturists

The Belleville Junior Horticultural Society met at the home of Mrs. Allan Gardiner for their December meeting.

Mrs. Gardiner showed the members how to make Christmas decorations and suggested good ideas for gift giving.

One attractive arrangement for the television set was made out of driftwood, angel hair and twinkle lights. To this was added a miniature Santa and a few snowmen.

For the front door Mrs. Gardiner made a huge Santa sock. After stuffing the sock with paper, a few gift wrapped boxes were added and a doll.

To top their Christmas cards neat and in order Mrs. Gardiner showed members how to make a Christmas tree on which to pin their cards. A large triangle was cut out of cardboard and covered with green foil. The base of the tree was made of a different color.

Other ideas ranged from bath salt containers to a table centrepiece.

A most enthusiastic Junior society are planning to decorate their homes for the festive season.

Many door prizes, some potted plants and some decorations made that evening were given out.

Members are reminded of the seed mosaic contest going on now. A travelogue on Australia is planned for January and a members' film night for February.

Congratulations were extended to Miss Donna Boyce who won fifth prize at the Royal Winter Fair for her matched set of sunflowers.

The Experts Say

Public Should Mail Yule Parcels Early and Wrap Well for Handling

TORONTO (CP) — Unless your Aunt Harriet lives where mail is delivered by parachute, her Christmas present isn't going to be dropped from a great height deliberately.

At the same time, postal workers cannot give it personal attention. It goes on a conveyor with hundreds of other parcels, then into a bag which is thrown on to a truck or train and off again.

"They do get a fair bit of handling," W. D. Baker says mildly. "Chipboard, a box like a shoe box, won't stand it. A three - pound book could go right through it."

Mr. Baker is in the public relations department of the post office. He combines a plea for early mailing at Christmas with the hope that packages will be wrapped so they stand a chance of getting there in one piece.

If you haven't mailed your presents to Britain yet, it's too late to get them there by Christmas in the normal way.

The deadline was Nov. 24.

Cards in Canada should be mailed by Dec. 13 for out-of-town delivery, Dec. 17 locally.

For parcels going out of town, allow for the usual mailing time and add a few days.

RENT BIG BUILDING

The big cities usually take special measures to facilitate handling of Christmas mail. In Toronto, for example, the post office rents most of the big coliseum building at the Canadian National Exhibition grounds.

"In many areas of the country there is just truck service now that trains no longer run there," Mr. Baker says. "When the available truck or trucks are loaded, mail left over just has to wait."

You can minimize the chance of delay on a package going out of Canada by having customs forms filled out correctly, getting parcels weighed at the post office for postage and following size and weight regulations.

Parcels for Britain may weigh no more than 22 pounds. For Canada and the United States the limit is 25 pounds. Mr. Baker says people often must be asked to rewrap packages to lighten them.

"This is not an exclusively Canadian regulation. It's an international agreement on parcel post."

In Canada, parcels may be no more than three feet in width, length or height. For Britain the limit is 3½ feet. In either case the girth may be no more than six feet.

NOT TOO SMALL

"We haven't stated a minimum size, though we don't like packages too small. They get lost and easily damaged because there is no packing in them.

"We suggest that all parcels be tied with twine. If the parcel gets damaged, the string will hold it together. Gummed tape sometimes dries out and lifts off, especially if the package is shipped in a cold car.

"The correct address is one thing we're always concerned about. We must have the correct postal address, and in metropolitan areas the apartment suite number is getting to be almost a must.

"We also suggest you show a return address inside the package in case the outside label comes off."

Corrugated cardboard, strong brown paper and sufficient packing are also recommended.

Mr. Baker says the post office would be pleased if you never mailed liquids. But if you must, it prefers they be packed with enough absorbent material to absorb all the liquid should its container break.

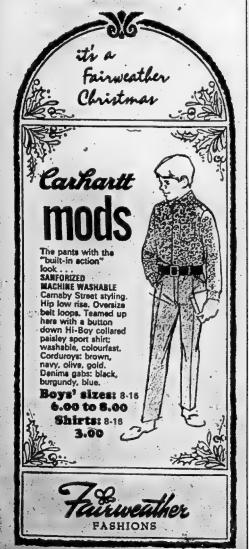
Apples Good Buy For Next Few Weeks

OTTAWA (CP) — If you're sinking some of the family budget into fruit, apples will be a good buy for the next few weeks. There are lots around this year, though the crop wasn't quite as big as last fall.

An apple can afford to be smug, because it's got so many good things about it. A medium one only has about 70 calories. It cleans your teeth and its stimulating juices and bulk aid your digestion.

If your family handles lots of apples, the bushel or half-bushel basket is usually a better buy than the smaller plastic bags. The bags should be stored in the refrigerator, the baskets in a cold storage room at about 40 degrees.



The daddy of all Canadian apples is the McIntosh, which began in 1811 as a wild apple tree on the farm of John McIntosh at Dundela, Ont., just south of Ottawa.

Today 40 per cent of our crop are McIntosh, and 29 other varieties have come from it, including Eastern Canada's cortland and the West's spartan.

These three varieties and lobo, delicious and Northern spy are best for eating raw. To cook, cortlands, spies, gravensteins, winesaps and Rome beauties are all good.

Addict's Newborn Child May Show Symptoms of Withdrawal

MONTREAL (CP)—A woman dope addict who gives birth may produce a child showing symptoms similar to those of an addict undergoing withdrawal from narcotics.

The little-known aspect of addiction was discussed by Dr. Henry Kravitz during a one-day seminar on drug addiction at Montreal's Jewish General Hospital. The doctor, a psychiatrist, specializes in treatment of addicts.

Dr. Kravitz and associate Dr. James Naiman have developed a new treatment unit in which anti-addiction drugs are being employed on patients who seek help at Jewish General.

Dr. Kravitz described what happens to the child, carried by an addict-mother, before it is born.

The baby becomes an addict while in the womb. It absorbs the narcotics from the mother's blood stream. Treatment of the mother has no effect on the child, unless she has been drug-free during the whole of her pregnancy.

The child is born red suddenly its drug supply is cut off. The symptoms are classic: shallow breathing, nausea and vomiting.

Various drugs can be administered in a desperate attempt to prevent death and also to remove the infant's inherited habit. One medication is paregoric, which contains opium.

USE SYNTHETICS

It is relatively easier to "wean" the child from paregoric by carefully reducing dosage. The baby's suffering is strictly proportional to the amount of drugs absorbed by the addict-mother just before delivery.

Dr. Jerome Jaffe, an investigator of drugs and psychiatry at Rockefeller University, talked of his experience with the two new synthetic drugs—methadone and cyclamocine.

The first drug establishes a blockade against narcotics in addition to reducing the addict's hunger for heroin to the point where he no longer feels the effects, Dr. Jaffe said he gets "no kick."

"This drug is safe and non-toxic, so far.

"A trial group of 200 patients taking (methadone) daily are working or going to school with normal functioning."

Japan Asiatic Giant

Twenty - five years have passed since the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor. What is Japan's image today in the lands it occupied before its defeat? How does Japan now look at these countries? Associated Press bureaus around Asia sought the answers. The result of this survey follows.

TOKYO (AP)—Twenty - five years after Pearl Harbor, Japan is again established as a giant among Asian nations, and it wants to be a friendly giant.

Relations with its neighbors range from uncomfortable to cordial. They are steadily improving, with the Second World War fading into the past.

Yet memories of the war and earlier occupations linger in some places. And there is some fear of economic domination by resurgent Japanese industry.

Japan itself is still emerging from the psychological shock of defeat.

It is promoting trade, but underplaying politics. Some critics have speculated Tokyo is peacefully trying to establish the "Greater East Asia Coprosperity Sphere" that Imperial Japan failed to impose by force.

Japan now is offering economic and technical aid to other Asian countries. A Japanese Peace Corps is at work. Government ministers are making regular visits abroad. But Japan has far to go.

Here is a country-by-country rundown of Japan's image in the eyes of other Asians:

PHILIPPINES

The Filipino is gradually losing his hatred of his one-time conquerors. A few pockets of resentment remain. A trade and navigation treaty signed six years ago is blocked by businessmen and politicians who say it would permit cheap Japanese goods to flood the market.

SINGAPORE

Many here still hate the Japanese. Unwritten immigration laws ban any Japanese involved in the occupation from returning. "We could not guarantee their safety," a government official said. "There are still too many people here who remember. They know the names. They can still feel the face slaps."

INDONESIA

Japan is moving fast to gain a foothold in Indonesia. Particularly interested in its oil, logging oil fields, mining and industry, Japan gave Indonesia a $30,000,000 credit this year.

MALAYSIA

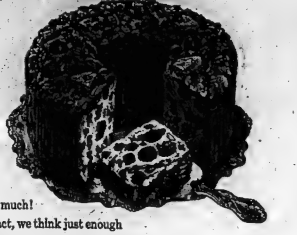
Japanese advertisements flash in Malaysian cities. Japanese traffic includes businessmen, tourists, Peace Corps volunteers, aid missions and night club performers.

NATIONALIST CHINA

The shadow of Communist China darkens relations between Taipei and Tokyo. Trade with Japan and Japanese loans are important factors in Formosa's economy. Contacts are correct, but lack warmth.

SOUTH KOREA

To many Koreans, Japan is still a former enemy and colonial ruler with whom their government restored normal relations just a year ago.



HONG KONG

Japan is Hong Kong's biggest supplier after Communist China. Japanese businessmen say they have experienced no anti-Japanese discrimination in the British colony. But it is generally acknowledged that there is an undercurrent of feeling—possibly minor—among middle-aged residents.

GET FINAL RESULTS

CANBERRA (Reuters) — Final results in Australia's Nov. 26 election showed Tuesday that the ruling Liberal-Country coalition will have 82 seats in Parliament, 10 more than previously. Labor will have 41—11 less than last time—and there will be one independent. Tabulation of the votes took considerable time because Australia uses the preferential voting system under which the voter picks candidates in order of his choice.

Catholic Women Think Divorce Wrong But They Do Not Oppose It for Others

OTTAWA (CP) — The Catholic Women's League of Canada, while reiterating their church's opposition to the principle of divorce, told a parliamentary committee Tuesday that they do not wish to impose their belief on those seeking wider grounds.

In a submission to the special Senate - Commons committee on divorce, the 163,000 - member organization said:

"... while we do not believe in divorce ourselves we cannot expect the laws of this country to be used in such a manner as to prevent those who, unlike ourselves, do not believe that marriage is monogamous and indissoluble, from acting in accordance with their own religious convictions."

The league said it recognizes that some marriages are "a hell on earth," but added "the fact that Parliament has passed laws legalizing divorce and may conceivably pass laws enlarging the grounds for divorce will not alter our belief that a valid marriage cannot be dissolved."

The brief, presented by national president Mrs. H. T. Doohoe of Cornwall, Ont., recommended that other courts be established, as in Nova Scotia, but Brunswick and Newfoundland be empowered to grant judicial separations to couples who did not believe in divorce.

A special section of the court should be set up to deal only with divorce cases, said Francis Carter of London, speaking on the brief.

The brief also recommended pre-marital counselling in the legal, social, biological, financial and other aspects of marriage. It suggested no divorce be granted for from three to five years after the date of the marriage.

Replying to Senator Walter Aseltine (Saskatchewan) who said that one-third of divorces granted by Parliament were given to Roman Catholics, Mr. Carter said that Catholics appealed for divorce to get the civil protection it gave.

In some cases a marriage had been annulled by the church, but in order to remarry Catholics had to apply for civil divorce.

A brief from the 100,000-member Canadian Mental Health Association was presented by national President Gowan Guest, a Vancouver lawyer.

The brief said "chronic unsoundness of mind" as grounds for divorce no longer has medical meaning, because of the difficulty of determining whether a mental illness was incurable, thus preventing the patient from ever living at home.

Meet the Mekong Delta Monster

A patrol air cushion vehicle (PACV) searching for Viet Cong in South Viet Nam's Mekong Delta skims along the Plain of Reeds during Operation Quai Vat. The U.S. Navy PACV, based on the British "hovercraft," rides on a 4½-foot air cushion created by a fan inside and moves forward by force of a propellor in its tail. It can move forward at speeds up to 65 miles an hour. Three of the vehicles were used in the operation. Viet Cong in the reeds screamed "quai Vat" (monster) when it approached. Many surrendered. Medicare Debate Over

OTTAWA (CP) — Just about everyone was happy in the Commons Tuesday when the government's medical care insurance plan—with an important last-minute change—got by its last major hurdle.

Only third and final reading, usually a routine formality, remained today after MPs concluded clause-by-clause study of the plan which is to start no later than July 1, 1968.

After the bill gets third reading and goes on to the Senate, the Commons starts debate on another hot potato—unification of the armed forces.

In the six days of detailed study on the medical care bill, the opposition dwelt on the need to include in the plan additional medical services provinces may want to cover.

Health Minister MacEachen met those demands with his amendment to allow provinces, with the consent of cabinet, to add the services of optometrists, chiropractors and others.

Mr. MacEachen, who threatened to resign from cabinet when the government decided to delay the plan's start by one year, also wore a big smile at debate's end.

PAYS HALF

Under the legislation, the federal government will pay half the cost of provincial medical care programs that are universal, provide a wide range of physicians' services, are portable, and operated by provincial organizations.

Cost to the federal treasury will depend on how many provinces take advantage of the plan. One estimate is $40,000,000 in the first year.

Opposition to the legislation centred earlier on charges the government was imposing its own brand of medical care on the provinces without consultation.

It also was argued that individuals were losing their freedom of choice and fears were expressed that Canada didn't have enough medical personnel or facilities to make the plan work.

The amendment paving the way for additional services was welcomed warmly by opposition spokesmen. It showed the government was listening to constructive suggestions, said one Conservative MP.

Mr. MacEachen hoped a first effect would be his recommendation to include dental surgeons.

Dr. F. B. Nyrard (PC—Simcoe East) said the amendment "meets in part our contention the provinces must be allowed to exercise their inherent rights in the field of health."

New Democratic Leader Douglas didn't want to be "a spoilsport." But he said he would prefer to see the bill state that optometrists, physiotherapists, podiatrists, osteopaths and chiropractors would be covered under the plan.

"I would make a special plea that optometric services be included because of the importance of these services to children and elderly people," he said.

Social Credit Leader Thompson said he hopes steps will be taken soon to include the other services.

Charles - Arthur Gauthier (Crediliste-Roberval) said the change gave the provinces their proper authority over health matters.

Mr. MacEachen rejected opposition suggestions that the federal government contribute half of the administrative costs of the provincial programs. These are to be borne by the provinces alone.

He also turned down a plea that the federal contribution to each province be based on the actual per capita cost in that province.

Under the plan, Ottawa will pay 50 per cent of the average cost of participating provinces.

Opposition spokesmen said this meant that some provinces, such as Ontario, would receive less than half their costs while others would get much more than 50 per cent.

Mr. MacEachen said this had been considered. But provinces getting more than half of their costs were those needing the extra help.

With the medical care debate all but out of the way, the Commons put on a burst of speed and zipped through a number of non-controversial items.

It gave second and third readings to bills designed to define more accurately the borders between Manitoba and Saskatchewan, and Saskatchewan and the Northwest Territories.

The Commons also approved the spending of $22,500,000 for wheat and flour to help combat the famine in India.

Old Age Pension Law Reserved Quebec Right to Take Control

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Daniel Johnson of Quebec said Tuesday night his province has every constitutional right to take over control of old age security within its borders.

He called on the opposition Liberal party and MPs from the province to join his Union Nationale government in backing the transfer of old age security to provincial from federal administration.

If Ottawa persisted in its "paternalistic federalism, there remains the political force expressed by the legislative assembly, or elections or referendum."

The premier told the legislature there is no question of an election now in Quebec and "the referendum is an efficient means of feeling the public's pulse when we want to separate an issue from all other considerations."

Legislation providing for referendums is included in the bills promised for the current session of the Quebec legislature.

So is the transfer of old age security to provincial hands. This point came under attack from Opposition Leader Jean Lesage at the Tuesday sitting and Mr. Johnson made most of his remarks as part of his reply to the Liberal chief.

Mr. Lesage said that if Quebec went ahead with its transfer plan, and the federal government refused to transfer jurisdiction and the equivalent fiscal amounts, Quebecers might be subject to a system of double taxation and double benefits.

The premier answered that Ottawa could not refuse the transfer of jurisdiction. Quebec had been to it that writing into the laws allowing the federal government to administer old age pensions were provisions reserving to the province future rights of action in the field—and with full financial compensation if it chose to withdraw from the federal program.

He said previous paid under a future Quebec - administered old age security plan would be fully portable throughout Canada.

In other legislative business, Mr. Johnson refused to allow first reading for a private bill sponsored by Mr. Lesage providing abolition of the legislative council, Quebec's upper house.

The opposition leader launched an attack on the government, saying the Union Nationale was dressing up an new a series of policies long planned and announced by the Liberals before their electoral defeat last June.

Even the old age pension transfer was established Liberal policy which had not been implemented because of technical difficulties.

Safe-driving Week Toll At Least 64

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Safe - Driving Week across Canada moves into its final day today with at least 64 persons killed in traffic since the week began Thursday, one fewer than in the same period last year.

A Canadian Press survey from 12:01 a.m. to midnight Tuesday showed two road deaths for the day, one each in Alberta and Ontario.

Three provinces, Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia, have reported no traffic fatalities so far during the week. Quebec and Ontario, however, have each recorded 20 road deaths in the last six days.

An average of 30 persons have died in traffic during Safe-Driving Week during the last 10 years. A total of 76 died Dec. 3-7, 1965.

The Canadian Highway Safety Council, which sponsors Safe-Driving Week, this year made no prediction of the likely toll and added that Safe-Driving Week is not a contest to bring the actual number of deaths below the number anticipated.

"Safe-Driving Week is designed to focus national and local public attention on the means to reduce highway death and suffering throughout the year. . . ," a council statement said.

'Youth Operation' Proves Failure

MONTREAL (CP) — Mrs. Edith Serel, a Montreal beautician, and Dr. Jean Cruz, of Paris, Tuesday was ordered to pay $1,200 damages to a woman who suffered a face infection after she underwent what was called a youth operation in September, 1962.

The damages included the $200 fee for the treatment undergone by Mrs. Ruth Goldman, 45.

In his judgment, Mr. Justice Arthur L. Smith of Quebec Superior Court said evidence had left no doubt that the staphylococcus infection suffered by Mrs. Goldman was a direct result of the defendants' treatment.

The treatment involved the use of a specially - designed needle to pull threads under the skin surface at wrinkle sites on the cheeks and forehead.

Evidence had shown the treatment was carried out by Dr. Cruz in the presence of Mrs. Serel and others, all dressed in street clothes, and that no measures were taken to ensure antiseptic conditions.

Dr. Martin Entin, a plastic surgeon who treated Mrs. Goldman for several months, testified that the introduction of a foreign substance under the skin "was a serious matter comparable to a surgical operation and should have been accompanied by the exercise of medical safeguards against infection, as are commonly provided in the practice of surgery."

Who Erased RCAF Tag?

OTTAWA (CP)—Who took the words "Royal Canadian Air Force" off a twin-engine Expediter and substituted the words "Canadian Armed Forces"?

Defence Minister Hellyer said in the Commons Tuesday he doesn't know who did it, but he promised to try to find out.

"I presume someone on the staff is doing a little praiseworthy planning," he told Robert McCleave (PC—Halifax).

Mr. McCleave brought the matter up in the question period, and although he did not say where the aircraft was based or what it was used for, he was explicit in its identification. He said it was "C-45 Expediter aircraft No. 2368."

Police Tell of Using Listening Devices

VANCOUVER (CP) — Commissioner R. A. Bergard says he will rule today on whether tape recordings made during the electronic bugging of a union convention will be played before a royal commission.

If they are, he said, they probably will be heard in secret session.

"I don't want to pass up anything that can be held to be evidence or would be of any use in arriving at our conclusions," said the retired county court judge, appointed by Premier W. A. C. Bennett as a one-man royal commission to look into the bugging of a convention of the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada.c

Counsel for the union earlier indicated his clients did not want the tapes replayed.

Three policemen gave evidence Tuesday that they had used electronic listening devices during investigations.

Detectives Kristian Johannson and Melvin Sporteroad of the Vancouver city police said they had received no special training in the use of the devices, and had "just picked it up."

Cpl. Al Richards of the RCMP said he had undergone a two-week training course and had used the devices in Vancouver.

Commission Counsel George Murray said at the conclusion of Det. Johannson's evidence that he intends to call Police Chief Ralph Booth to testify on all aspects of eavesdropping in Vancouver.

Cpl. Richards said in evidence that private detective Weldon Graham, who allegedly did the bugging of the convention, had been dishonorably discharged from the RCMP.

Cpl. Richards and Inspector David MacLeod of the transport department told of visiting a room at a downtown hotel after listening devices had been found by convention delegates. They seized electronic equipment, tapes and notebooks.

Cpl. Richards testified Graham told him he was doing some work for the security and intelligence branch of the RCMP.

"I said: 'You're kidding'," said Cpl. Richards.

"He said then he wasn't actually working for the branch, but that he was doing some work that could be useful to them."

Graham has stated he was paid to spy on the convention by Pat O'Neal, organizer for the rival International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers, and that he was introduced to Mr. O'Neal by two members of the RCMP security and intelligence branch.

Mr. O'Neal has admitted paying Graham for information on the convention, but has denied he knew Graham planned to use electronic devices.

First evidence Tuesday came from the city pathologist, Dr. T. R. Harmon, who testified that Lloyd Craig, president of the Canadian union, had died during the convention of a heart attack.

He said the attack was spontaneous and inevitable.

Mini-skirt for Males

If women can wear trousers, why can't men wear mini-skirts a Germany men's wear shop reasons. Mini-skirted male model at right dances with female counterpart at showing in Munich. The fashion drew mixed reactions, horror and admiration at the style show, but a street test showed most of the public wasn't quite ready for it. Passersby laughed and shook their heads. Batman Spoils Election

GAINESVILLE, Ga. (AP) Batman, Georgia's caped crusader, held the balance of power in a city commission race, all because someone put his name on a write-in ballot.

Amused officials counted the votes in an election Tuesday for city commissioner three times and each time got the same results.

Candidates Howard James and Joseph Stargel each received 674 votes and there was one write-in vote for Batman. The votes were made official.

City Attorney William Gaer said he will have to do some extensive research in law books to find an answer to the problem.

Canada Annoys Chinese

HONK KONG (CP)—Indignation has been the reaction by both Nationalist and Communist Chinese to Canada's "One China, One Formosa' proposal in the United Nations.

A left-wing newspaper here observed acidly that on the basis of the Canadian proposal, External Affairs Minister Martin should be sponsoring UN membership for Quebec.

The comment indicates that, if nothing else, the Chinese in both camps are well aware of Canadian moves to obtain a UN seat for Communist China while permitting Nationalist China to retain its membership as the representative of Formosa.

Overlooked here, however, is the fact that Canada put forward the suggestion only as an interim solution.

Both the Nationalists and Communists look on Formosa as part of China proper. Thus Canada has made both sides angry at the same time.

Meanwhile, there is uneasiness here but no pronounced alarm about the Communist-inspired riots in the Portuguese colony of Macao, 35 miles away by boat.

The new Portuguese governor of the colony made a recent speech in which he declared he wouldn't accept any "foreign" interference.

The Chinese therefore manufactured a riot just to make it clear that the Portuguese continue to occupy Macao on their sufferance alone.

Carols for Christmas

Choral Singers Tune Up for Holiday Season

If you spot a familiar face on television this year singing Christmas carols don't be too surprised.

A group of 45 Belleville and district songsters will be appearing on the Kingston television station Sunday, Dec. 18 at 6:30 p.m. and Saturday, Dec. 24 at 8 p.m.

The Belleville Choral Society, a full-fledged independent chorus of men and women gathered from the city and surrounding area, has been performing locally since being formed in September, 1960.

Led by Miss Phyllis May, supervisor of music for the Belleville public school system, the choir just completed a concert at Eastminster United Church.

The group is also preparing for an appearance next April as part of a three-day Arts Festival at Centennial School, sponsored by the Belleville Centennial Commission.

The society was formed by Miss May, and with her as director and S. Alec Gordon as accompanist, the choir has performed Handel's "Messiah" and Mendelssohn's "Elijah." In addition, the choir has appeared in recitals both locally and on television.

A spokesman for the group, Murray Irwin, stresses the point that the choir is an independent organization.

"We are completely independent," he said, "and draw our membership from the whole city and area — we have three members from Trenton right now and have had some from Picton.

"Because we practices at Bridge St. United Church, people often think we are connected with them, but we aren't connected with any church in the city.

"We do however perform at many of the churches and certainly enjoy doing so."

There's no secret to the rising popularity of the group. It's simply good leadership and hard work. But as one member put it, "When the music starts, and the audience waits in anticipation, you get the feeling you'll give a good performance and it makes all the hard work turn into fond memories."

Foley Has Had to Change With Times

Successor to a business operation which had its beginning more than a century ago, the Foley Supply and Machine Co. Ltd., on Wallbridge Crescent believes in keeping up with the times.

And ability to change with the times is possibly one of the main reasons for it's continued success.

At least the company's function today bears little relation to the original foundry and blacksmith operation of earlier years.

Now the emphasis is on machine lathe work, steel fabrication and distribution of welding gases and hydraulic equipment.

To better take care of machine work requirements of customers all the way from Toronto to Kingston and Smiths Falls, the company recently installed two costly lathes imported from Poland.

The lathes, one with a 100 inch bed and the other 80 inches, are largely automatic in operation and of a quality seldom seen in jobbing shops.

Older residents of the city will remember the Foley operation as the Belleville Fruit Machinery Company Ltd. and Walker Foundry.

Actually the Foley family has been associated with the business only since World War 1 but the present company manager, Frank W. Foley, is a fifth generation foundryman.

However the firm is no longer in the foundry business and Mr. Foley says he should have gotten out of this phase of the operation many years ago.

Until only six years ago Foley's were on Front Street. Their old three-story stone landmark building in downtown Belleville was built as a water-powered grist mill back in 1834.

It continued as a grist mill until about 1855 when it was taken over by the Patterson family and operated as a foundry and in the manufacture of agricultural implements.

Purchased by the Walker firm in the 1890's the firm continued in the same field and later became known as the Walker Foundry.

The late J. C. McCarthy owned the foundry when in 1927 it was purchased by the present owner's father, Frank B. Foley, in partnership with R. J. Graham. The firm then became known as the Belleville Fruit Machinery Co. Ltd. and Walker Foundry and turned out fruit processing and dehydrating equipment used by Mr. Graham's large canning factory operations.

The Foley family had emigrated from Ireland to New York State and later established a fruit machinery company at Ingersoll turning out equipment patented by Mr. Foley.

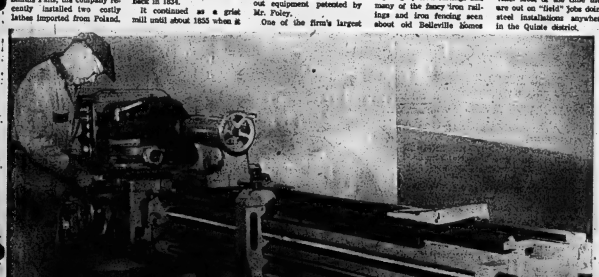
One of the firm's largest customers was the R. J. Graham Company in Belleville so Mr. Foley moved his operation to this city where he went into partnership with Mr. Graham.

Mr. Foley later became the sole owner but the name Belleville Fruit Machinery Company Ltd. and Walker Foundry was retained until 1947.

Burglars were responsible for the 1900 fire which destroyed the old Front Street landmark. Safecrackers used a company-owned acetylene torch to open the vault door and in doing so set fire to the building.

Drawings and patterns for "some of the fastest apple processing equipment ever built" were lost in the blaze, according to Mr. Foley.

After World War I the firm switched to a full time foundry operation specializing in grey iron castings and many of the fancy iron railings and iron fencing seen about old Belleville homes and yards was made at the Fruit Machinery Co. plant.



In the late 1950's the firm bowed out of the foundry business and now carries on an extremely diversified operation ranging from general machine repairs and machine lathe work to steel fabrication of all kinds.

It also acts as distributing agent for compressed welding gases and is area distributor for Ethex hydraulic hoist equipment.

So Foley's has changed with the times, but their success contradicts the modern day thinking that a business has to expand to stay alive.

A century ago the old Walker Foundry employed about 60 persons. Today the working force at Foley's is still about that figure.

And many of this number actually don't work in Belleville. Most of the time they are out on "field" jobs doing steel installations anywhere in the Quinte district.

Guiding Dynamic, Groping, Students 'Best Job in World'

Although Belleville is reasonably free of deliquency problems, as a small city it does have all the problems known to man.

And as a high school principal, Moira Secondary's Linton Read is in a position to know. In a talk to fellow Rotarians yesterday Mr. Read spoke of problems which crop up among any large aggregation of people.

But despite the never-ending responsibilities Mr. Read was able to say as an educator and principal of a composite school: "I happen to have the best job in the world."

"It is my vocation to work closely with young people — youngsters bursting with energy, mischief and a cheerful joie de vivre that keeps one alive and young in spirit, and who also are the potential leaders, professional men and even criminals of tomorrow.

"It is a sobering thought this concentrated potential will be released positively, passively or negatively, depending to a great extent on what we do for them in our secondary schools today."

Mr. Read said the modern school principal was faced with a curriculum and timetable of a complexity that his predecessors even 20 years ago would have found incomprehensible.

"The principal no longer can retreat into the sanctuary of superior and unquestioned knowledge and command. He's, instead, subject to tremendous pressures from parents, students, board, department of education and the public at large.

Mr. Read said that to tour his school and see it in action was a moving experience for a principal.

"I forget the problem child, the indifferent child. I forget the maze of administrative detail on my desk, phone calls from distressed or annoyed parents. I only remember that as a principal having in my trust the welfare of this great herd of dynamic, groping, learning citizens of tomorrow I have the best job in the world."

Mr. Read was introduced by Bill Kelsey and thanked by Mac Smith.

BOBBY HOYLE — GRANT HAGERMAN

Years before the reportorial pats took on the physical attributes of a cue-ball, I remember seeing posters that announced "Join the Navy and See the World."

It is different now. The younger fry of today can glimpse the globe by parts from the saion of a trans-world jet aircraft or the parlor car of a diesel-powered hotel.

Better yet, if a young chap possesses marked hockey ability he can join a European club, play his favorite sport and see two-thirds of a continent while getting paid for the junkets.

Take the case of Bobby Boyle and Grant Hagerman, Belleville and Stirling's nomads of the ice lanes who are displaying their wares under the colors of the South Hertogenbosch club of Holland.

These fine young athletes who are too busy scoring goals to plug holes in dykes with their fingers have made a decided hit with the fans of the Dutch town which entered a club in international competition this year for the first time.

In fact Bobby and Grant are staging a scoring race of their own, Bobby having 32 at the moment with Grant trailing by one.

In a letter to this department the boys state they are having a wonderful time and a more wonderful experience.

"We have played in four countries thus far," they write, "France, Belgium, Germany and Holland and expect to see many more."

"We have played first division teams from Finland, Switzerland and Czechoslovakia. Finland used three national players with the Swiss and Czechs using six each, so you see we have played some very good teams."

The boys say they find the European passing and skating very good but they pass too much in the opposing end.

The boys have been the mainstays in their club's reaching the top of their league and the "Pinch Cup" symbolic of being the best first division club in the country. The team is in second place in the running for the "Cup Internationale" which goes to the top first division club in Holland and Belgium.

The rest of the boys' letter speaks for itself. Here tis:

"Outside of play for the cups all other games are exhibitions. We use only ten players and a spare goalkeeper. We find the going hard at times.

"When not playing we usually train and have a few days off. We have a very nice rink and the best of equipment. We have played sixteen games, winning eight, losing six and tieing two."

"Spectator-wise we find that the most of them here do no know the game and its fine points but the fans usually applaud when either team makes a good play or scores."

"We have played a few games in outdoor rinks and find it very annoying at times. The crowds sometimes are disappointing because the game is new here but those that do come, on the whole, are very good."

"One bad factor in European hockey is the refereeing, especially in Holland. It is actually pitiful at times."

"We both blip out at times officiating at minor games. Bob has got a licence from the Nederland Ice Hockey Federation to officiate at international games and usually does one game a week."

"And so a Merry Christmas to you and all our friends in Belleville and Stirling."

The boys can be reached at "57 Koestraat, Den Bosch, Holland, c/o Mr. Merkx."

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

New York Rangers have reduced their casualty list to one.

The Rangers say Jean Ratelle is ready to return to action, leaving Red Berenson as the only player out of the club's lineup.

Ratelle, 26, who underwent spinal fusion surgery in April, is expected to be in the lineup tonight when the Rangers are hosts to Boston Bruins in one of two schedule National Hockey League games.

The league - leading Toronto Maple Leafs, who have had five wins in their last six starts and only one loss in their last eight games, clash with fourth-place Montreal Canadiens at Montreal in the other game.

Ratelle, a native of Lake St. John, Que., is expected to be given spot assignments at first. He was the club's highest scorer last season with 21 goals and 30 assists for 51 points in 67 games.

FRANCIS HAS PROBLEM

Emile Francis, coach and general manager of the Rangers, would have to give up some winning combinations that have put the club in third place if he were to put Ratelle in the regular lineup.

Berenson, who went to the Rangers in a trade with the Canadiens, is still nursing a broken bone in his foot and will probably be sidelined at least two more weeks. In nine games with the Rangers this year he has two assists.

Rod Gilbert, Ratelle's Pembina linemate, is expected to play tonight despite an injury to his right ankle. He was hit by a stick in a game against Detroit Red Wings in mid-November and now bursitis has been diagnosed.

The Rangers are unbeaten in five games with the Bruins this season, winning two and tying three.

The slumping Bruins, who have lost four of their last five games, suffered a crippling blow when rookie sensation Bobby Orr tore the ligaments in his left knee against the Maple Leafs Sunday.

MAY MISS THREE WEEKS

The 18-year-old defenceman, a solid performer for the Bruins with six goals and seven assists in 19 games, may be lost to the Bruins for three weeks.

The Leafs haven't lost a game against the Canadiens so far this year. They have three victories and a tie.

The Leafs took over first place on the strength of three wins last week, including last Wednesday's 3-2 victory over Montreal.

Punch Imlach, coach and general manager of the Leafs, has been using four forward lines and intends to operate the same way tonight.

The most productive combination has been centre Dave Keon, left winger Frank Mahovlich and right-winger Jim Pappin. Keon has six goals and 12 assists, Mahovlich has eight goals and five assists and Pappin has four goals and two assists.

Red Kelly, in his 20th NHL season, is also doing a good job of centring for wingers Bob Ellis and Larry Jeffrey. Kelly has six goals and nine assists while Ellis has six, goals and the same number of assists. Jeffrey has three goals and eight assists.

The Leafs aren't counting on defencemen Allan Stanley and Kent Douglas for tonight's game. Douglas has a broken thumb and Stanley suffered rib injuries Saturday.

The Canadiens, who defeated Chicago Black Hawks 3-1 Saturday and then downed the Rangers 3-1 Sunday, got some encouragement when star centre and captain Jean Beliveau scored his first goal of the season against the Hawks. Beliveau had been hampered early in the season with injuries and it took him 14 games to score.

Junior 'A'

London Wins 5 In Row

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—London Nationals won their fifth straight Ontario Hockey Association Junior 'A' game Tuesday night defeating Kitchener Rangers 7-4.

The Rangers struck quickly with goals by Jim Krulickland Sheldon Kannegaieser in the first four and one-half minutes of play.

Nats recovered with five successive goals before the period ended to take a lead that was never seriously threatened.

D Frenchman Jim Dorey scored twice for London, and Brian Murphy, Stan Allan, Jim Stanfield, John Mercer and Moe St. Jacques got the singles.

Ron Gratton and Kannegaieser completed the Kitchener scoring.

Referee John McCauley, of Brampton, assessed 11 penalties, six of them to London.

Poles Lose To All-Stars

CHICOUTIMI, Que. (CP)—An all - star team from the Saguenay - Lake St. John Senior Amateur Hockey League defeated Poland's national hockey club 4-2 in an exhibition game before an estimated 5,000 fans Tuesday night.

The loss was the Polish club's first in four games since it arrived in Canada last Friday.

Poland will play its next game Tuesday at Sault Ste. Marie, Ont. In previous games in Canada, the Polish club played in 3-3 tie in Gander, Nfld., last Friday and tied 7-7 Monday night at Fredericton, N.B. The Poles won 7-3 in St. John's, Nfld., Saturday.

Aces Whip Rochester

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Skip Sutherland scored three goals Tuesday night as Quebec Aces whipped Rochester Americans 4-1 for their second American Hockey League victory over the Amerks in three nights. It was the only game on the AHL schedule.

Neither Gordon Labossiere nor Wayne Hicks — co - leaders in the AHL individual scoring race—contributed a point to the Quebec attack. Hicks was tossed out of the game, along with Rochester's Bronco Horvath, after a first-period stick-swinging fight.

But Sutherland scored twice in the first period and again late in the second. In between, Rochester defenceman Harry Sly and Quebec's Simon Nolet scored in the second.

The Aces, who trimmed Rochester 8-3 last Sunday night, now lead the league's Eastern Division by three points. The Amerks remain in a first-place deadlock with Pittsburgh in the Western Division race.

Aces Win Battle-Marred Thriller

By GARRY ALEXANDER
Staff Sportswriter

A three-goal explosion rid-ing through the third period paved the way for Kingston Aces' hard-fought 5-3 OHA Senior "A" decision over a battling Belleville Mo-Hawk club here last night.

And battle the Mo-Hawks did until a final-minute mark-er into the empty net sealed their doom at 19:32. Coach Floyd Crawford had six for-wards fighting for the equalizer at the time.

The victory was Kingston's first in three trys against Belleville and boosted the Aces into a third-place tie with the Oak Hornets.

The Mo-Hawks are in sixth place, two points behind Guelph and two ahead of the Orillia club they meet here Friday. Last night Orillia de-feated Woodstock 5-4.

It was a typical Kingston-Belleville affair played be-fore about 1,100 roaring fans.

They saw the Mo-Hawks twice grab the lead only to have the Aces strike back quickly to tie, Kingston out-shot the losers 31-25.

Each side scored once in the first and that's the way it stayed through a second period highlighted by a free-swinging donnybrook.

Mo-Hawk Bob Taylor and Kingston's Bob Olajos traded some hefty blows until they fell to the ice at 8:26. They were just settling into the penalty box with majors when words led to a resump-tion of the fight.

A police officer seated be-tween the two big men at-tempted to separate them and Olajos shoved him out the second row over the boards into the arms of other mill-ing players.

Kingston's Bill Burega spotted Taylor stop Olajos in the box and speared the Mo-Hawk with his stick. Gary Greadahl tore into Burega; other players were shoving and fans reached over the boards to grab at Kingston players.

When peace was restored, Taylor and Olajos had mi-nor coldwork tacked on while Burega and Greadahl drew fighting majors. It was rough throughout but they were the game's final penalties.

Minnie Menard's second goal snapped the 2-1 tie at 5.56 of the third when he'de-flected home Gary Darling's hard shot after Baker started the play. The lead was short-lived. Ron Earl took Wes-tern Assistant uncovered in front of the net and plucked it in a corner at 7.22.

Two minutes later, defence-man Dennis Kearns, one of the best Aces, ripped a blaz-ing 30-footer home off Led-ger. Doucet's glove to shove Kingston ahead for the first time.

Doucet appeared to have

MINNIE MENARD

BOB TAYLOR

charlie Convery's backhand flip at 11.30 but it trickled off his arm for a 4-2 lead.

Working hard to stay alive, the Mo-Hawks brought the crowd to its feet at 14.18 when Rob McAlpine slapped home Ralph Plane's behind-the-net passout.

Crawford went with five forwards from the 17-minute mark out, using Taylor and Wayne Brown on the points, and lifted Doucet for a sixth forward at 18.34. Taylor's point shot was intercepted by Bob Collins who gunned it into the empty cage from his own blueline.

Back in the first, Menard took Darling's pass and beat Tom Mercer from a tough angle at 15.54 with "Shaker" Baker also assisting. Jim Sprott got the equalizer at 18.14 by deflecting John Ford's shot. Doucet had no chance on the deflection.

Twice in the period and at least four times on the night, the Aces' Pete Weston appear-ed to have a goal in the bag only to be beaten at the last second.

Both teams played strongly until they reached the oppos-ing net area. Once there, they lacked the finishing touch until the third period. Collins, Kearns, Weston, Mc-Alpine and McConnell missed on golden opportunities. Dou-cet once lost both gloves and his stick, and on another oc-casion his stick, bet managed to keep the puck out with some help from his mates.

Kingston was penalized early for not starting their officially listed lineup. Dave Jones was listed to start, but did not show up. Coach Danny McLeod later said Jones was ill and phoned to report just as the game started. McLeod called the win "Our best team effort since early in the season".

Belleville's Bob McAlpine received the O'Keefe Player of the Month Award for Novem-ber between periods.

Pirates Building 1967 Flagship; Raid Mets' Lair For Mound Buccaneers

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pittsburgh Pirates have acquired pitcher Deanis Ribant from New York Mets, pulling off their third major trade in a week in an all-out effort to fashion a pennant-winner in 1967.

Ribant, a right-hander who was the Mets' top pitcher with an 11-9 mark and 3.23 earned run average, and outfielder Gary Kolb came to Pittsburgh Tuesday in exchange for veteran pitcher Don Cardwell and outfielder Don Bosch. Cardwell was 6-6 in 22 games.

"Ribant is the man we wanted," said Pirate general manager Joe L. Brown.

Ribant, a native of Detroit, had a hockey background before he signed with Milwaukee Braves. He played left wing with Burlington Industrials, an Ontario Hockey Association Junior B club, and then went to Hamilton Red Wings of the OHA Junior A series in 1959-61.

The Ribant trade completments two other exchanges which appear to have considerably strengthened Pittsburgh, which faltered at the end of the season and was eliminated in the last few days, finishing third behind pennant - winning Los Angeles Dodgers and San Francisco Giants.

Last week Brown got pitcher Juan Pizarro from Chicago White Sox for cash and shortstop Maury Wills from Los Angeles for third baseman Bob Bailey and infielder Gene Michael.

But Brown, the man who engineered all three deals, isn't making any 1967 predictions.

"I think it's hard to win in the winter," Brown said, "We had a fine year last year and we hope to have a better year in 1967."

In analyzing the 1966 season, Brown said the Pirates main problem was pitching. Pizarro is to use Pizarro as a starter with the hope that Ribant can break into rotation.

Brown also added the Pirates are still willing to trade.

Plainfield Wins First In CHHL

Plainfield chalked up its first victory of the Centre Hastings Hockey League schedule last night but the cellar - dwelling Thomasburg Thunderbirds were not so fortunate.

Frankford Shoemen whipped Thomasburg 13-2 while Plainfield nipped the second - place Tyrahoe Knights 3-2 in a double - header at Madoc.

Gary Ray's second goal of the game, and the only one of the third period, snapped a 2-2 deadlock for Plainfield's triumph. Don Reid triggered the other marker.

Marvin Reid and Dale Benson were Ivanhoe's marksmen. The Knights missed taking over first place with the defeat.

The league's top two scorers, a pair of brothers from Frankford, had a field day in the Shoemen's lop - sided victory.

Bob Chesser scored six goals and assisted on two others to increase his scoring lead. He has 13 and 7 for 20 points. Brother Bill fired four goals and gained three assists to take over second place with 34 points. Glen Houlden, Ivan Smith and Bob Wright also scored.

Don Henderson and Richard Morton replied for the Thunderbirds who have yet to pick up a point in the standings.

It was confirmed that ice is again ready for play in Stirling. A postponed game between Wallbridge and Glen Ross will be played there Thursday, at 8.00 p.m.

CELEBRATE VICTOR

BOMBAY (AP) — Asia's largest bronze statue, 22 feet tall, was unveiled by Indian Defence Minister Y. B. Chavan before 250,000 spectators. The equestrian monument is of Shivaji, founder of the Maratha empire, who broke the power of the Mogul emperor of India in the 17th century.

ANDY CAPP

Letter to the Sports Editor

On Thursday night of last week I witnessed one of the most disgusting examples of behavior I have ever seen. I play in the Gas House League at the Memorial Arena and quite often stay and watch the Mo-Hawks practice from 11.30 on.

As I was watching them being strenuously put through their paces I overheard a stream of profane abuse being directed at their coach. The fellows responsible work at the arena. One wearing a red jacket and sporting long ringlets, I didn't recognize, but he was the leading figure. The statements and words they used were such that no man under any circumstances could remain indifferent. After half an hour Floyd finally showed agitation when his antagonist interspersed their comments with reference to the drubbings the Mo-Hawks suffered up west. Washing the boards he headed towards the mouthy rink-rats who immediately forgot their bravado and took flight. The team gathered around and voiced their support for the coach and displeasure at the conduct of the brave boys heading out the door.

As far as I'm concerned, Floyd and the boys are a great team. They have their ups and downs but on the whole are worthy representatives of the city of Belleville. I'm not a season ticket-holder but I usually scrape up a $1.25 when its hockey night in town.

I think that if the team has will enough to win and wants at it in the form of practices that late in the evening; they should be allowed ice-time free of such agitation in the future.

The arena management should guarantee that much — at least.

NO TAKERS FOR LINE

MULHOUSE (AP) — There were no takers for the Maginot line when the French government auctioned off old military equipment of 1940 vintage. There were no bids from 700 people present for steel gun cupolas from the fortress net work but nine old motorcycles went for $170 and 18 mobile kitchens for $15 each.

Tyke Goalies Bar the Door, Five Shutouts

The Belleville Minor Hockey Associations tyke division had five shutouts last night despite the fact only four games were played.

The Beavers and Mohawks battled to a scoreless draw. Terry Potter claimed the Mohawk goose - egg and Bill Whyte equalled his feat in the Barons net.

Hawks whitewashed Canadiens 4-0, Bruins blanked Leafs 3-0 and Wings shutout Rangers 2-0 in the other games, it was a great night for the goalies!

Brian Coughlan had the Wings' shutout, Robert Haggarty the Bruins' and Stephen London the Hawks'.

David Elmy scored three times for the Bruins with John Bracken and Gilbert Grant getting loners.

Michael Burke and Raymond Gee were the Wings' marksmen.

Scott Langman, Allan Mc-Inroy, Andrew Lapensee and John Jianopoulos triggered the Hawks' goals. Assists were given to McInroy, Roger Sudard and Peter Hall.

The Handguns

Members of the Quinte Marksmen handgun club sharpened up their eyes for the annual Christmas shoot last night. Louis Kuiper led the pack with a 247 score, followed by Cliff Smith and Dick Charlton, each with 232. Frank Allin had 216 and Ray Read 207.

The club's Christmas shoot will be held in the Belleville Armouries on Tuesday, December 20. Regular shoots are held each Tuesday.

Sinden Sends Orr To Hospital

BOSTON (CP-AP) — Coach Harry Sinden says he plans to put Bobby Orr, Boston's 18-year-old rookie defenceman, in hospital this weekend when the Bruins start a five-day road trip.

Sinden said Tuesday night he did not want Orr to be alone while the rest of the team was away. Orr suffered a strained ligament in his left knee during a National Hockey League game against Toronto Sunday night.

Orr, who received a reported $40,000 two - year contract to turn pro, was hurt in the second period when checked against the boards by Toronto defenceman Marcel Pronovost. The leg injury may keep him out of action for at least three weeks. He was ordered to use crutches.

The Parry Sound, Ont., native is one of the Bruins' leading scorers with six goals and seven assists in 19 games.

The fifth-place Bruins were beaten by the Maple Leafs 8-3 Sunday.

With the loss of Orr, Sinden has made some changes in an effort to smooth out the team's off-and-on offensive punch.

Sinden has reunited Murray Oliver and Johnny Bucyk on a line with Johnny McKenzie.

Sinden said he would try out the new alignment in Boston's battle tonight with the red-hot Rangers at New York and back home again Thursday night against Chicago.

"Our offence hasn't been consistent," Sinden said. "Separating Bucyk and Oliver hasn't worked. Maybe they can get going now that they are back together again."

Sinden kept the line of Ron Murphy, Ron Shock and Wayne Connelly intact, but moved Bobby Dillabough back with Ron Stewart and Pit Martin in another defensive switch.

Sinden also moved Eddie Westfall to defence, but said this was only precautionary.

"We have five defencemen ready for New York," he said, "but in the event of an emergency, I want Westfall to be familiar with the defensive assignments."

The Bruins announced that rookie defenceman Ron Buchanan was returned to Oklahoma City in the Central League as Boston trimmed to the 18-player limit.

National Football

Honors Are Divided!

NEW YORK (AP)—San Francisco 49ers and Washington Redskins have the best pass blocking and St. Louis Cardinals and Dallas Cowboys have the best pass rush, National Football League statistics show.

The 49ers and Redskins are tops in the league in keeping their quarterbacks from being thrown for a loss. Each has had its passer dumped 22 times for total losses of 181 yards.

The Cardinals and Cowboys have smeared the enemy passer 49 times each, but Cards have the edge in yards of losses —407 to 337.

While Green Bay Packers attempt to clinch the Western Conference title Saturday at Baltimore, they will have a slight edge in the rush-protection figures. The Packers' quarterback has been dumped only 11 times while the Colts' passer has been thrown 27 times. Green Bay's rush has dumped the Colts' team's passer 40 times for 314 yards to 38 for 319 yards by the Colts.

With two weeks to go, Dallas leads in team offence, passing offence and rushing defence. Green Bay is first in pass defence, and St. Louis has displaced Dallas as the total defence leader. Cleveland still is tops in rushing offence.

Dallas is tops in scoring with 299 points and New York Giants, who have allowed 121 points in the last two games, have given up 437 during the year. The league record is 482 by Baltimore in 1950 when the Colts allowed 63 touchdowns. The Giants have given up 58.

Ten Choirs Draw Full House For Picton Area Carol Service

PICTON (STAFF) — The Kiwanis Community Carol Service held last night in Picton United Church was an overwhelming success, with standing room only available long before the program began. Some persons were placed in the basement of the church, where music from the service was piped down through a speaker system. Ten choirs from throughout the County of Prince Edward and the Town of Picton participated in the outstanding event. During the program eight carols were sung by the congregation and the two new features added this year to the annual festival were the Phillipine Nurses' choir from Picton Edward County Memorial Hospital and the Kiwanis "Men of Brass" band, under the direction of Chris Lockyer. The twenty additional organ and piano, played piece band, along with the trafor much of the music, and assisted the carol singing.

The invocation for the program was given by Rev. J. O. Moore of the United Pentecostal Church and the benediction by Rev. F. Breedveldt, The choirs participating were St. Andrew's Presbyterian, Picton; the Salvation Army; Wellington United Church; St. Gregory's Roman Catholic Church; First Baptist Church, Picton; Bethany Christian Reform Church, Bloomfield; Cherry Valley United Church; Phillipine Nurses' Choir; St. Barbara's Chapel, Picton Heights; Picton United Church. The final "Centennial Salute" was sung by the combined choirs who sang 'Our Canada from Sea to Sea.

Following the Carol singing, the president of the Kiwanis Club of Picton, Ray Lennox, thanked the congregation for the response to this and the previous carol festivals. The service was interdenominational, lasted for some two hours and was taped by CJBQ Radio for later programming.

ANAF News

At the next general meeting, Thursday, Dec. 8 at 8 p.m. nominations will be held. At the last meeting a notice of motion was read that will make an amendment to the bylaws, if passed Thursday. Another subject may come up for discussion, before nominations begin as it might affect the present system. The president urges everyone to attend so that there is a majority representation of the members and a fair and equable decision can be made on any subject that arises.

The entertainment chairman has arranged for a movie to be shown at the social evening to be held on Friday, Dec. 16th. All members and their guests are cordially invited to attend.

The childrens' annual Christmas party will be on Dec. 17 and members are asked to read their notices carefully as regards the time for the children to come. Those whose surnames run from "A" to "J" are asked to come at 9 a.m. Those from "K" to "Z" are asked to wait until 11.30 a.m. It is regretted that the Hall is not big enough to accommodate all the children at once.

In last week's news, an error was made in the final date for reservations for the New Year's Ball. Instead of Dec. 8th., it is Dec. 28th but from the way tickets are going that date may be too late. There will be just fifty tickets available. The Ball will be held solely upstairs and no one will be admitted without a ticket and none will be available for sale at the door.

The sick committee chairman reports an increase in the number of members on the sick list with the following members hospitalized at B.G.H. J. Carter, room 238, H. McLuskie, room, 106, H. St. Pierre, room 252, H. Thibault, room 221, and J. Cunningham. Still at St. Mary's is M. Phillips. W. Ingham is still in the Hastings Manor hospital wing. Resting at home are D. Truesdale and B. Burke.

A week ago Saturday, the ANAF Dukes bantam team continued its winning ways by defeating the Aces 6 to 4. However, last Saturday was a different story when the Americs brought them their first defeat by edging them out in a hard fought battle by a score of 3 to 2. A suggestion has been made to put a notice on the board as to time and date of future games and maybe a few more members would take time out to go over and cheer their little proteges and encourage them by letting them see that some interest is being shown by their sponsors. They sure deserve it.

Wichita Falls Chosen Scene Of Ruby Trial

DALLAS, Tex. (AP)—District Attorney Henry Wade says he again will demand the death penalty for Jack Ruby, The defence discounts Wade's chances for winning it in a new trial of the man who killed Lee Harvey Oswald.

These viewpoints were expressed after Wichita Falls was designated Tuesday as the site of a second trial, possibly in February, on an order by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals. Wichita Falls is 140 miles northwest of Dallas.

Defence counsel said the appellate court specifically barred the admissibility of testimony by a policeman, heard earlier, which indicated premeditation by Ruby to shoot the accused presidential assassin.

Ruby's lawyers said elimination of that evidence heightened their prospects for a murder-without - malice verdict, which does not carry the death sentence.

Wade said "we have five or six new witnesses we are going to use." He gave no details.

Head of Mobile Command Explains Its Arms and Functions

ST. HUBERT, Que. (CP)—The Canadian armed forces have taken a major step in the streamlining of their Mobile Command which went into operation formally last April 1.

Lt.-Gen. W. A. B. Anderson, commander of the Mobile Command whose headquarters are in this Montreal suburb, told a news conference here Tuesday that steps will be taken immediately to give the command "increased mobility, greater fire power and a smaller administrative 'tail.'" The transition is scheduled for completion in the early 1970s.

The major advances will give tactical land and air combat units greatly increased operational effectiveness, he added.

The new structure will include a tactical aviation group to be equipped with CF-5 close air support aircraft, fixed-wing transport aircraft such as the Buffalo and reconnaissance, tactical and cargo helicopters.

Gen. Anderson said that this will give the ground forces a tactical air wing and that by 1970 the Mobile Command will have a well-trained force ready to send "anywhere in the world."

The reorganization of the Mobile Command, the largest single command of the Canadian armed forces, is in line with the government's white paper on defence of March, 1964.

The role of the command is to train, exercise and maintain the land elements of the Canadian forces and their tactical air support units so that they would be ready for action anywhere in the world.

The scope ranges from peacekeeping to all-out war.

The command headquarters in addition to exercising overall command, is designed to provide quickly operational field headquarters from within its own resources should the need arise.

The Canadian Infantry Brigade group in West Germany will continue as a mechanized formation under NATO command but it will also "become a component of Mobile Command for the first time," said Gen. Anderson.

He said the armored regiments in the brigade groups will be equipped with light air-portable tanks.

CTV, Vice-president at Odds

TORONTO (CP) — Michael Hind-Smith, 35, declined comment Tuesday night on reports that he has been fired as vice-president of programming at CTV.

"I can make no comment at this time," he said in an interview.

Toronto television columnists said Mr. Hind-Smith was told Monday morning by Murray Chercover, CTV executive vice-president and general-manager, to clear out his desk.

Mr. Chercover and Gordon Keeble, CTV president, also declined comment Tuesday night, saying they would not discuss the reports at this time with the press.

Columnist Bruce Lawson of the Globe and Mail said Mr. Hind-Smith's duties have been taken over by Arthur Weinthal, a CTV executive producer, and lawyers are negotiating terms for ending Mr. Hind-Smith's contract.

Lawson says CTV is also negotiating with broadcaster Charles Templeton to take over the CTV news and public affairs department vacated Oct. 4 when Peter Reilly resigned.

Miss World Changes Mind

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Miss World, India's Reita Faria, will go to Viet Nam to entertain American soldiers over the opposition of the Indian government.

On Nov. 27, India's Foreign Minister M. C. Chagla said for any Indian citizen to go there would, in my view, be against this country's policy.

Court Upholds Broadcast Fees

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal government won a major case Tuesday when the Supreme Court of Canada upheld the validity of broadcasting licence fees totalling millions of dollars.

In a 4-to-1 decision, the court ruled that federal licence fees levied since 1960 on Canada's privately-owned television and radio stations are valid and constitutional.

The highest court threw out a Nov. 12, 1963, judgment by the Exchequer Court of Canada that found the fees invalid.

The case revolved around a cabinet order passed by the Diefenbaker government Oct. 28, 1960, that increased the fee schedule.

Radio station CKAC Montreal, a French-language outlet owned by Montreal La Presse, paid the higher fee for 1960 under protest and sued the government to recover the amount of the increase, $5,452.

The court's majority opinion, written by Mr. Justice Douglas Abbott, said licences awarded to private broadcasters are a privilege and not a property or vested right. The cabinet had the power to boost or reduce licence fees at any time.

In a dissenting opinion, Chief Justice Robert Taschereau wrote that the 1960 fees were invalid because they were increased retroactively without parliamentary sanction.

Performing Acts to Visit 92 Communities

TORONTO (CP) — Ninety-two Ontario cities and towns will be visited by major performing arts groups next year as a part of Ontario's centennial celebrations.

The year-long program, to be known as the Ontario Performing Arts Festival, was announced Tuesday by James A. C. Auld, minister of tourism and information and chairman of the cabinet centennial committee.

As a part of the festival, first-time visits to dozens of Ontario communities will be made by the National Ballet, Toronto Symphony, Canadian Opera Company, Les Chansonniers, Museum Children's Theatre, and Windsor Light Opera Company.

Mr. Auld said original plans called for 300 performances. However, response from Ontario communities was so great the touring schedule was increased to 338 performances.

"Until now, because of high touring costs, it has not been feasible, economically, for groups such as the ballet or opera to visit the smaller cities and towns of Ontario," said Mr. Auld.

The National Ballet of Canada is forming a special concert ballet group so that ballet may be brought to communities where limited facilities prevent full-scale performances. The concert ballet will visit 40 communities where ballet has never previously appeared.

Les Chansonniers, a group at three Montreal artists, will undertake a special three-week tour to present French-Canadian folk lore in song.

The Canadian Opera Company will extend its tour of Don Pasquale into a number of communities in which the opera has never played, particularly in Northern Ontario. The opera will play in 15 new communities, as will the Windsor Light Opera Company. The Toronto Symphony will perform in 10 communities never visited before.

The Museum Children's Theatre of Toronto will make a tour of 72 centres. It will be the first major tour undertaken by the organization.

Other elements of the Ontario Performing Arts Festival include:

1. More than 20 folk arts festivals which will be staged by groups across the province.

2. An Ontario centenary music festival which will expand present local festivals, and which will send winners on to a national festival planned for the Centennial year.

3. A university program which will assist guest groups to perform at Ontario universities, and a series of university workshops on the performing arts.

4. A grant to the four Ontario regions of the Dominion Drama Festival, enabling them to tour Centennial Year prize-winning productions in their regions.

Provincial grants in the following amounts were awarded the touring companies:

Toronto Symphony $25,000, National Ballet $20,000, Canadian Opera $21,505, Children's Theatre $25,000, Chansonniers $6,000, and Windsor Light Opera $3,450.

The folk arts groups received $30,000, the music festivals $35,000, the university workshops and visiting groups $35,000, and the Drama Festival Trust $80,000.

The provincial grants totalled $300,955.

Tribute to Sol Hurok Excellent TV Fare

NEW YORK (AP) — Great music by large orchestras and fine dancing by corps de ballet combined because of their size, fit poorly onto small television screens.

But by adult setting and skilful but unobtrusive camera work, the problem was overcome Tuesday night in CBS' handsome tribute to impresario Sol Hurok.

Hurok was never on camera but never heard during S. Hurok Presents. But he was well represented by some of the great stars who have performed under his aegis.

West Coast Actors' Studio Formed

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Playwright William Inge and other transplanted New Yorkers announced the establishment of a western outpost of the Actors Studio, the most influential force in American acting during the last decade.

Actors Studio-West was the brainchild of Paul Newman and director Jack Garfein, and they found immediate response from local graduates of the studio. The plan found favor with the likes of Joe Kapp, which do a headquarters for rent in a year.

The nature of the place is ironic; it was formerly the home of William S. Hart, the story - faced cowboy of silent films.

Garfein, who will be executive director for the western branch, explained the reason for its founding.

"There has been a tremendous influx here from New York of people in all crafts—acting, directing, writing, etc. Many are in Hollywood because they find work here. Others prefer to live here and fly to New York to read for a play; that's easy to do in the jet age.

LACK OUTLET

"Many of these people have worked at the Actors Studio, and they discovered there is no place to develop their craft in California. After all, you don't act as a performer when you're employed in soap operas, third-rate TV and B-movies.

"This situation has created an enormous waste of talent in this country. Actors are hanging around drugstores when they should be acting.

"The acting tradition in America was cut with Booth and Barrymore. Producers, producers and writers can cooperate in their professions because they all need an actor is out of a play or a picture, he is out of acting.

"I remember talking to Jimmy Dean on his last day of making Giant. He told me: 'This is the day I dread, when I will be told I won't be needed any more. It's a nightmare for me, like being divorced from my family.'

"The Actors Studio-West is designed to give actors a sense of continuity and purpose that they wouldn't have otherwise."

The new branch, which will be overseen by the New York studio's leader, Lee Strasberg, also will offer a workshop for playwrights, conducted by Inge. In time, actors will not only produce their own but display it. Plans include a 150-seat theatre to be installed in what was once Bill Hart's garage.

Eventually Actors Studio-West hopes to erect a 400-seat theatre plus a park that will include statues of famed figures of America's theatrical past.

6th Sidney

FAREWELL PARTY

6TH SIDNEY — On Wednesday evening over 70 people gathered in Scott's United Church Hall to honor two couples, Mr. and Mrs. Ross Dafoe and Mr. and Mrs. Carmen Frost who are leaving the community. Mr. and Mrs. Dafoe have moved to Belleville and Mr. and Mr. and Mrs. Frost are moving to Frankford.

Mrs. Ross Dafoe conducted an informal sing-song with Miss Monica Sine at the piano. Home movies were shown and the men participated on a wood sawing bee. Mrs. Edison Sine read an address, and the guests of honor were presented with gifts from the community.

URGES PEACE EFFORT

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Dr. Arthur Flemming, new president of the National Council of Churches, Tuesday urged Christian forces to join in praising for world peace. The onetime U.S. cabinet member hailed recent proposals for an international summit conference on Vietnam and a visit next year by Pope Paul, to try to help settle the war in Viet Nam.

Mental Patients Cured; Records Block Discharge

OTTAWA (CP) — Many patients in mental hospitals have recovered enough to be sent home, but are not released because of old criminal charges hanging over their heads.

This testimony was given before the Commons justice committee Tuesday by Dr. J. D. Griffin of Toronto, general director of the Canadian Mental Health Association.

He said provincial authorities are "most reluctant" to release rehabilitated mental patients because of charges because they lack evidence and witnesses to convict the patients.

Dr. Griffin and association president Gowan Guest of Vancouver endorsed a private member's bill before the justice committee that would revamp procedures in cases of insanity at the time of trial.

Under the present Criminal Code, if the accused is found unfit to stand trial because of insanity, he is committed to a mental institution before his trial can start and the charges are left hanging in mid-air.

The amendment proposed by John Munro (L — Hamilton East) would empower a judge to bear Crown evidence before holding a hearing on the question of insanity. If the evidence was found inconclusive or insufficient, the judge could then acquit the defendant.

Attendance Down at SA Tea, Bazaar

NAPANEE — Probably because of the frigid weather, the attendance at the Salvation Army Home League had a smaller crowd Saturday afternoon than they did or last year's bazaar and tea following the Santa Claus parade. They plan to rent a store some Saturday soon to dispose of the articles that were not sold.

Mrs. Jennie Herrington welcomed the members and invited them to sign the guest book, and Mrs. Captain Frank Phelps, as hostess, was kept busy. Mrs. Captain Reid officially opened the event and Mrs. Major Kerr offered prayer. Both are Belleville officers.

Folksetlias brightened the windows, and other Christmas decorations adorned the walls. Because of lack of space, there was no tree.

Mrs. Jack Martin and Mrs. John Switzer failed to dispose of many of the articles of good used clothing, but Miss Nettie Bennett was more fortunate with her aprons and bazaar articles; such as knitting and fancy work. Mrs. Clarence Toomer cleared off her "touch and take" table and Mrs. Percy Phelps soon disposed of her Christmas decorations and novelties. Mrs. Bradford Reid was less fortunate in disposing of the variety of articles made by the Salvation Army Home League, but all good things on the cooked food table were soon sold by Carol Babcock and Mrs. Roy Babcock.

The late - covered table was attractive with its arrangement of mixed flowers and its red candles in silver candle sticks. Mrs. J. A. McKinney, Mrs. H. H. Langford, Mrs. Werk Poole, Mrs. Lorne Smart, and Mrs. A. Douglas Allgrbrook poured tea.

May Unite Ontario Colleges

TORONTO (CP)—The Globe and Mail says the provincial government will be advised in the next two weeks to amalgamate its 14 provincially-supported universities into one institution—the University of Ontario.

It says the recommendation will be made to the provincial committee on university affairs by a three-man commission under Dr. J. W. T. Spinks, president of the University of Saskatchewan.

The committee was asked to look into graduate studies and research in Ontario in 1963 and to recommend ways to eliminate duplication among the provincially - supported universities.

The Globe says the new provincial university would be an institution with many campuses, eliminating the autonomy now enjoyed by the provincially-supported universities.

LIST UNIVERSITIES

The 14 universities are: Brock, Carleton, Guelph, Lakehead, Laurentian, McMaster, Ottawa, Queen's, Toronto, Trent, Waterloo, Western, Windsor and York.

University affairs Minister William Davis said Tuesday that he will not comment on the Spinks report until it is released by the provincial government in a two weeks.

The Globe says the report will also recommend that Ontario have one research library located at the University of Toronto.

In Kingston, Dr. J. A. Corry, principal of Queen's University, said Monday night he believes the new amalgamation system would create more problems that it would solve.

"Such a superstructure built on to Ontario universities would be worthwhile only if the problems to be solved were monstrous," he said in an interview.

"The problems exist, but they are not monstrous."

Consumers Take Last Rap at Supermarket Food Prices

By DENNIS ORCHARD

OTTAWA (CP)—The parliamentary inquiry into food prices entered its final stages Tuesday with a rap at the supermarkets and a defence of the competitive system.

The Consumers' Association of Canada, relaying complaints from some of its 30,000 members across the country, extended the list of alleged retailing abuses already before the Senate-Commons committee.

The Canadian Manufacturers' Association claimed its members are restraining price increases more effectively than wholesalers and retailers, mainly because they face the rigors of competition at home and in export markets.

The committee, trying to wind up hearings on food prices and lay down a report by Christmas, has scheduled another hearing Thursday and two next week.

The witnesses Thursday will be from the Canadian Labor Congress and officials of the drug directorate. They will talk about regulations governing standardization and labelling.

The separate hearings of the consumer group Tuesday morning and the manufacturers in the afternoon rarely touched on the same topics.

The consumer association said retailers have not encouraged uniform or inexpensive containers for goods. Special displays have been both deceptive and selective, by giving the impression of savings that health department's food and arest there, and by leaving out month after month some high-price staples.

Committee economist Warren James was given the job of analyzing data collected since 1962 by one housewife and said to support a charge that supermarkets know the items that make up the consumer price index published by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

By keeping these prices down, retailers could cause DBS to understate the actual increase in food costs.

The manufacturers, more concerned with rejecting charges that corporate profits are the "villain" in the rising cost of living, suggested the real villain is "an impossible demand which the economy is forced to scale down through the inflationary process."

DISCUSSES DEMAND

Making up the demand are temptations "to try to get everything, more goods and services, more wages, more tax - supported welfare programs, all at once."

The consumer representatives and manufacturers crossed on one point—the proposition that excessive advertising should be taxed.

Supporting the idea, the consumers' association said it could end the promotion gimmickry that big companies engage in and can't abandon for fear of losing their place in the market.

But the manufacturers said that while some advertising cancels itself out in this way, over the years it has proved "much to the benefit of the public."

Bridge Unsafe; Council Defers Action Until Report Received from Ottawa

CAMPBELLFORD — Campbellford Municipal Council held its last regular meeting of the year on Monday evening.

A letter from the county engineer and road superintendent sparked a discussion on the bridge. He drew council's attention to the recent failure of one deck of the bridge which necessitated hurried repair. He added that the bridge could completely collapse resulting in loss of life and should not be left in its present state for an unlimited length of time. If no action were taken to construct a new bridge, he would have to recommend extensive deck repair immediately.

Reeve G. H. Free said plans had been sent to Hon. J. Pickersgill in Ottawa for a new low-level swing bridge in the same location. It would be the same height as the present structure, but said the reeve, the county engineer is set on a high-level bridge and nothing else.

A motion was made to hold the matter in abeyance until a reply is received from Ottawa.

DOG-CATCHER REPORTS

A report was received from the dog-catcher in Stirling. He reported the kennels had been insulated, new cages built, and boot installed. The kennels are to be inspected by the Humane Society and council has asked for a report.

According to the present by - law, owners are given warnings the first time their dogs are found at large. No dog can be picked up on private property. Reeve Free wants these clauses in the by-law amended to give the dog-catcher more freedom in picking up dogs running at large.

A new truck has been purchased and will be paid for subject to approval after inspection. Cost is $6,900.

Hydro contracts for the new arena were discussed and will receive further consideration at a later, special meeting attended by representatives of Seymour Council, Seymour Agricultural Society, Mitchell Construction and the engineers.

The solicitor for Seymour township, the town solicitor and Clerk E. M. Dey were requested to investigate ownership of the former Presbyterian Church shed.

Clarence Irwin was appointed Council's representative to the High School Board for a two - year term.

It was decided to give town employees a Christmas turkey each in lieu for a cash bonus. Dec. 27 will be declared Boxing Day.

Reeve Free and Councillor D. Sharpe were appointed to the Hospital and Authority, the Retarded Children's Association.

Scar Rules Out Bikini Blonde Awarded $9,740

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. (CP)—Damages of $9,760 have been awarded to a pretty blonde who says she can no longer wear a bikini because of a large scar on her right thigh.

Jeanne Thomas, 33, won the award Monday in an action against Royal Columbia Hospital where an operation room accident in October, 1962, caused extensive burns to her leg.

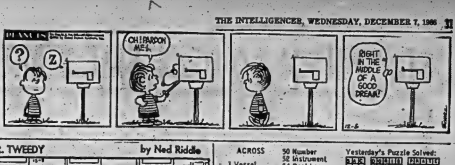
She was undergoing a back operation when a cauterizer caused burns that left a six by 13-inch scar on her leg.

"I don't like to be seen in public in my bathing suit," Mrs. Thomas told the court. She said she no longer wears a bikini as she did before the accident and found herself handicapped in many sports activities she and her husband previously enjoyed.

A defence lawyer suggested there were perhaps other styles of swim wear that would cover the scar.

"But I'm still young," Mrs. Thomas replied.

She was awarded $8,250 damages including compensation for time lost at work and $1,490 special damages. Her husband was awarded $500 special damages.



Centre to Treat Disturbed Planned by Children's Aid

A district treatment centre for emotionally disturbed children, to accommodate a dozen, will be sought to serve Eastern Ontario. This decision was reached at a meeting of ten local directors of Children's Aid Societies held at the Hotel Quinte here last week. Attending was a representative of the Ontario Department of Public Welfare.

A poll of the local directors present revealed they could provide from 3 to 5 children for treatment per year. It was decided though, to first think in terms of a unit with the capacity of about 12 children. The government of Ontario will contribute at the rate of $5,000 per bed towards the cost of new construction and a lesser amount per bed towards the renovation of an existing facility. However, in the light of often-times lengthy, though necessary, delay connected with publicly financed construction, it was felt wise to consider leasing a property.

A recent survey conducted by the Ontario Association of Children's Aid Societies revealed that there are more than 1,000 wards of the Crown serviced by 1,000 wards of the Crown serviced by 1,000 wards of the Crown serviced by

234 Lost In Aegean As Greek Ship Sinks

ATHENS (CP)—A Greek passenger ship sank today in a raging storm in the Aegean Sea and more than 200 persons were feared drowned.

Of the 321 persons aboard, only 87 had been snatched from the stormy seas hours after the ship went down.

The 8,500-ton Heraklion sank mid-way between the island of Crete and the Greek mainland midway in its regular 10-hour crossing from Crete to Piraeus, the port of Athens.

The first survivors sighted were floating in the sea 19 miles northwest of the island of Milos, where the Venus de Milo was discovered in 1820.

Shipping officials said the Heraklion carried 206 passengers, including one foreigner, and a crew of 75 commanded by Capt. E. Veruikos.

The foreign passenger was not immediately identified.

The sinking of the Heraklion was one of a series of post-war disasters to Greek ships. The cruise ship Lakonia burned and sank during a Christmas cruise in the Atlantic two years ago and 138 persons died. Europe's worst post-war maritime disaster was the sinking of the Himera, which went down off Athens in 1947 with a loss of 392 lives.

In the first hours after the disaster, the merchant marine ministry said there appeared to be no hope of survivors. But as ships and planes converged on the disaster site wreckage and people were seen in the water. Planes dropped lifebelts and rafts.

At noon Marine Minister Isidore Mavridogion announced that 11 survivors had been picked up and that others were still in the water.

During the afternoon the total of those recovered rose to 15 and then to 20.

The Greek government declared a state of emergency to aid the rescue operations.

The ship, which also carried automobiles and freight, went down at 2 a.m. (7 p.m. EST Wednesday) after a last frantic radio message—"We are sinking!"

Planes, helicopters and ships joined in a massive search near the rocky islet of Falconera in the Cyclades group.

Survivors were clinging desperately to three rafts among a litter of floating wreckage. Near them, an automobile bobbed about on the rough sea.

The planes dipped overhead and dropped blankets, rubber boats and medical supplies and the first nine survivors were later picked up by a ship, a merchant marine ministry spokesman said.

Businessmen, villagers, students, tourists and servicemen filed on to the ferry at Thanos on Wednesday night. On board with them went cars, trucks loaded with oranges, and hens and pigs which the villagers were taking to friends in Athens for Christmas.

According to a list released by the ferry agents about 20 women were on board.

This morning, some 1,000 relatives and friends of passengers crowded round the Chanea offices of the Epirotiki company clamoring for news. Many were weeping.

Chanea's town council proclaimed a day of official mourning.

Premier Stephanos Stephanopoulos declared a period of national mourning.

The passengers were mainly from Chanea and outlying villages. The only non - Greek aboard was believed to be a Briton.

The Heraklion went down about 90 miles south of Piraeus.

The ship was making its regular 10-hour overnight run from Iraklion, capital of Crete, to Piraeus.

Greek ships and planes and ships of other nations headed to the disaster area from all over the Aegean.

Underwater Base Off BC Coast Had Been Planned by U.S. Firm

VICTORIA (CP)—A confidential letter to Premier Bennett which indicated a plan by a company for "activity offshore" had at least some bearing on the British Columbia government's decision to claim the Pacific continental shelf, last week, a government spokesman said Wednesday.

Details of the letter were not known but it was understood that a large American company engaged in research planned to establish an underwater base of operations off the BMC. coast.

Attorney-General Robert Bonner, questioned by reporters Wednesday, confirmed the existence of a letter addressed to the premier which had some bearing on the government decision to claim the continental shelf.

The government order was rammed through so quickly Friday that it contained no provision for confirmation of the day-to-day operations which now are being carried out in coastal waters.

As an afterthought, the provincial cabinet Tuesday passed an amendment exempting log dumping, booming or storage, oyster and other mollusc fishery, barges or ship moorings, marine gas stations and canneries or fish camps.

Mr. Bonner said in an interview following passing of the order that the government was acting to protect the future interests of British Columbians, in view of the recent undersea research developments which had taken place in the United States.

The extent of the B.C. claim was not precisely spelled out, but the Pacific continental shelf is usually defined by oceanographers extends between 20 and 100 miles oceanward from the mainland coast.

Oil Embargo Prospects Seem Frail

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—The possibility of a compulsory embargo on all shipments to Rhodesia remained alive but looked frail today, as Foreign Secretary George Brown of Britain's continued Commonwealth consultations in advance of a Security Council meeting tonight.

Brown was reported to have told Commonwealth ambassadors at a 2½ - hour meeting Wednesday that mandatory sanctions against a select list of Rhodesian exports should be a sufficiently effective and practical way of making life unbearable for Rhodesia's white-minority regime.

He was said to have emphasized that Britain wants a sanctions program that will harm only Rhodesia, a landlocked country of 4,000,000 Negroes and 225,000 whites. It saw no necessity of a more general ban on Rhodesian exports and imports that might involve a showdown with South Africa and cause serious harm to Britain's own economy and those of Zambia and perhaps other countries.

From all accounts, the meeting was far less stormy than had been anticipated.

One source said Brown was able to allay some of the anxieties of African militants," although two African countries continued "to ask quite firmly" for the inclusion of an oil embargo in the draft resolution Britain plans to put before the Security Council.

Brown was said to have made no commitment concerning oil, although he agreed to continue consultations with various Commonwealth delegates today for a further exchange of views.

Rhodesia Starts To Worry

SALISBURY (Reuters)—Rhodesian industrialists are bracing themselves for tougher times ahead as the United Nations Security Council prepare to take up Britain's case for tightening the economic screws on the landlocked rebel regime.

The apparent attitude of businessmen here contrasts with assurances from Prime Minister Ian Smith that tougher sanctions would have no more effect than the voluntary sanctions now in effect.

65 Soldiers Die

ANKARA (AFP) — Sixty-five soldiers were killed and another 27 severely injured by an explosion in the sleeping quarters of the Dumlu army barracks near Erzurum in eastern Turkey early today.

The explosion was followed by a rapidly spreading fire which caught the sleeping soldiers by surprise.

Saigon Mayor Shoots Up Cafe

SAIGON (AP) — Saigon's mayor entered hospital for a checkup and a rest today less than 12 hours after American military police arrested and handcuffed him in a Saigon riverfront shortly before 3 a.m.

Friends of Mayor Van Van Cua, who is a doctor and a paratroop colonel, said they expected he would be asked to take time off from city hall for an extended rest.

Cua was disarmed and handcuffed by U.S. military police after he brandished a sub-machine-gun at them, U.S. officials said.

They said the MPs were summoned to the riverfront near the My Canh floating restaurant after reports that a man was firing a gun. A U.S. spokesman said the MPs "detected an odor of alcohol" on the man, who later proved to be the mayor.

The Americans, apparently manager or owners of the mayor's identity, searched him and took a .38-calibre revolver from him. He was wearing a sport shirt and slacks.

In the meantime, Vietnamese police arrived on the scene and with the Americans took the mayor — scraped and shorting — to police headquarters. He was released after high U.S. embassy officials and the American provost marshal intervened.

U.S. officials disclosed the mayor had been involved in at least one previous incident recently when he stopped a military convoy moving through Saigon. Other sources said that on one occasion during the last week the mayor halted traffic on a main street late at night and on another occasion he fired shots in the air on another busy street.

U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge called on South Vietnam officials today and expressed regrets over the incident, but not an apology.

Pearson Dodges Query On Members' Eligibility

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson sidestepped a question in the Commons Wednesday on whether the government received an opinion from its legal officers to the effect that MPs who accepted fees for CBC appearances placed their Commons seats in jeopardy.

The question was put twice by Opposition Leader Diefenbaker who asked that Mr. Pearson make a full statement on the matter today.

Mr. Pearson said it would be "quite appropriate" to make a statement early next week. But he would prefer not to say anything else until "a final opinion" had been received.

The Conservative leader suggested that such a legal opinion was received by the government either in 1964 or 1965.

There were reports last week that about 40 MPs received payments from the CBC and could lose their seats under a section of the Senate and House of Commons Act which forbids members of the Commons accepting public money, apart from statutory salaries and allowances.

Mr. Pearson said the matter is being carefully studied, not only for 1964 and 1965 but as far back as 1958. The Conservative government held office from 1957 to 1963.

After Conservative interjections, he added: "... Yes, as far back as 1953, too."

Food Costs Decline During November

OTTAWA (CP)—Eating cost the average Canadian less in November, but he paid more to keep a roof over their head and clothes on his back.

With minor exceptions, beef, chicken, pork and fish were less expensive than a month earlier, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported Wednesday in its consumer price index.

Important price decreases also occurred in root vegetables, cabbage, fresh fruits and sugar.

Although various price changes together made for a decline of six-tenths of one per cent in the food group, the higher cost of housing and clothing wiped out the improvement and pushed the over-all index to 145.5 from 145.3 in October, an increase of one-tenth of one per cent.

* * *

Rents, home-owner repairs, property taxes, furniture, textiles, utensils and most supplies and services were heavier burdens on the householder.

Major increases occurred in men's wear, children's wear and footwear.

The index was 3.8 per cent higher than in November, 1967. Foods, after their third consecutive monthly decline, were 4.7 per cent higher than a year earlier.

* * *

This compares with a year-to-year difference of 7.2 per cent between August, 1968 and 1967.

Minor price decreases occurred between October and November in eggs, butter, dairy products, infants' food, tea, instant coffee, shortening and frozen orange juice.

Higher prices were reported for turkeys, smoked hams, veal chops, margarine, corn flakes, regular coffee, tomatoes, celery and lettuce.

Transportation costs remained unchanged during the month as lower train fares offset increased gasoline and oil prices.

Prairies Plan Joint Study of Living Costs

WINNIPEG (CP)—The Prairie provinces joined forces Wednesday to establish a royal commission for an in-depth investigation of the high cost of living.

Sterling Lyon, Manitoba attorney-general, said the commission's terms of reference are broad enough to allow study of "any aspects of any purchases required by a person living on the Prairies."

Premier Ross Thatcher announced that the Saskatchewan government has passed an order-in-council authorizing participation and Mr. Lyon made a similar announcement in the Manitoba legislature. No Alberta statement has yet been made.

Pope Wants 2 Truces Joined Into Armistice

VATICAN CITY (CP)—Pope Paul called today for the merging of the Viet Nam Christmas and New Year truces into a single armistice period to allow for sincere peace negotiations.

The Pope's suggestion would amount to transforming the two short separate truces into one truce of about 10 days.

He revealed that "highly-placed leaders" were favorable to his proposals, without identifying them.

The Pope said that neglecting "such a golden opportunity" to end the war would "be fraught with danger." He said he prayed to God that his "earnest desire will not fall on deaf ears."

The Pope noted that both sides in the Vietnamese war had agreed on 48-hour ceasefire periods at Christmas and the New Year, and went on:

"However, this temporary suspension of hostilities cannot fully satisfy mankind's expectations, for they foresee, with feelings of increased regret, the resumption of the war after this short and fleeting pause."

The Pope said the prospect for an end of the fighting in Southeast Asia appeared to be brighter.

"The idea of an end to hostilities is becoming stronger and more confident," the pontiff said in a speech in St. Peter's Basilica during a mass marking the feast of the immaculate conception.

"If, as it has been announced, a further cessation of hostilities is to follow shortly on the Christmas truce, why do not both parties to the conflict join the two separate truces into a single, continuous period of time, so that new ways may be opened for bringing about an honorable understanding putting an end to the conflict?"

Pope Paul said he had planned today to invite the combatants in Viet Nam to lay down their arms during Christmas.

"But, as you all know," he said, "happily this invitation is no longer necessary. A truce on Viet Nam has already been announced by both parties."

He said he wanted to express satisfaction "to the statesmen who have been responsible for arranging this noble and chivalrous act."

The Pope went on to say that a truce would not be enough, however, and to urge that the Christmas and subsequent Buddhist new year truce be joined into a lasting armistice.

Both sides in Viet Nam agreed on 36-hour truce in the during New Year's.

'Water' Flows Up For David James

David James Demonstrated Uphill Flow

A Belleville high school graduate, now engaged in scientific research in California, has discovered how to make ordinary water defy gravity.

David James, 27, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hedley James, 204 Dufferin Ave., now studying for his Ph.D. thesis at the California Institute of Technology, made the discovery accidentally while experimenting with water containing polymer.

The solution produces "circle water" which can be made to flow around the edge of a glass pitcher — and the flow may be cut off by snipping it with a pair of scissors.

Ironically, while the announcement of his discovery has been reading news across North America, David was briefly back in the Quinte district.

His father-in-law, Lorne Stapley of Stirling, died Tuesday and David and his wife, Eleanor, flew from California last night to be with the family.

However, he took time this morning to explain how he made official today and expressed regrets over the incident, but not an apology.

the sponsorship of the U.S. Navy.

"Like a lot of scientific discoveries it was by accident," he recalled.

"One night I made up a solution of water and polymer and poured it" didn't do a very good job of it. I got lumps of polymer floating in the solution. I thought I'd better pour a few of the lumps off the surface. Then I noticed one lump seemed to pull another one over the top (of the beaker) with it."

He began pondering the phenomenon, trying to discover whether it was only the lumps of polymer that were 'rising' or if they also were pulling the fluid with them.

"The next night I made up a better solution — and it work-

All Small Towns in Same Boat Says Marmora MD

By CLAIRE HOY
Staff Reporter

According to a Marmora doctor, the number of doctors who live in an area is usually related to the proximity of a hospital.

Commenting on the charge by an area resident there was a serious shortage of doctors in Stirling, where only one doctor serves an area of some 4,000 persons, Dr. H. G. Parkin of Marmora said: "All these small towns are in the same boat. Most young doctors want to work in the hospital. That's where a good many things are done now that used to be done in the doctor's office.

"Once you move to a small town like this, you've limited your practice and so it's difficult to get young doctors."

Dr. Parkin said he is the only practicing doctor in Marmora right now but he gets by because people understand the problems.

"I think people here, and in all small towns, are very considerate. They try to come in to see me during office hours unless it's an emergency, and of course you get a log of help from specialists in the city near the hospital."

Dr. R. A. Thompson of Wellington, who at 76 still practices, though he is semi-retired, said he is the only doctor in and 300 square miles Prince Edward County except for those at Picton.

"Stirling is no worse off than we are," he said. "There are 1,100 people in the villages to the east after you all the people between here and Trenton, here and Belleville and here and Picton.

"Of course, the doctors all come out from Trenton, Belleville and Picton to cover the area, but we need a man here badly. The situation isn't good."

"I could keep going 18 hours a day if I wanted to, but at my age you've got to slow down some."

On the other hand, Dr. T. C. Y. Wong of Frankford said he isn't really as busy as he'd like to be.

"Dr. Beach and I have been working it out nicely between us," he said. "And even though Dr. Beach is ill right now I'm still not as busy as I'd like to be.

"Perhaps it's because I'm new. I've only been here since July, and people don't know me yet."

Dr. S. R. Beatty of Madoc said he didn't think there was a serious shortage in the area. "This area is pretty well covered. I've confined my practice pretty much to my office because of my health, but we have Dr. Derry here as well and this area isn't as thickly populated as my around Stirling."

Dr. K. E. McQueen of Picton said there are 12 doctors there. (Picton also has a hospital.) "Things are busy in the summer around here when the population swells from 18,000 to 30,000 because of the tourists, but there's no shortage here."

Tweed, although about 28 miles away from the nearest hospital in Belleville, has three practicing doctors. Dr. F. J. McCue said: "All doctors are overworked to some extent, but the situation in Tweed is good."

IN MEMORIAM

COLE — In loving memory of our dear husband, Percy Cole, who passed away Dec. 8, 1962.

In a quiet corner of our home,
Where no one sees but God alone,
Does the one we loved so dearly,
Kneel in silent memory.
The sad world may scold harsh words,
And think we do not care,
But never can we forget our mother dear.
Sadly missed by daughter

WILSON — In loving memory of my dear husband Percy Wilson who passed away Dec. 8, 1962.

It is sad to walk the road alone,
Instead of side by side,
To miss all those cozy moments,
When the way of life divides.
To miss the sound of your footsteps,
Then never another can be.
But you left us beautiful memories,
We will treasure through the years.
—Lovingly remembered by wife Connie.

COLE — In loving memory of our dear husband and father Cole, who passed away Dec. 8th, 1962.

Where would you be if we could
Talk to you,
Hello Mom, in the same old way,
Tell how your voice, how your smile,
We sit with you and chat awhile,
Tell how we miss you as a mother,
Each time with care.
For you'll never realize the heartache,
Till you see her vacant chair.
—Sadly missed by son Bill, daughter-in-law Isabel, Gary and Lorie.

BUSH — In loving memory of my dear husband, Ernest Bush, who passed away December 8th, 1961.

Since last we saw you sleeping,
Many years have come and gone,
But sometimes in the silence,
You're with us on.
We remember you for many years,
No longer here with me,
And yet in some mysterious way,
He keeps me company.
There is a touch of a vanished hand,
And a sound of a voice that is still —Always remembered by your wife Lenna, daughters and grandchildren.

Commission to Absorb 1967 Power Increase

Electric power from Ontario Hydro will cost the Belleville Public Utilities Commission next but the added cost is not expected to be reflected in higher domestic rates.

Yesterday members of the commission learned that the kilowatt rate per year will be raised from the present $23.30 to $24.35. The energy charge to the utilities will remain the same at 2.75 mills per kilowatt hour.

Utilities Manager E. L. Burnham said that based on present consumption and loads, the increase would mean an additional $28,000 or $30,000 in power costs for 1967.

Last year the Belleville Utilities paid Ontario Hydro about $1,007,000 for electric power used while because of increased power use, the tab for 1966 would be about $1,050,000.

Ontario Hydro justified the boost in power charges by citing higher interest rates, increased materials costs and higher salaries and wages.

Mr. Burnham said that unless further increases in power costs were made, it was not the intention of the utilities commission to pass the added costs on to Belleville consumers.

In other business at the meeting it was revealed that the new 24-inch watermain running from Sidney Street to the Moira River was still not in service.

Two special type butterfly valves in the watermain were still not working properly, but the big pipe has been sterilized and as soon as the valves are corrected the main can be put into use.

This winter it is planned to extend the main across the river and over into the Hillcrest area.

Picton Party

Senior Citizens Greet St. Nick

PICTON (STAFF) — The young are not the only ones to appreciate the spirit of Christmas and old St. Nick. The beaming faces of over 30 of Picton's senior citizens and the sound of their voices as they nearly raised the roof on Picton's Eastern Star Temple were certainly evidence enough to make the members of the Kinsmen Club of Picton very proud.

One of the club's main projects is caring for those elderly citizens and the annual senior citizens banquet they put on for these people was indeed one long to be remembered.

The highlight for the evening was the arrival of old St. Nick who "stole the show" as he passed out treats to the guests. Other entertainment, supplied by the newly formed Picton Junior Band and also a four piece orchestra, helped round out the evening.

Present for the occasion were Warden Harold Bonter and Mrs. Bonter; District Deputy - Governor K. P. Russell; Bill McWilliams, Superintendent of the County Home; and Capt. Gee of the local Salvation Army Citadel.

The president of the Kinsmen Club welcomed the guests and introduced the head table. There were no speeches and greetings were expressed by those at the head table. In all the banquet was a huge success for everyone concerned and the local service club deserves a lot of credit for this annual event, as well as the work they do throughout the year with Prince Edward County's elderly citizens.

'Water' Flows

ed," he said.

The solution is more than 90-per-cent water. The second ingredient is polyethylene oxide, a powder used in paints, plasters, clothes and women's hair sprays.

The chemical reaction of the combination is explained this way:

"The molecules of the polymer are particularly long and probably intertwined in the solution. As a result, there is an elastic quality that enables the liquid already spilled over the side of a container to pull more of the liquid out. Also, the flow of the liquid acts as its own siphon. It is, in fact, a tubeless siphon."

David found that if a gallon beaker containing the solution was placed 11 feet above an pitcher, the flow would continue until the first vessel was drained.

When the flow is slow enough, a pair of scissors can be used to cut the liquid about two inches below the container rim, on the outside. The liquid above the scissors literally "snaps" back into the pitcher and settles there.

"It makes a fine demonstration," says the young scientist. "You see a real snap and it just looks like you'd snapped a rubber band."

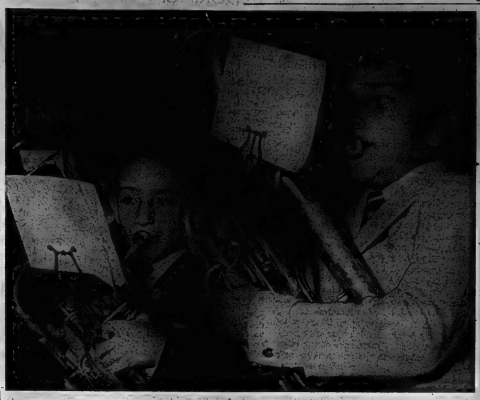
Sunlight or long exposure to air, causes the polymer to disintegrate and the solution then loses its climbing ability.

David said polymer experts could not recall any other elastic liquid which would continue to flow out of an ordinary container once the flow had been started and the pitcher placed upright.

As yet, he has merely been using his discovery for scientific demonstrations at the institute.

One report said possible applications of such water are numerous, among them cheaper and smaller pipes for central heating. The U.S. Navy is looking into the possibility of using it as a torpedo lubricant.

However, says David, he can't think of any practical application at present for the particular polymer-water solution he discovered.



He is the second scientist in his family. His father is a research scientist for the Federal Department of Agriculture in Belleville.

David graduated with honors from Belleville Collegiate in 1959 and from Queen's in 1962.

BCTVS principal Don Stirling recalls he was outstanding in mathematics and science.

"We're very proud of David — and we want everyone to know he came from here," said Mr. Stirling.

David says he will conclude his studies at the institute next June. He then plans on returning to work in Canada — possibly in Quebec or Ontario.

Jewish Festival of Lights Marks Fight for Religious Liberty

Chanukah, the eight-day Festival of Lights, began for Belleville's Jewish community with the rising of the stars Wednesday night.

Its observance is marked in synagogues and homes by the kindling of the Chanukah Menorah, an eight - branched candelabrum. Like Christmas lights, the menorah commemorates a miraculous gift of God — and something more. It recalls to devout Jews the struggle of freedom - loving people everywhere for religious liberty.

Chanukah harks back to the military victory of the Maccabees over the Syrian forces in Palestine in 165 B.C.

When the Jews regained Jerusalem they found the Syrians had desecrated the temple, even sacrificed swine on the altar. They cleaned and scrubbed the building and relit the Temple light with oil from a tiny flask. They had enough oil for one day, and eight days were needed to produce a new supply of pure holy oil. God performed a miracle. The one-day supply of oil burned on for eight days.

"Men of wisdom," declares the Hebrew prayer book, "then decreed eight days for hymns of praise."

The first night of Chanukah, as the leader of the house lights the shammash (the servant or guard candle which is used to light the other candles in the Menorah) he says a special blessing and lights one candle. The family joins in happy songs. Every night fresh candles are placed in the Menorah and each night one more is kindled until on the eighth and last night of Chanukah all eight blaze in the otherwise darkened room.

Traditionally, the Menorah is placed in the window to burn.

"This is perhaps the most important part of Chanukah," says Rev. Walter Seligmann of Sons of Jacob Synagogue. "It reaffirms to people passing by on the street that God has performed a miracle."

All Sons of Jacob Synagogue Rabbi Seligmann and the 14 pupils of the Hebrew School have prepared for weeks for Chanukah. On Sunday afternoon the children will present two plays and later, for the occasion by the rebbi, one a re-enactment of the historic victory of the Syrians.

When the stars came out at 5.35 p.m. Wednesday the children gathered around the rabbi for the lighting of the first candle.

"Our holy days begin not at sunset, but when the stars come out," explains the rabbi. "The custom pre-dates invention of clocks. For the Children of Israel in the cloudless land of Palestine, appearance of the stars was the signal to begin devotions."

Arson Charges Dismissed By Judge Lane

PICTON (Staff) — Accused of arson following a rash of fires here this year, Wendell George Copeland (alias Latone) age 20 of Picton, heard charges against him dismissed in county judge's criminal court here Monday.

Judge Wilfred Lane found insufficient evidence against Copeland at the special sitting. The only evidence the Crown had was a statement made at time of his arrest. Because's of the youth's mentality, Judge Lane ruled the statement invalid and the court decided charges must be dismissed.

Late in August this year, Provincial Police officers arrested Copeland on one count of arson. He appeared in court Aug. 26 and from there was committed to Ontario Hospital, Kingston, for examination.

On Tuesday of this week, a second man charged with arson in connection with property damages totalling over $40,000 here last summer, came before the Judge. Ceason Richard Allen, 19, also of Picton, faced the court on a charge of setting fire to a garage and storehouse owned by Lucille Nesbitt last Aug. 12.

At first Allen pleaded not guilty but following Tuesday's session he changed his plea to guilty. Further charges were to come. Judge Lane remanded Allen. Allen had underwent mental examination in Kingston last summer.

Hospital

If there are faults in the administration of the Belleville General Hospital why can't the public be told?

This is the question which has troubled many residents of Belleville ever since the staff quarrel came into the open in September.

It has produced some wooly thinking on the relation of the Board of Governors to the citizens of Belleville and the residents of Hastings County.

The board saw fit to release the verdict of the investigating team from the Ontario Hospital Services Commission that the resignation of two senior officials be accepted and the contract of a third be terminated.

However, it failed to state if the policy makers at the hospital came under criticism.

With the obvious reluctance of the board to give any answers to the public, it seems a fair assumption that it came under criticism in the report. Yet it is not willing to subject itself to the same treatment as it saw fit to subject the staff of the three departed officials.

There is no valid reason why any board should be immune to public censure if it is warranted. Too frequently there is a tendency by boards to think they are above criticism and to conduct business in private which should be of a public nature.

Taxpayers in the area have a stake in the hospital — a heavy financial one as well as the need to be re-assured an efficient board of governors is looking after their best interests.

In 1961 an earlier hospital survey indicated the Board should change its approach to the administration of the hospital.

Their refusal then is evident in council minutes of January, 1962. Since then there has been no public evidence it followed that earlier report — a situation which quite well could have led to the open breakdown of this year.

It is certainly difficult to understand why the Board considers it unnecessary to clear the air with a statement.

It is also hard to understand the role of an apologist for the Board.

He has continually rebuffed efforts of some council members to see the report by claiming both the Ontario Hospital Services Commission and the Board do not want the report made public until the Board members are not at liberty to divulge the contents of the report.

Neither argument can stand the test.

It is the residents of the Quinte area who should be the driver's seat — not the Ontario Hospital Services Commission or the Board of Governors.

And the mayor's comment that no member was entitled to release the report brought a comment from an alderman that "these rumors should be stopped." The statement suggests the report has reached more than the board members if speculation as to its contents can be categorically branded as rumor.

Council members are to meet with the hospital board on Monday.

It is hoped the city's elected representatives do not conduct that with hospitality. They are sitting on council with a mandate to look after the interests of every resident of this community.

Their questions at this time should be worthy of this self-imposed responsibility.

Election Possibilities

Where there is smoke there is fire, and whether Premier Robarts' recent comments regarding the next election were misinterpreted or not there are growing signs that Centennial year will see a vote in Ontario.

That a premier should be in the midst of the country's birthday celebrations would be an inconvenience cannot be denied. At the same time it has been customary for one to be held every fourth year and when the psychological considerations in this case as in any other situation, it is best acted upon.

The latest hint of an election in the offing is the retirement of Elmer Sandercock, deputy speaker of the Ontario legislature and MPP for Hastings West.

"If the election is in June, I'll have had 19 years of it," he said.

As Mr. Sandercock looks back on his long and notable career in provincial politics — any three others have served as long at Queen's Park — there is the prospect of an interesting tussle for the succession.

Belleville Mayor Jack Ellis and Dr. R. T. Potter, also of Belleville, are Liberal starters, and there is the possibility of a third candidate, Macdonald Smith, chairman of the public school board.

Among the opposition Liberal party there are also expectations of an election. And it has a lot of catching up to do when viewed against the Conservatives' 56-seat (78 to 22) majority in the legislature. Meanwhile, the leadership issue appears close to being resolved, with the possibility of Liberal House leader Robert Nixon being the party's choice.

Life's Element of Luck

By Sydney J. Harris

Thoughts at Large:

In the calculus of human existence, it seems to me that life is 20 percent what is handed to you at birth, 30 percent what you are, and 50 percent what you make of yourself . . . the final, and often determining 10 percent is sheer luck.

Has it occured to anyone that the real reason for the Biblical myth of Adam — that is, one created and tested all at once — is a policy of men created all together — is to stress the common parenthood of everyone on earth, so that no one could point to "superior" lineage if he goes back far enough?

The high rate of what are euphemistically called "nervous breakdowns" in social and diplomatic circles is best attributed not to the frenzied pace so much as to the kindergarten's dogma that many years ago: "The most exhausting thing in life is being insincere."

Any act can be justified by its proponents; no doubt mankind's worst evils all relied upon to rationalize their deeds, would call them "retroactive birth control."

One cockeyed concomitant of our affluent society is the large number of divorcees who "can't afford" to marry but "can't lose their alimony payments.

The best advice on cigaret smoking was given by Gandhi, who wasn't talking about cigaret smoking at all: "As long as you derive inner help and comfort from anything, you should keep it. If you were to give it up in a mood of self - sacrifice or out of a sense of duty, you would continue to want it back, and that unsatisfied want would make trouble for you. Only give up a thing when you want some other condition so much that the thing or habit is a hindrance for you, or when it seems to interfere with that which is more highly desired."

Everyone is in favor of laws which he cannot imagine himself breaking. The only subject is are those which penalize misdeeds we feel ourselves capable of.

There is no record in history of a nation building up a large store of arms and not using them; if the arms are available, they will be used, one way or another, under one pretext or another.

It is a shallow definition to say, as Harry Truman did, that "politics is the art of governing" — politics is the art of circumventing government on behalf of partisan goals that are cunningly disguised as public needs.

I'd like to "initialize" the extinction of the man who "finalizes" a decision.

Moody Swedes

We have a bad reputation, I know, but I don't think it is as bad as pictured. For instance it is definitely not true that Sweden has the highest suicide rate in the world. I think those statistics were put out by the United States. There is no question that a high standard of living produces problems. I think perhaps our long hours sometimes make us moody. I am convinced they cause some of the alcoholic problems, — Gunilla Bergstrom, family news editor of the Dagens Nyheter (Daily News), Stockholm.

Letter to the Editor

Challenges NDP Insurance Theory

Editor,
The Intelligencer.
Sir,

Mr. Ian Reilly of Belleville quotes Mr. MacDonald of the N.D.P. party as stating, "auto insurance is one area which, it is now proven, can be operated by the government more effectively than by private insurance companies."

It is assumed that the word 'proven' refers to the Saskatchewan Government Insurance Office, (better known as the S.G.I.O.) which started selling insurance around 1944. Mr. MacDonald is either ignoring the facts about this socialistic insurance failure or he chooses not to explode the myth that government "can do it better" than private enterprise. I suggest Mr. MacDonald's statement is purely to catch votes.

Since the old C.C.F. party started selling car insurance in Saskatchewan, their premiums have risen by 1,200%. Their insurance business has suffered a deficit every year since 1959. Their last fiscal year showed an underwriting loss of $1,086,907. In June, 1966, David Boldt, Minister in Charge of the Saskatchewan Plan, said, "If the high accident rate continued, the fund would be in danger of being depleted." Premier Ross Thatcher has stated, "It will almost inevitably mean another sharp increase in rates one year hence." The Financial Post reported, "In the spring of 1965 there and a half million dollars had been quietly pumped into the Saskatchewan scheme and despite this, the government operation is on the verge of financial disaster with its surplus reduced to less than 20% of what was regarded as a safe level". Is this what Mr. MacDonald calls a proven operation?"

Many motorists are unaware that the Saskatchewan Insurance Scheme gets $2.00 out of every $3.00 licence fee. Penalty fees for driving infractions also go into the fund. In addition, much of the insurance overhead cost is charged to other government departments. The highly rated insurance program is being subsidized by several thousand and still they have deficits.

Nationalization of auto insurance simply means the government would have a monopoly in this field. In Saskatchewan, the Government Insurance Office also had a monopoly for fire insurance on schools. When the Liberal government, they permitted the private companies to bid on this insurance. In Saskatoon, the school board called for tenders and the Government Insurance Office promptly reduced their existing premiums from $32,000 to $14,800 when faced with competition. A savings of $17,200 (the taxpayers!) Is Mr. MacDonald suggesting an insurance monopoly for Ontario where no comparisons can be made on premiums? Is this in the public interest?

When a motorist buys car insurance in Saskatchewan, he receives $25,000 liability protection with a $250 deductible clause. Most motorists must buy a insurance policy from a private insurance company so they will have adequate protection. Apparently, if a motorist in the province does not like the government settlement, he must sue the government and pay all court costs, whether he wins or loses.

It is noteworthy that the Saskatchewan Government Insurance operation has been examined and investigated by many different governments. There has not been one province, state or government in the world that has chosen to copy their plan. Premiums are low in Saskatchewan but other areas such as Manitoba, Alberta and Nova Scotia, with the same type traffic density, population, frequency of accidents and court awards, enjoy similar rates provided by private insurance companies.

Those people that think the government can do it "better and cheaper" in the field of private enterprise should look into these facts and other pertinent information about the socialistic compulsory insurance program in Saskatchewan.—George F. Ward, president, Belleville Fire and Casualty Insurance Agents' Association.

Pill Is Boon To Malayans

Windsor Star

Little news items often are most interesting and even important. They sometimes point the way to large developments or great losses in the future. For instances a rubber plantation in Malaysia supplies birth control pills to its female employees. It charges them a small sum but refunds the money at the end of the year, presumably if the women use them successfully.

This isn't intended primarily as a social security measure or impediment to the population explosion. It is an economic one, of keeping the women on the job. It saves the company money and cut down maternity allowances to those who quit work for pregnancy reasons.

Amicable Quiet Separation Aim of Quebec's Gregoire

By GREG CONNOLLEY

Gilles Gregoire, the diminutive federal MP from Lapointe, anticipates he may be president of the Independent Republic of Quebec by 1970.

Mr. Gregoire dislikes being called a separatist — he says this is a misnomer. He prefers to call himself one who works for the independence of Quebec.

But he is campaigning feverishly to take Quebec out of Confederation and he reports that he is making fine progress.

"I am really surprised and gratified at the excellent response we have had to our independence program from the people of Quebec, particularly such people as doctors, lawyers and other professional men."

Mr. Gregoire remains in the House of Commons drawing his $18,000 salary and uses this position as a base for his operations. He has encountered criticism over this but he insists that a man must be free to express his ideas.

Other MPs have declared that it is a terrible thing to have a man in the Commons, drawing federal pay and preaching the break-up of Confederation. Mr. Gregoire admits he gets criticism from colleagues about his ideas but there are no personal attacks involved.

Mr. Gregoire was a Creditiste MP, but left that group after Creditiste leader Real Caouette declared he could not remain active in this party and retain his independence notions.

PARTY PRESSURE

Now, Mr. Gregoire is hard at work establishing constituency organizations in Quebec for the Rallement National party. There are 55 constituencies which have organizations.

The party will hold a national council meeting in February to discuss future plans. Political arrangements have been made for a series of television programs setting forth the views of the Rallement National.

Mr. Gregoire's aim of course is to establish the party thoroughly and then to elect a majority of candidates in the Quebec legislature. Somehow, he would form a government which would opt out of Canada.

If an election comes in Quebec, before June of next year Mr. Gregoire prefers that his party should not run any candidates. He says there should be a minimum period of two years for organization.

Anytime after 1968, his party would be ready to campaign and run in all constituencies. Among the candidates of course would be Mr. Gregoire himself who does not intend to seek re-election to the House of Commons.

The new government established in Quebec as he sees it, would be made up of a president, a cabinet and a national assembly.

He is confident that the Rallement National will have taken power in Quebec by 1970.

Mr. Gregoire insists that his drive for office must be a peaceful and democratic process. "We will not tolerate any violence or fighting or bombs."

Once elected, Mr. Gregoire presumably would become premier of Quebec and then as speedily as possible he would transformed into president of this independent country.

NO WARFARE

He does not expect any interference from Ottawa. "What would Prime Minister Pearson do — send a peace corps to patrol the Quebec-Ontario border?"

Mr. Gregoire says the essence of Quebec independence is that it would raise its own taxes and decide exactly how the money would be spent. "This way we would regain fiscal control that has been lost through invasion of provincial rights by Ottawa.

"The new republic would still be linked very closely to the remaining Canada, Mr. Gregoire says. It is proposed to have a customs union, common transportation via Air Canada and the railways.

Quebec would be prepared to "collaborate" with the armed forces of Canada. The new republic would also remain in the Commonwealth and stay in the NORAD air defence agreement and also in the NATO alliance.

Quebec though would look after its own requirements in health, education, welfare and public works. She would have her own flag — the fleur de lis — and also a new currency unit them.

Mr. Gregoire advises that his nation would be quite willing to share with Canada in diplomatic representation abroad.

In all this drive for independence of Quebec, he sees no problems that cannot be solved amicably. He believes Quebec and Canada could go on living in friendship.

And that is the picture as seen by Gilles Gregoire — the first president of the Republic of Quebec, which may or may not come into being from 1970 onward.

To Your Good Health

13-Year-Old Bothered By Several Allergies

By JOSEPH C. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I am 13 and since I was four I have been allergic to grass plants, especially wild daisies.

This last summer after a trip to the city swimming pool I found that I am allergic to chlorine. I break out in a thick, itchy rash.

What I don't understand is that I lived in the city until several years ago and used city water, which chlorine, and never had been to the pool many times but until this year I never bothered me. Now even in the city water for use does not make my hands and feet break out.

My doctor says there is nothing that can be done except to stay out of city water. Is there anything I can do? — D.T.

I regret to say that your doctor is probably right.

Folks may develop allergic usually are sensitive to more than one thing, but often do not realize what some of the potential allergies are until they are overexposed.

Let's explain in this way — and keep the word "tolerance" in mind. We tolerate various substances within certain limits. You evidently could tolerate chlorine to the extent of using city water.

But then one day you were extra-heavily exposed to chlorine — that day you went swimming, and the rash broke out. Once you had gone past your level of tolerance, you became sensitive even to rather small amounts of chlorine. That is why allergies often behave.

There is this factor, too: Your tolerance is affected to at least some degree by the total amount of exposure, at any one time, to different things to which you are allergic. That is, you may have been exposed to some plants, or to other things to which you are moderately allergic, just before you went swimming. Or it may have been a hot, sticky day, and your skin was hot and sweaty and hence more sensitive.

Allergies do, in a sense, "add up," and so do some other factors, which in large part explanation for your trouble with the chlorine after having, in the past, not been bothered.

I entirely agree that you must avoid chlorine. It will also pay you to avoid anything else to which you know you have an allergy.

Keeping control at a minimum level when viewed (it takes to make you break out) may help you build up moderate tolerances for one level too much — but every little helps and you may in time be able to use the city water for small, moderate amounts without trouble.

It is possible, although this is perhaps a rather long chance, that an allergist can help you, but he will certainly insist that you keep away from chlorine and those other things while he is treating you. I don't say that many allergist can perform miracles, but a little expert would help, so if I were in your shoes I would at least give it a try.

Dear Dr. Molner: As a rule I can write fairly well but when I start to sign my name in front of company, I get very nervous. Why would I do this and how can I overcome it?—Mrs. R.M.

Many have taken handwriting, so I'd assume that this is a nervous rebuff. Why not sit quiet and relax before anyone is around? Or, if you can't write it like, try the next time you sign in public?

Dear Dr. Molner: Is it true that the caffeine in coffee is one of the causes of heart disease? — E.G.

No, although it may bother some hearts if they are diseased. It may be causing a disturbances in the rhythm such as extra beats or fast rate.

Today in History

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Dec. 8, 1965 . . .

William Lyon Mackenzie, chief organizer of the rebellion in Upper Canada, fled 129 years ago today — 1837 — after the lieutenant-governor and the militia had defeated his followers at Montgomery's Tavern, near Toronto. A reward of £1,000 was offered for Mackenzie's capture but he escaped to the United States and later attempted to set up an armed post on Navy Island, above Niagara Falls. The rising was not put down until the end of the following year, when a pardon had been executed in Upper and Lower Canada. Mackenzie returned to Canada in 1849, under an amnesty, but never regained his former standing.

1863 — Lincoln issued a proclamation of amnesty and reconstruction plan after the U.S. Civil War.

1925—Hitler's Mein Kampf was published.

First World War

Fifty years ago today—in 1916—the French battleship Suffren was torpedoed sunk in the Mediterranean with 700 officers and men; the allied navies blockaded the central Greece; an Italian armed factory blew up, causing 50 casualties.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1941—Britain, the United States and the Free French declared war on Japan; Japanese soldiers occupied Shanghai and invaded Hong Kong and upper Malaya; a complete blackout was ordered in British Columbia.

Blue Chip Businessmen Urge Steps Be Taken to Safeguard United States Dollar

WASHINGTON (CP)—A blue-chip private committee of businessmen and academics advises the U.S. government to assure continued confidence in the American dollar by:

1. Fashioning a 1967 budget surplus through spending less and perhaps invoking a temporary tax increase to blunt domestic demand.

2. Unburdening foreign-bound American development capital.

3. Trimming NATO defence costs.

4. Continuing efforts for agreement on "paper gold," a new global reserves unit bolstering gold, the U.S. dollar and other "internationally - acceptable mediums of exchange.

The report by the 200-member Committee for Economic Development is significant because of the stature of its members, who include the likes of former treasury secretary Douglas Dillon.

Last week, the committee urged a "substantial surplus" of more than $3,000,000,000 for the budget to curb inflation it said has been evident since war costs began to bound upward in mid-1965.

Its second report on "the dollar and the world monetary system" cautions that "persistent" deficits in the U.S. balance of payments and heavy drains that in recent years have led to questions at home and abroad about our determination and our ability to maintain the international role of the dollar."

The committee calls its proposed program expansionary as opposed to restrictive, urging free trade among the other things.

The report differs most sharply with government spokesmen on the foreign-investment curbs laid down on a voluntary basis about one year ago to reduce the payments deficit.

It cites figures for the period 1950-1965 to show that the U.S. on balance has earned more than it has shipped abroad in private investment.

The report adds that some nations are in a position to get by without U.S. economic aid and that the U.S. "should seek agreement to a reduction in our forces through the U.S.-British-German study of NATO force levels which President Johnson has initiated."

The committee passes no opinion on how much the Vietnamese war may influence the picture in 1967.

Weston Food Empire Embraces 150 Firms

OTTAWA (CP) — The stunning scope of the Weston-Loblaw food empire was unfolded for the first time in full disclosure of the names of its 150 active companies.

The extent of the great North American complex was made known simultaneously to shareholders and to the Senate-Commons committee investigating living costs.

Biggest surprises: A controlling interest in the Tamblyn drug chain and British Columbia Packers Ltd., largest fish-packing company in Canada.

The sales volume of George Weston Ltd., and Loblaws Co. Ltd. groups, now approaching $3,000,000,000 annually, is said to make them the fifth-largest merchandising in the world.

Their assets are set at $750,000,000, including 1,850 properties and retail outlets, 700 interests in another 1,500 through franchise arrangements, 80 bakeries and 30 warehouses.

TENTACLES SEEN

The empire's tentacles had already been considerably extended this fall in hearings of the parliamentary committee.

The Weston - controlled Loblaw Groceterias Co. has testified that it owns or franchises such food chains as Power Supermarkets Ltd., O.K. Economy Stores Ltd., National Grocers Co., and Kelly Douglas and Co.

Today's revelations include holdings in B.C. Packers and Canada Bread Co. Ltd., such interests as the Dionne Ltd. supermarkets in Montreal, Doulands Dairy Ltd., Zehr's Markets Ltd., and Federal Farms Ltd., produce company in Holland Marsh north of Toronto.

Some other new ones: Epiett Ice Cream Ltd. and Epiett Bakeries Ltd. in Northern Ontario, Lane's Bakeries Ltd., in the Maritimes, Bowes Dairies Ltd. in Toronto, and Universal Coolers Ltd. of Barrie.

After a corporate chart had been tabled this morning before the committee, Weston lawyer Peter Robertson of Toronto told reporters it had been intended to disclose the complete group before long.

DISCLOSE TOTAL

When the committee last month asked Loblaw Groceterias to name companies above and below it on its own chart, Weston executives decided it was the "appropriate time" for disclosure of the entire group.

The steering committee of the prices inquiry will continue hearing Weston executives to testify. It has been reported that 30 per cent of the food industry in Canada is controlled by Weston-Loblaw.

BankerSays Ottawa Sets Poor Example

MONTREAL — Canada's economy no longer needs additional measures restrictive to fight inflation, in view of the indications of uncertainty in the current economic outlook, according to G. Arnold Hart, chairman and president of the Bank of Montreal at the bank's 124th annual meeting.

But, Mr. Hart said, if the government considers that it is necessary to reduce still further the demand pressures in the economy when it think they should take the lead; it certainly does little to assist matters if the government continues to increase its own expenditures.

"One could face the prospect of tax increases and find their purpose in the present situation would deal more meaningful if one did not fear that increases in taxes would be followed by decisions to spend the additional revenue as fast as it is raised."

Shareholders also heard R. D. Mulholland, executive vice - president and chief general manager, report a record year in business reaching new peaks in assets, deposits, loans and profits at Dec. 31.

Calling for effective government leadership in monetary and fiscal policy, Mr. Hart noted that federal, provincial and municipal expenditures on goods and services absorbed for 19 per cent of gross national expenditure, with transfer payments like interest on the public debt and subsidies equivalent to another 13 per cent.

"Yet during the course of this year, all ten provincial governments tabled budgets for increased expenditures and the minister of finance has predicted higher government expenditures than those listed in the spring budget," he stated.

"We can readily agree that it is statistically difficult to reduce expenditures. Nevertheless, surely in the light of the government's insistence in these business cut back outlays, accompanied by the implementation of policies that promised these exhortations, the government should be prepared to do its share."

Mr. Hart added that there are enough indications of uncertainty in the economic picture "to raise serious doubts about the necessity for any further restrictive measures right now."

Mr. Hart said, in considering anti-inflationary restraints, "the monetary authorities take into account the expansion of all financial intermediaries and, indeed, credit conditions generally."

But today, as in similar circumstances as far back as the early 1950's, non-bank financial institutions are able to avoid the restraining influences which have fallen with full impact on the chartered banks.

"The consequent disparities in rates of growth are a direct illustration of the awkwardness of the present system," under which monetary authorities place restriction on the chartered banks sufficiently severe, to compensate for the evasion of the "near-banks".

Against this background, Mr. Hart urged that forthcoming revisions in the Bank Act allow the chartered banks "freedom to compete effectively and on equal terms with other financial intermediaries."

Mr. Mulholland reported record year-end assets for the Bank of Montreal of $5,643,000,000; deposits of $4,905 million; net earnings of $10,900,500; and loans of $2,380 million.

"It is characteristic of a period of monetary stringency that competition for deposit funds is extremely keen, not only among financial institutions but also, and indeed particularly so, on the part of other financial institutions which are not subject to the restrictions which pertain to banking in Canada," he stated.

Second Jurisdictional Dispute Brews Over BC Coal Fields

VICTORIA (CP)—The British Columbia government appears bound for a new clash with the federal government over the question who owns territorial mineral rights to the rich coal fields in the southeastern portion of the province.

The two governments are already fiercely contesting ownership of off-shore petroleum resources, a dispute scheduled to go before the Supreme Court of Canada in February.

Two B.C. firms have applied for coal mining leases covering an area of about 87 square miles in the Flathead River country near Fernie, B.C. but the firms, Fernie Coal Mines Ltd. of Vancouver and Pacific Coal Ltd. of Toronto, applied both to the federal and provincial governments for operating permits.

The area the companies seek to develop is in what is known as Dominion coal lands, B.C. which the federal government may have claim.

The applications have already received provincial cabinet approval and are being processed by the B.C. department of mines and petroleum resources.

By approving the applications, B.C. has asserted its right to the coal reserves. Any action by Ottawa on the applications — rejecting or acceptance—would in the federal government is also claiming rights, say provincial officials.

Neither firm is currently engaged in coal production. Fernie Coal is planning production of 3,000,000 tons over 10 years. Each licence permits 10,000 tons of coal to be mined each year.

The companies are contemplating both open pit and underground mining operations, which are characteristic of existing coal production in the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Co. at Natal, Michel and Sparwood.

Crow's Nest Pass produces most of the coal mined in B.C.

No Licence, Man Jailed For Driving

A 21-year-old Tweed man was sentenced to two months in the county jail by Magistrate T. V. Wills today, after Crown Attorney John Pringle had told the court that it was the accused's second similar offence within a year.

Police said Kehoe, driving a car he had purchased for $25, was attempting to pass on Highway 37 when he struck the rear of another car, causing extensive damage.

The Crown Attorney said the accused was not deserving of any consideration, since he was driving while uninsured and had served 15 days in jail for driving while suspended only a year ago.

Ann Landers

Ann Seems to Prefer Double-domed Answer

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am interested in the letter from the man who wouldn't let his wife see him without a T-shirt. You said it was probably because he was lording it up to feel ashamed of his body and that he should seek psychological help.

Why do you always go after the double-dome answer when the real answer might be very simple — like in my case. When I was young and foolish and in the Navy I got drunk and had a nude woman tattooed on my chest. I was ashamed of that tattoo and refused to take my shirt off in front of my wife for the first three months of our marriage.

ANN LANDERS

Finally I told my doctor because it was making me sick with worry. He advised me to have a "Show and Tell Party"— and got it over with. I did and it worked out great. My wife was retrieved because she knew something was wrong and couldn't figure it out.

I hope the man who wrote to you will take my advice before both he and his wife become nervous wrecks. — P.J.

* * *

DEAR P.J.: Thanks for telling us how you handled your problem. But look, Bub, you had a tattoo to hide. I'm not sure this other fellow is keeping himself covered for that reason. If he is, I hope he takes your advice. If he isn't, I hope he takes mine.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Every year at Christmas and for our anniversary, my husband's sister gives us a cheap present that I can't use anywhere.

What in the world can I do with a plaster of Paris bust of President Johnson that stands 26 inches high and sells for $3.98? Last Christmas Sister sent a picture that you plug in and it glows in the dark. It takes up half the living room wall and is just plain grotesque. My husband says we have to keep it up or she will be offended. I need some help before I flip.— MRS. GARBAGE DUMP.

* * *

DEAR MRS. DUMP: You can't tell a person to stop sending junky gifts, no matter how grotesque.

I say 30 days on display should be enough for the pictures — and anything else you consider out of character in your home.

President Johnson could, of course, be brought back on state occasions, like when Sister comes to call.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Why are people so afraid of mental therapy? Many cities have a mental health centre that operates on a pay-as-you-go basis and the therapists are just waiting to help.

My husband became despondent after a heart attack. His physician recommended mental therapy. My husband said he wasn't nuts and refused to go. I told him that if he wouldn't go, I would go, because I had to have help in order to live with him.

I went to the clinic for help and it relaxed me so much that my husband decided to go. Now we get along together better than ever and we are both enjoying good health. Why don't you tell people? — MRS. E.C.

* * *

DEAR MRS. E.C.: I have told people, Honey — to the point where I've been accused of being a paid flack for the American Psychiatric Association.

I've said it before (like a thousand times), and I'll say it again. Some folks got nothing out of therapy but doctor bills. Others find a whole new life. If a person is miserable, he owes it to himself and his family to find out if he can fit the second category.

Shy Girl Nervous, not Stuck up

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS: I become so nervous before class that I feel ill. As a result I find it difficult to answer in class. Usually I end up blushing and stammering.

It is hard for me to talk to people. Many times they think I am just stuck up. My younger sister can be at ease with almost everyone.

Since I'm in my late teens and will be working I feel it's time I had some self-confidence. — Shy.

DEAR SHY: Well, you aren't stuck up. Next time you are struck dumb, smile! It may surprise you into relaxing when the other fellow smiles back. Hasn't it occurred to you that he may be shy too?

The very best way to learn to talk to people is to start talking, blush or no blush. Practice makes perfect, whether it is playing the piano, or football, or making a friend.

I'm sending you my tencent leaflet "Don't Be Shy", which will suggest a new approach.

* * *

DEAR DORIS: I'm having some kids in for a party. Could you please give me some Christmas-y ideas for games? — Big Sister.

DEAR BIG SISTER: You and other big and little sisters may be glad of these.

(1) Have a snowman-building contest. Supply each pair of contestants with marshmallows, small colored jelly candies and toothpicks.

(2) Pass out sheets of paper with the letters of MERRY CHRISTMAS running down left side. Have a race to fill in a proper name beginning with each letter. (M-stilts, Ice-skiel, R-ingo, etc.)

(3) Divide group into two teams, each holding one side of a tablecloth. Place a feather between teams, each to try to blow it off opposite edge, thus scoring a point. Team making 15 points wins.

(4) Contestants have six turns each at throwing large cotton batting snowballs into a box eight or ten feet away.

Fun prizes Christmas-wrapped add to the merriment. These games also go over with adults, once they have grown up enough not to consider games corny.

* * *

To Home Remedies: What you suggest has no more basis in scientific fact than some of Canada's nineteenth century nostrums, when the newborn was washed with brandy and the navel covered with fresh tallow and sprinkled with nutmeg. Whooping cough was treated by frightening the child or sending it on a long journey.

All a quick remedy does is postpone reliable treatment.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Fish Fillet Casserole

By MARY MOORE

Want a fish dish? Want a fish dish you can prepare in advance from frozen fillets? Say "yes" — for this is going to please working mothers and career girls and budgeters.

This calls for a bed of cooked rice all flavoured with cheese and savory things. When mealtime is near frozen fish fillets, which have been thawing in your absence, are arranged on top and the whole business is put in the oven and baked in 25 mins.

Dinner Menus

THURSDAY

Meat Loaf; Baked Potatoes; Creamed Onions; Cabbage and Celery Salad with Sour Cream Dressing; Baked Caramel Custards; Coffee.

SUNDAY

FISH FILLETS BAKED ON SAVORY RICE
(serves 4)

1 cup plus 2 tbsps. raw long-grain rice
2½ cups boiling water
½ tsp. salt (first amount)
1 cup finely chopped onion
2 tbsps butter or margarine (first amount)
1 cup grated old Cheddar cheese
½ tsp. salt (second amount)
⅛ tsp. pepper
1 tsp. (or more) sesame seeds (optional)
2 lbs. fresh frozen or fresh fish fillets (perch or pickerel or cod or haddock) paprika
about 1½ to 2 tbsps. melted butter or margarine (second amount)

If frozen fish fillets are being used put them out at room temperature to thaw.

Measure the rice into a heavy saucepan with tight-fitting cover, add boiling water and ¾ tsp. salt (first amount), bring to boil, cover, turn off heat for 5 mins. Turn on heat as low as possible and cook 25 mins., longer until all water is absorbed and rice is tender. Meanwhile gently saute onion in butter (first amount) until transparent but not brown. When rice is tender gently mix into it the sauteed onion, grated cheese, ¼ tsp. salt (second amount), pepper and sesame seeds (if used). Turn into large shallow baking dish. (If you are making this in advance store it at this stage in refrigerator until mealtime.) When mealtime arrives arrange fish fillets, slightly overlapping, over bed of prepared rice. Brush tops of fish with melted butter or margarine, (second amount), sprinkle with paprika and bake at 375 deg. Fahr. about 25 to 30 mins., or until when fish is tested with tip of knife or fork it flakes easily. Serve with lemon slices with a green vegetable such as shredded green beans or broccoli.

Note: Apple Crisp could be made in advance and put into the oven 15 mins. ahead of the fish dish and would be baked when dessert time arrives.

VON Board Plans Annual Dinner Meet

The VON Board of Management held its regular monthly meeting in November at the United Committee Services building. A smaller number of members than usual attended the meeting.

After routine reports, the president, Mrs. R. L. Smith, commented on the annual dinner and business meeting scheduled for early February.

Miss Catharine Maddaford, regional supervisor, is to be guest speaker. Mrs. E. H. Hall discussed to date, the progress which has been made by the "Meals-On-Wheels" committee that has been organized in Belleville.

Miss Dorothy Connor's report on nursing activities indicated a slight rise in activities in this area. Forty-four visits were made during October outside the city limits.

During the month staff members discussed VON work with women from Bridge Street United Church and the Salvation Army.

The Victorian Order of Nurses is a participating member of the Belleville United Appeal.

WASHING FOAM RUBBER PILLOWS

Dear Girls: A unique device for helping to wash foam rubber pillows thoroughly by hand is a plumber's plunger.

Use a fairly deep tubful of warm water with plenty of suds, and with the pillow pressed against the bottom of the tub, use the plunger to squish the soapy water through the pillow.

If by any chance your pillow does not have a material cover, then place it in a pillow case and baste the open end closed before attempting to wash it.

Make sure the pillow is thoroughly rinsed by forcing plenty of clear water through it, then squeeze out all the excess water gently, but firmly.

Pressing and patting with a couple of Turkish towels as you would a heavy sweater, will help to speed up the drying time.

Finally, hang the pillow out on the line by the corners of its case, on a breezy day if possible, and let nature finish the job of drying and freshening it.

You may well have to allow more than a day for it to dry completely, because, one must never, not even hardly ever, try to dry foam rubber in the dryer.—Susanna.

(If you have any hints for running a successful household — or any problems — write to Susanna, care of this newspaper. A self-addressed stamped envelope should be enclosed when requesting pamphlets.)

Specialists Say No Guarantee No Side Effects From the Pill

TORONTO (CP)—Four medical specialists warned Wednesday there is no guarantee that women will not suffer side effects in taking birth control pills or estrogen hormones.

Dr. Samuel Norris, one of a panel of four doctors speaking to the Mount Sinai Hospital women's auxiliary, said that taking any drug is a calculated risk, even such simple drugs as headache compounds.

Dr. Norris, a gynecologist and obstetrician, said the most common headache tablets can produce a gastric hemorrhage in some persons.

Dr. A. J. L. Solway, a heart specialist, admitted he prescribed estrogen but "only when requested by a patient." He threw doubt on a popular belief that estrogen could produce youthfulness in women.

Dr. Alfred Margulies, a psychiatrist, said he was concerned about the possibility that women may start to use the estrogen hormones as a crutch in a loveless and useless pursuit of eternal youth.

Such attitudes could bring many women to the psychiatrist's door, he said.

On birth control pills, Dr. Margulies said one of the side effects is depression, but few women would suffer depression to a degree they require a psychiatrist's treatment.

Dr. Sidney Tobin, gynecologist and obstetrician, describe side effects of birth control pills as being "irritating, aggravating but not life threatening."

He said research has not been able to prove or disprove any relationship between the pills and blood clots in the lungs, a condition blamed in the death of a few young women taking birth control pills.

Questioned on whether estrogen can produce cancer, Dr. Tobin said that 7,000,000 women studied over 30 years showed there was no incidence of pelvic or breast cancer due to use of the hormone.

He warned, however, that women who use hormones should not use the pills during four or five days each month.

At this time it was decided that work on layettes, quilts and other useful articles would be needed in future bales.

The secretary was asked to write and get information on Christmas and western bales. The secretary of the "Family Life and Pre-school Branch" read a paper re the aims and information on management. A number of items followed including an invitation to a family fair at Marmora. After a short discussion it was decided that a substantial sum be pid the W.A. on the extension fund.

The regular portion of the meeting was closed by Mr. Stewart.

There was a demonstration given on what can be made from common place articles around the home, after which lunch was served.

WEDDING

Mumby – Dysart

Kingdom Hall of the Jehovah's Witnesses in Belleville was the scene of the marriage on Dec. 3, 1966, of Dorothy Mae, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Dysart of Duncan, B.C. and Gerald Eric Mumby, son of Mrs. Clara Mumby, R.R. 1, Belleville and the late Mr. J. A. Mumby. Mr. Robert Joy performed the ceremony and an orchestra provided wedding music.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a strapless, street-length gown in satin with a lace overblouse and three-quarter length sleeves. A net over-skirt was attached to a satin belt. Her white veil was gathered to a band of white daisies and she carried a bouquet of red roses.

George Mumby of Georgetown, Ont., was groomsman and the ushers were Roy Lenard and Leslie Lafferty.

At the wedding reception held at the Kiwanis Centre the bride's mother received the guests wearing a turquoise dress trimmed with beading, and a corsage of white 'mums. To assist, the bridegroom's mother chose a knitted suit in navy blue with pink embroidery on the jacket and a corsage of pink and white 'mums.

For her wedding trip to Mexico the bride chose a turquoise dress, white and black accessories, a purple coat and a corsage of white 'mums. While in Mexico City the couple will attend the district assembly of the Jehovah's Witnesses. On their return they will live in Belleville.
